Joe—Why is it you won't marry me?

Jane—Now think real hard.

Joe—I can't think.

Jane—That's the reason!

Only Two Pockets

The manager discovered one morning that he had left his penknife at home. He tried vainly to borrow one from the clerks.

Finally, the office boy put his hand in his pocket and pulled out a rather battered knife.

"How is it," said the manager, looking at the boy with admiration, "that you alone of my staff have a pocket knife with you?"

"Don't know, sir," replied the boy, "unless it's that my wages are so low that I can't afford more than one pair of trousers."

FDR Must Take Helm Again To Achieve National Unity

Administration, Congress Must Get Tough in Throttling Various Pressure Groups Seeking Advantages for Chosen Few.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

In the next few weeks decisions will be reached which will affect the length of the war and they will not be made on the military fronts. They will be made in small town offices, leaning across fences, down at the post office or the court house, on front stoops, at the Elks club, in the lodge rooms and after meetin's of one kind or another in every middlesex, village and farm in the country.

They will result from conversations between the congressmen, home to mend their 1944 fences, and their constituents. The nation faces a crisis on the home front. Unless it is solved in the common sense American way, it is going to prolong the war months, and perhaps longer. Its presence has already delayed the capitulation of Italy, according to some of the more pessimistic pessimists around Washington.

As success on the battlefront grows, the efforts of those trying to support a total war are being defeated on the home front.

Two Events

Two events mark the low in unified effort for victory. One was when a reporter, with no evil innuendo in his mind as far as I know (and I know the man), asked the President if he would make any comment for background on the statement that although things were going well on the battlefront, they were not going so well on the administration front (meaning home front). The President replied with a castigation of the press and radio. Some of their representatives, he said, were encouraging governmental friction. He could have given a blasting, rip-roaring answer which would have encouraged the country. As it was, he made some of the men whose job it is to interpret the news to the country, too mad to be objective.

The second event which marked the nadir in shoulder-to-shoulder effort on the home front was when congress came within an eyelash of killing the use of any and all subsidies which would have broken a wide hole in the anti-inflation dam. Let me state immediately that I do not believe that subsidies is the panacea for our inflation ills, but to have wiped them out completely at that time would have meant jerking the one, wobbling support we did have right out from under the price-control structure.

Since then the President has perked up and taken a positive stand and congress on second thought modified its berserk mood and evolved a compromise.

Now it is up to the people. If the congressmen are convinced that they can afford to go national and not be defeated a year from November; if they are convinced that the people will support their votes if they vote for what they think the country needs and not to suit the pressure groups that sit on their desks all day, the crisis will pass.

Crack-Down Necessary

The objectives are pretty clear. In the first place, the President has got to take the helm again. He has got to crack down. He has got to see that dissensions do not break out. He has got to see to it that the secretary of the treasury comes out with a clear-cut tax and savings program which will absorb the inflation dollars. Congress will have to support that program.

The pressure groups whose purpose it is to get their members more money for products or wages, will have to be throttled. This means that the administration has to be tough. Congress will have to have courage. The people will have to support their elected representatives.

The vast majority of Americans are perfectly willing to carry their share of the load. They are not willing to make sacrifices if they believe someone else is getting the benefit and shirking their share. The farmer will work the skin off his hands and take a meager reward if it's for the good of the country and the boy he spared to join the army. But not if somebody tells him the workman is making all the money at an easy job.

The workman will face higher living costs—and he certainly has to, without a wage raise, until somebody comes along and tells him the farmer is getting rich and that is why his food costs go up. And so on.

The reason why I believe this is because I receive letters like the following:

> "My husband is 67 years old —working and making $38.00 a week when tax is taken out. We are buying two war bonds each month—but we have a son in the navy—and one designing aviation tools in a plant in Atlanta. Perhaps he, too, will soon be in the service, though married he has no children—yet.
> "We are like many—trying to carry our end of the war effort—but we have many friends and relatives who though making hundreds a month don't buy a bond. These same people went through the depression—with jobs—while we took it the hard way. Our two boys suffered from malnutrition during those years.
> "Don't you think this makes a difference in point of view? You see we suffered — making us think. My boys bought war bonds right from the start. Their dad and I feel the need of a decent world to live in, too, for we had to live in a deprived world for several years. It gave us a different slant on life. We want a decent world for our children and grandchildren—and other people's children.
> "Selfishness and greed will have to go—if we are to have that decent world."

If a congressman's constituents talk to him that way, we won't have much more trouble on the home front. Hitler will have to begin worrying again.

Diary of a Broadcaster

The Washington atmosphere affects strangers who tarry long within the shadow of the Washington monument or the Capitol dome. It affects not only the so-called higher species but the citizens of cat-and-dogdom as well. Today, I came down town at an odd hour—an interesting hour: I was a little later than usual. The war workers and the boarding-house cats and the alley pups, which wait until the workers are out of the way, had vanished on their various duties; only an indolent and disreputable Tom still paused to massage its hips against a garbage can, and a yellowish part-fox terrier, certainly part, and from his brush, certainly more fox than terrier, lay in the exact center of the alley where anything that ran down the middle gutter would eventually reach him.

These creatures sniff at protocol and treat it as they do anything else they sniff at. But that hour is also the hour of the pet parade, for the handsome creatures that strain at leashes. The most unhappy person I meet at this bewitching hour is a thin little relic of a butler, who is literally torn between losing his dignity and his grip on one of the embassy great danes.

No men like to walk dogs. All dogs like to walk men. But one gentleman dog nurse dared me to stare him down. He was being led by a stiff-legged aristocrat, a young wired-haired fox, as white and starched as if his proud mamma prepared him for a birthday party. Then there was the sad-eyed cocker, who dropped its eyes, sadder still when it realized I had noted that its mistress was wearing a far too informal house dress for polite street wear.

And then, there was the little one-by-five, it undulated along with a rather forced smile. It was a dachshund and probably anti-Nazi. It was hustling along like a caterpillar in high gear, trotting with its hind legs, and hopping with its little turtle-paws in front.

I even met a feline on a leash, a great big tortoiseshell Thomas—it looked as if it was safer that way for the rest of us—all I could think of was "tiger, tiger, burning bright in the jungle of the night."

THESE pot holders proved to be "best sellers" at a bazaar. They were made by a group of women who resolved not to produce a single holder in a dull color combination. That is probably the secret of their success.

Most of the materials came from scrap bags but a few pennies were spent for bias bindings and backing to accent tones in the wide assortment of prints. Pieces of cotton flannel or sheet wadding were used for interlining. The material was cut six inches square and the corners rounded so that the machine binder could be used for the edges. The backing, interlining and top were basted together before quilting them by stitching across from side to side and then from corner to corner. A loop hanger was stitched in with the binding.

Vegetable Canning Guide

Non-Acid Vegetables

Are you putting up many greens and vegetables from your Victory garden this year? In other years, the first question we asked after that, was, do you have a pressure cooker?

You see, a pressure cooker is the safest, most desirable method of putting up vegetables which are non-acid. The reason: In most soil there is a deadly germ called Botulinus which attaches itself to vegetables in the non-acid class, to which most of them belong. Mr. Botulinus is hard to destroy except by extreme heat—which the pressure cooker can give as most vegetables are processed at an above-boiling point, 240 degrees Fahrenheit.

Let me go on record as saying use the pressure cooker if you possibly can. Chances of your being able to buy one are slim, but perhaps there's a neighbor or friend or a local canning center which will give you the means of having one.

If it's absolutely impossible to obtain a pressure cooker, do non-acid vegetables by the boiling water bath. It takes much longer to process the vegetables, but don't skimp a minute of it, if you would be successful.

Processing Foods

Processing times have been carefully tested and cannot be shortened. Follow them to the letter to get results. Processing may be done in various ways, and it is important to select the one best suited to the food you are putting up.

A pressure cooker gives you the greatest degree of safety in canning non-acid vegetables for it permits the greatest degree of heat to penetrate the jar and thus destroy botulinus. To use the pressure cooker, prepare the product, precook it and pack carefully in sterilized jars. Adjust cap. Prepare pressure cooker by pouring hot water into the bottom of the cooker up to the level of the rack. Place filled jars on rack, allowing for sufficient circulation of water around them. Be sure jars do not touch.

Place top on pressure cooker and clamp on tightly. Leave pet cock open 7-10 minutes to exhaust all steam in cooker, otherwise you will not get correct pressure. After all steam is exhausted, close pet-cock and let pressure mount to desired degree, then turn down heat, and maintain pressure exactly or liquid will be drained from jars if pressure is allowed to fluctuate.

When processing time is up, remove cooker from heat, let pressure reach zero, then remove lid, so steam does not hit you when cooker is opened. Set jars on several thickness of cloth or paper, and let cool, without inverting.

Hot Water Bath.

A large, deep vessel with a tight-fitting cover is best for making this type of canner. Use a big kettle, a lard can, a deep well cooker with galvanized wire or rack at the bottom of it to hold the jars one-half inch from the bottom of the canner. Before putting jars in canner, have water boiling briskly. If the jars lower the temperature and it stops boiling when they're submerged, do not count processing time until the water boils.

It's especially important to make certain there's plenty of water in the boiling water bath. There should be enough to come two inches above the jars. If water boils out during processing, add some boiling water from a teakettle on the range.

Canning Procedure.

Use the table given at the head of this column for guiding you in precooking and processing vegetables. The ideal way of proceeding with your canning is as follows:

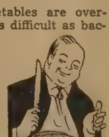
First, before you even start canning, get jars ready by washing them in hot soapy suds and scalding them. Check for nicks, cracks and sharp edges on jars, to see that they are perfect. Prepare jars ahead of time and invert them on several thicknesses of clean towel near your stove so that you have them on hand when canning.

Prepare vegetables by washing thoroughly and then cutting or preparing as for table. Precook, according to table. Pack in sterile jars and process for required time.

Set jars to cool, after processing on several thicknesses of towel or newspaper, away from drafts. Let cool for 24 hours. If using a self-sealing lid with screw band, remove screw band and use it over again. Test the jars by tapping gently on lid. If you get a high ringing note, the jar is sealed and may be stored.

Reasons for Spoilage.

Spoilage reasons are many and may be traced to any part of the canning procedure. Sometimes it is easier to avoid failures if you know what causes certain types of spoilage.



If fruit or vegetables are over-ripe, sterilization is difficult as bacteria may have developed to a degree which it is not possible to arrest. Use only produce in prime condition as you get out of your jars what you put in them.

Washing all vegetables and fruits before working will get rid of bacteria which cling in the soil.

Unclean jars can work havoc with your canning effort. Best remedy for this is washing jars thoroughly in clean soapy suds and then scalding, and laying the jars inverted on several thicknesses of clean towel until ready to use. Lids should also be sterilized.

Sealing.

Seal the cap according to the principle on which it was made. A self-sealing cap seals by vacuum created by the cooling of the contents of the jar, and the screw band does not need tightening after processing. Zinc caps and rubber bands should be tightened.

Can for Health.

Fruits and vegetables are known to be a rich source of health-giving vitamins and minerals. Vitamin A for example, so extremely essential to children and adults alike, is found in large quantities of certain fruits and vegetables. Vitamin A promotes growth; it helps to prevent eye diseases; it helps guard against infections; it helps prevent night blindness; it aids in the normal functioning of glands; it increases the life span. From experimental studies it appears that if a child, during the years from 3 to 10 is fed very large amounts of vitamin A, he will be less susceptible to the usual children's diseases. A growing child requires 3,000 International Units of vitamin A daily; an adult 6,000 to 8,000 daily.

Lynn Says:

What to Do: Make rationing work by using fresh fruits and vegetables for canned whenever possible. To save money, use seasonal produce generously.

In main dishes that call for tomatoes or tomato juice, use fresh tomatoes when in season, put up home canned foods, or substitute brown gravy.

Save and store excess water from vegetables in a covered container and use for flavoring soups, stews and gravies.

Omit chili sauce and catsup in recipes unless you have the home-canned variety. Chopped green pepper and relishes add pep to salads and sandwich fillings without taking ration points.

Cooked dressings or sour cream dressings will help save your using too much oil for salad dressings.

Save every ounce of extra fat from meat. Use it for baking or frying, or give it to the butcher.

The flapper of not-so-many years back didn't start the vogue for painted fingernails. The real pioneer in that field was Cleopatra. Aspasia, girl friend of Pericles, also tinted her nails. As a matter of fact, a husband 2,300 years ago "raised Ned" with his wife because she used cosmetics so extravagantly.

Whoever it is that gets credit for scolding girls for powdering their noses in public, is just an interloper. Ovid said many centuries ago: "A statue is never shown until it is finished."

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO HOME CANNERS

The Glass Top Seal Fruit Jar Cap for Home Canning was developed as a Wartime product to conserve metal. It consists of a Metal Band, Glass Lid and Rubber Ring.

Because of the difference in the nature of these three materials this Cap must be used differently from any other fruit jar cap. If used properly it will give excellent results. If not used properly, results will be bad, including failure to seal and breakage of jars. Following are simple instructions for use of the Glass Top Seal Cap and must be followed carefully.

1. Do NOT use in Oven Canning.

2. If processing, (cooking in jar), leave 1 inch space in top of jar. If using open kettle, leave ½ inch space in top of jar.

3. Fit rubber around projection on bottom side of lid.

4. Place lid so rubber lies between lid and top edge of jar.

5. Turn bands tight, then loosen slightly (about ¼ turn). Bands must fit loosely during processing (cooking). This is Important and must be done to insure best results. If using Open Kettle, screw bands tight as soon as jar is filled.

6. After processing, screw bands tight to complete seal. Remove bands 12 hours after canning.

ros, not for we black negroes." Then I asked him how he would like to have my God. Then we prayed for God to take his soul, and he looked at me with tears streaming down his face, and smiled and said: "Youse are the whitest man I ever knew, because your God has saved my soul." Then he died saying, "Someday I'll meet you on the other shore where there wont be any gun firing to disturb our talk," and died.

Then I realided that I was sitting in the open in range of machine gun fire. My salvation is a salvation that doesn't fear gunfire, because my Lord died a harder death than gun-fire to save me, and if needs be, I will die to tell someone else how God saved my soul, and help them to be a christian, because God will look after me as long as I do this for Him. Pray that I may have more courage to serve my Lord. .Three weeks later officer Maj. Bullock, the same one that told me not to go to the negro, was shot by a sniper and I went to his side and he said,: 'Sgt, if I had your God as mine, I could die without fear; and then he began praying for salvation, and finally recieved it; then he said: "When you return to Oregon go to see my mother and dad and tell her I finally accepted her God, and will meet her on the shore." When I returned yesterday I went straight to her home, to find an invalid lady and an old man 93 years old, living alone, and I sat on the side of the bed of Major Bullock's mother, and put my arms around her and said: "I have a message for you from your son." Then I told her, her son had accepted Christ, and died sayng: "Tell her I'll meet her on the other shore," then she said: "Lay me down for I can die in peace after my prayers have been answered. I have prayed fifty years for his salvation," Then one hour and eight minutes later, she died and went home to be with her God and the Major.

Preacher, these experiences is why I can keep going after I have give out and why I can go to the battle front without fear of death because death would be sweet to me. So pray for me in every prayer, that I might always stay true and close to my God, and be stronger and more courageous for lost souls, because I will leave soon again for the other side. So pray for me because I need every prayer possible.

Preacher if you out live me, and I die in the United States, I want you to preach my funeral and them to sing: "Just As I Am," because they were singing it when I was baptised eight years ago, July 27th 1935. So pray for me and write a long letter to help me keep my courage up.

A Greatful Christian,
Sgt. L. Z. Dickey, 34397226

P. S. Hoping to hear from you and other christian friends. God bless and keep us true at any cost. A christian Brother.

SOMETIMES—
ON SOME CALLS—
THE LONG DISTANCE
OPERATOR WILL SAY:

"Please limit your call to 5 minutes... Others are waiting"

Many Long Distance calls go through about as fast as ever.

But sometimes there's an extra-heavy rush on certain circuits—especially to and from war-busy places.

Whenever that happens, the operator will ask you to limit your Long Distance calls to 5 minutes.

The idea is to give everybody a fair share of the wires. That gets to be more and more important every day.

Letter to a P.O.W.

WILL YOU WRITE A LETTER to a Prisoner of War . . . tonight?

Maybe he's one of Jimmie Doolittle's boys. Perhaps he was left behind when Bataan fell. Anyway, he's an American, and he hasn't had a letter in a long, long time.

And when you sit down to write, tell him why you didn't buy your share of War Bonds last pay day.

"Dear Joe," you might say, "the old topcoat was getting kind of threadbare, so I . . ."

No, cross it out. Joe might not understand about the topcoat, especially if he's shivering in a damp Japanese cell.

Let's try again. "Dear Joe, I've been working pretty hard and haven't had a vacation in over a year, so . . ."

Hell, better cross that out, too. They don't ever get vacations where Joe's staying.

Well, what are you waiting for? Go ahead, write the letter to Joe. Try to write it, anyhow.

But mister, if somehow you find you can't finish that letter, will you at least, do this for Joe? Will you up the amount of money you're putting into War Bonds and keep buying your share from here on in?

We forgot to mention last week: J. Easterling being a 'copper'. Yep, a member of the Alabama High-ay Patrol. Looks dog-gone good in uniform, too. Seems like we heard at he is stationed somewhere over ound Marion or some other foreign untry.

We forgot to mention last week: C. Ross down at the Dam, bring-g in that peculiar hen's egg. Look- for all the world like it had a old patch" on it. Just like you did ce on a punctured inner tube. One the queerest we had ever seen.

We forgot to mention last week: mebody asked one of our mer-ants the other day if he ever cut mself shaving. He studied for a oment and rubbed his fuzzy chin d said, "No, I don't think so. I have en shaving now for two years, and haven't cut myself either time."

An Apology—Two weeks ago the iter listed the names of the stores Chilton County selling War Stamps he Yellow Front Store in Clanton as left off, for which our most mble apologies are offered to the anagement of this store. When the llow Front Store was visited in the terest of the sale of these stamps e manager was out of town, so the licitor did not ask if the store was eady selling these stamps. We are ry sorry.—Patterson Hicks, Acting unty Chairman.

Football Schedule Announced For 1943 Season

The Chilton County High School "Tigers" will certainly put out an unknown product in the way of a football team come this football season. Graduation and the armed forces of Uncle Sam took all of last year's team and all except three boys of the entire squad. Coach Porch had a very short training period in the spring, and his material was young, light, and wholly inexperienced. He will have to start from the ground to build a team this year.. Chilton has won twenty-two ball games without a loss, but Coach Porch is putting the fans on notice here and now, that they may as well prepare themselves for some bad news. With such boys as Kellum, Payton, Davenport, E. Baker, Culp, Cooper, Edwards, Davis, and several others gone to the service, and eleven of the first team graduating last spring, it is easily seen that he has a job before him. These boys named had one to two years more of football. Had they returned it would not have been so difficult to build an other winning team. These are war times and the Chilton "Tigers" are glad to have contributed these fine boys to the great task of settling this war mess throughout the world.

PILOT CLUB RECEIVES REPORT FROM HEADQUARTERS CANCELLING CONVENTION

The following publicity was released recently to all Pilot Clubs:

"At the Executive Board meeting of Pilot Club International held in Macon, Ga., June 15th, it was announced the usual convention of this organization had been cancelled in compliance with requests of ODT. After reviewng the year's work, the Executive Board released the following figures:

Amount of Bonds purchased by the membership, $1,131,454.10; Amount purchased by local clubs: $12,233.70; Bonds purchased by Pilot International: $5,000.00. 91 per cent of the membership is buying Bonds systematically.

Amount of hours devoted to civilian defense and war service: 121,790. This work has been carried on in addition to the usual club program of service. Announcement was made of Program plans for the new year covering the Battle on the Home Front; Education on International Relations and Peace Planning and Post-War problems. The budget for the new year includes the purchase of $5,000.00 worth of war bonds.

Nationwide Molly Pitcher Tag Day

Washington, D. C.—On August 4th Molly Pitcher is stepping out of the pages of American history to sell War Bonds and Stamps. The gal who carried water to thirsty soldiers during the blistering Revolutionary Battle of Monmouth and took over her husband's cannon when he was wounded, has long been a symbol of the heroism of American women.

FILL THE PITCHER WITH BONDS AND STAMPS ON MOLLY PITCHER DAY

In her honor, brigades of modern Molly Pitchers will take their stands on nation-wide Molly Pitcher Day at street corners, building entrances, and in public places to sell the bonds and stamps that back up our modern fighting men.

A red-white-and-blue Molly Pitcher Tag will be given to everyone who purchases a bond or stamp on that day. Members of the American Legion Auxiliary, and of the Independent Food Distributors Council unit of Molly Pitchers, will aid and augment local Women's War Savings Staffs to make up the volunteer sales force. They will use water pitchers to hold their supplies of tags and War Stamps. The slogan on the tags will read "Fill the Pitcher with Bonds and Stamps on Molly Pitcher Day," and the goal of the sales force will be to "tag" the total population.

About 100 years ago the governing authorities in New York set a "ceiling" price on bread at 12½ cents per 38-ounce loaf.

Molly Pitcher Tag Day, August 4

The modern Molly Pitcher will greet you throughout the nation on August 4th when brigades of Mollys will tag every buyer of War Bonds and Stamps. They will carry on the tradition of the Revolutionary War heroine who has gone down in history because she aided her fighters at the battle of Monmouth in 1778.

Clanton To Be Host To FFA Teachers

Vocational Agriculture teachers of six Central Alabama Counties will attend a two-day wartime conference here on August 5th and 6th.

Local teachers attending will be J. H. Jackson, Clanton; J. H. Camp, Isabella; and H. H. Denson, Jemison.

The purpose of the meeting will be for planning a wartime program of vocational agriculture in Alabama. Major emphasis will be placed on ways ond means of producing enough food and feed to meet the needs of the war effort.

After the teachers return, they will work out a definite "plan of action" for their community to follow in producing more food and feed war crops for another.

In making plans for the year, the following groups will be included. In-school group which is the boys studying vocational agriculture; the out-of- school group which includes the adult farmer program and the "Rural War Production Program," both of which tde teacher of vocational agriculture is responsible for.

Fourteen teachers from the following counties will be represented at this particular meeting: Chilton, Autauga, Bibb, Coosa, Shelby and Talladega.

W. M. Polk To Run For County Treasurer

An interview Tuesday morning at the office of W. M. Polk, County Treasurer, disclosed that he would be a candidate for re-election to that office in the elections next spring.

Mr. Polk was appointed to the office by Governor Sparks early this year upon the resignation of J. E. Easterling who was serving his second term as Treasurer at the time.

Mr. Polk has been in automobile business in Clanton for many years, has scores of friends in the county and is an able businessman. He promised a full statement at a later date.

REVIVALS

May we ask for your earnest prayers, and if posible, your presence in the following revivals. Each revival will begin on date mentioned and continue for one week:

Indian Grave—First Sunday in Aug. the pastor preaching.

Mt. Carmel (Adams)—Second Sunday in August, the pastor preaching.

Maplesville—Third Sunday in Aug. the Rev Carey Cox preaching—J. D. Hopper, Pastor.

The sweet potato is considered the original potato; legend says that Columbus discovered it along with America.

Pattillo Named County War Bond Chairman

Mr. J. C. Pattillo, Circuit Clerk of Chilton County, has been appointed executive chairman of a county wide committee to boost the sale of War Bonds and Stamps.

This is quite a responsibility and Mr. Pattillo will need the cooperation of every man and woman in the county.

Chilton County made a most excellent record in the sale of bonds during the fiscal year July 1, 1942 to June 30, 1943. This was due to the excellent work of Judge Reynolds, Mr. Frank Callen and a number of other people through-out the county..

The women who helped with the bond sales in April should be especially mentioned. These good women have not failed to respond every time they have been called upon to assist with the sale of Bonds and Stamps.

Mr. Pattillo assumes his new duties beginning August First, and with the big sale of Bonds coming off in Sept., your cooperation will be solicited and much appreciated.

County Wide Revival To Be Held At Court House

Rev. Hardin Pearson, Evangelist, and Rev. Hyman Atchison, Song Leader

Beginning Sunday, August 8th, Rev Hardin Pearson, Evangelist of Macon Georgia, assisted by Rev. Hyman Atchison as song leader, will begin a county-wide revival at the courthouse. The first service will be held at 3:00 o'clock P. M., and the hours throughout the week will be 8:30 each evening.

Rev. Pearson is no stranger in this county, he having preached at Mulberry some months ago, and closed a most successful revival at Maplesville a few weeks ago, also one at Sardis.

These men of God are asking the co- operation of the pastors and churches of the county in their efforts to call men back to God and the Church. Also the singers are invited to assist in the choir.

DR. PARRISH AGAIN POSTPONES VACCINATION DATES FOR DOGS

Dr. W. L. Parrish informed the News Wednesday morning that the vaccine necessary for the vaccination of dogs had not arrived and exact dates could not be determined now.

Watch your weekly paper and when the vaccine arrives dates for having your dog vaccinated will be published.

FIRST OPEN COTTON

Mr. G. C. Vance of Clanton Route 3, brought in the first open cotton of the season Wednesday morning. Mr. Vance was especially interested in getting the news in this issue so that his son, Bernice, who is with the armed forces somewhere in the Pacific, could see it. Even though thousands of miles from home and at war, Bernice is still interested in Chilton County crops.

THE CLANTON CHURCH OF CHRIST

The regular preaching days of this congregation have been changed from the second and fourth Lord's Days to the First and Third Lord's Days.

Program of services for Sunday, August 1st:

10 a. m. Bible Study..

11 a. m. Sermon—"The Righteousness that Exceeds."

7:45 p. m. Study in the Second Corinthian Letter.

You are cordially invited to be present wth us at every service.

NO WHOOPSNG COUGH HERE

The 261 whooping cough cases reported last month from this state included none from Chilton County, the State Department of Health announced today. One or more cases were reported from 33 of the 67 counties.

Another war 'casualty' is the wooden fruit or vegetable container. Salvage and re-use of containers and top is necessary if there are to be enough for next year's crops. The new slogan is: Crate the Germans and box the Japs.

Faculty Named For Chilton County High

The faculty for the Chilton County High School, Clanton has been completed for this school year. Though there is a great turn-over in teaching personnel this year, the local high school is very fortunate in retaining nearly all of its faculty. Only two teachers new to Clanton and this school will be found at work when school opens August 31.

The teachers, their home addresses, and the subjects they will teach are:

H. M. Adair, New York City, Math
Miss Elizabeth Barton, Jonesboro, Ark., English
Miss Lois Black, Montgomery, Math.
John F. Burton, Clanton, Band Dir.
Mrs. Erle Ellis, Clanton, Music
Mrs. Miriam B. Gerald, Librarian
Miss Bonnie Clyde Griffin, Clanton English
J. H. Jackson, Clanton, Agriculture
Mrs. Edna G. Kinney, Clanton, Eng.

Molly Pitcher Day Observed August 7th.

Alabama and Chilton County, along with the rest of the nation, will honor Revolutionary War heroine Molly Pitcher, August 7 with a special Molly Pitcher War Saving Stamp Day.

On that day members of the National Defense Council of the American Legion Auxiliary, in cooperation with the Women's Division of the War Savings Staff, will sell stamps throughout the state.

Every purchaser of a stamp will receive a tag with a picture of Molly Pitcher, the heroine of the Battle of Monmouth.

It was Molly Pitcher, who under a blazing sun that beat on the field of battle at Monmouth, went back and fourth carryng pitchers of well-water to the Revolutionary soldiers who fought there that day.

Then when her husband fell at his cannon she took his place and fired his gun until the battle was won. For heroism she was given a commission of Sergeant in the Army, by General George Washington.

Modern Molly Pitchers serve their fighting men on production lines, in Red Cross work, in carrying on civilian activities, and by buying and selling War Bonds and Stamps.

August 7, the women of America will rally on the street corners, at building and factory entrances, rail road stations, grocery, drug and department stores, bus terminals, in hotel lobbieh—everywhere people gather—to ask Americans to buy extra war stamps and bonds in honor of Molly Pitcher, heroine of the first great American war.

Their goal will be to tag everyone in town by the end of the day.

The following members of the Womens' Division will serve with Mrs. Hugh Jones as chairman:

Co-chairmen: Mesdames Julius Burnett, Omar Reynolds, John D. Mullins, Frank Scott, Jack Hayes, Dick Hayes, Oscar Jones, and L. C. Warr.

A tramp asked the proprietor of a circus for a job. He was informed that he could become a lion-tamer—that all he had to do was to walk into the cage and make the lions eat out of his hand. He was assured that the whole secret was in forcing the lions to believe he wasn't afraid of them.

After gazing thoughtfully at the big cats a moment the tramp replied, "No, I don't think I'll take the job. I couldn't be so deceitful."

'Food Will Win the War' —And Maybe an Election

Washington Politicians Awaken to Fact That Voting Public, Like an Army, 'Moves on Its Stomach.'

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

Wars and rumors of war, war production, man power, post-war plans, race riots, roll-backs, gas rationing, strikes, floods, offensives—you can think of a lot more probably. All right, pour them all into the hopper. Grind them up. This is a pretty dish to set before a voter in 1944! Don't worry, he can take it. But take away his bread-basket, and he is a different animal.

Food will win the war.

Lack of it can postpone victory if it doesn't spell defeat.

And food, or lack of it, can lose an election, that is what you are hearing in Washington these days.

An electorate, like an army, moves on its stomach. On an empty stomach, it moves away from the "ins," hollers for the "outs" to bring back the bacon. And when you get a customer with both an empty stomach and a full pocketbook hammering on the table and demanding service, you have a hard customer to please.

Slowly, the Washington politicians are beginning to awaken to that fact—that food is going to be the big issue in the next election.

President Saw It First

The President and his keen-eyed, ears-to-the-ground political scouts recognized it first, and when Phil Murray, head of the CIO, and William Green of the AFL began to call for the roll-back of prices, the administration was quick to promise that they would be served "right away." Meanwhile, some of the other guests are beginning to feel neglected.

But before roll-backs au gratin could be served, congress stuck its foot out and tried to spill the tray. For a while, it looked as if there was going to be embarrassment in the political kitchen.

Even if the administration is able to silence the demands and threats of labor, there are a lot of other Oliver Twists who "want some more" and who will twist out of their straight-ticket voting and start looking for "a better 'ole" unless this food question is solved before the ides of November MCMXLIV.

Through the days when congress was first trying to fold its tent and steal away from the banks of the Potomac, one thing was clear: unless the administration pulled a nice, fat and succulent rabbit out of the hat which could be served up to the electorate with enough basketsfull left over for the fighting forces and the hungry Allies and other prospective clients, the Gallup poll vaulters which had re-re-re-elected the New Deal in advance would have to start their polling all over again.

The enemies of the administration are building up a barrage to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt has babied labor and has left his old friends, the farmers, in the lurch. They say that because he was afraid to offend labor, he listened to their demands for lower prices and turned a deaf ear to the farmers' troubles.

This, of course, since it comes from hardly non-partisan quarters, has to be taken with a grain of salt, but whatever the working man says, when he sees the cost of living eating up his former "raises" if he has had them, the record will show that despite John Lewis' polysyllabic attacks on the President, labor has not been treated exactly as a stepchild.

But what has the farmer been getting meanwhile?

A couple of assists, at least, which have benefited him and the war effort at the same time.

FCA Head Reports

Let me report to you what I learned from Governor Black of the Farm Credit administration, an institution which has managed to escape the attacks which most of the government agencies have had to weather. Governor Black was in Washington the other day—the headquarters of the Farm Credit administration were moved to Kansas City a year ago, you know, in the interest of decentralization and with the idea that after all, Kansas is nearer the center of American agriculture than the Atlantic seaboard.

The governor tells me that the FCA has been used heavily since the first of the year to see that farmers are getting the credit they need to achieve all-out production. He admits that the 50 million dollars loaned to farmers and stockmen isn't much compared with the total amount of production financing which the farmers use in a year but it's something even in these days of astronomical lending, leasing and spending.

The loans are made through the Regional Agricultural Credit corporation.

Take flax—flax is as important in its way as tanks are in theirs. The automobile manufacturers have had it made worth their while to manufacture tanks instead of autos. The farmers up in—take North Dakota, for instance—have "shared the risk" as Black puts it, with the RACC (Regional Agricultural Credit corporation) which extended them credit to "change over" to flax. Instead of one million three hundred thousand acres of this valuable crop that was harvested last year, a million EIGHT hundred and forty thousand acres were seeded this year (41.4 per cent government financed).

Take dry beans in Montana: 50,000 acres seeded this year, double last year's planting, 84.5 per cent of the crop government financed. I could go down the list with peanuts in South Carolina, sweet potatoes in Louisiana and Mississippi, ad infinitum.

Simple Machinery

The way this share-the-risk thing works is simple. The farmer puts up his land and labor, the RACC puts up the out-of-pocket costs after the county war board and its own representatives have approved the deal.

If the crop comes out all right, the farmer pays the loan. If it is wiped out by bugs, drouth or disaster (and when Ol' Man River went hog-wild this spring, there was a lot of wiping out) his liability isn't wiped out, too, because his liability is limited to what he took in from the crop and the incentive payments or insurance on it.

"It wasn't so much a matter of how much money was loaned," Governor Black said to me, "as where it was loaned and what it was loaned for. In the past few months, the country has awakened to the necessity of producing the vital crops to the limit, and that's where we concentrated our financing."

Well, that is one agency that has been able to go ahead without having to duck the political brickbats.

Other government agencies, not so lucky, had to take a lot of punishment that wouldn't have been directed at them if it weren't for politics. The poor Commodity Credit corporation, which everybody seems to love for itself alone, got into an unpleasant jam with the subsidies, and had a tight squeeze partly through pure politics, partly because congress and the President didn't see eye-to-eye on the anti-inflation program.

What most people fail to realize is this: even now with all the splendid effort the farmers have made, agriculture has not yet been entirely "converted"—I don't mean converted to the "all-out" idea but converted in the sense that civilian industry was converted to war production—autos to tanks and planes, sewing machines to machine guns. Industry had plenty of "incentive." The farmers have had some help, will have more.

And the consumer (who is really everybody) and the farmer and the worker, haven't gotten it through their heads yet that unless they all hang together, they'll hang separately.

If we don't get the food, we won't be able to eat the dollars, no matter how many we may have in our sock.

The per capita use of eggs in 1942 was 316. Prospects for this year are about 324 per capita. The army and lend-lease need about 3 eggs out of every 10 produced, which leaves 7 out of every 10 for civilians.

Angel Food cake with a fruity icing handles your summer dessert problem effectively but doesn't eat into your sugar ration.

Cooling Off

Fruity desserts for summer lend just the right tartness to the meal and give your menus a nice seasonal note. When fruits and berries are plentiful, plan them to go into your first courses, summer drinks, desserts and snacks.

Fruits and berries have a good store of vitamins and minerals which will help keep your spirits up when the warm weather wants to get you down. Acid fruits such as lemons, grapefruit and oranges alkalize your system and help you keep cooler while fruits and berries coming in season will give a delightful note to your menus.

Cakes, pies and puddings come in for their share of attention when there are fruit and berries on hand. This angel food cake looks mighty pretty served with fresh fruit or berry icing. The eggs, if removed from refrigerator several hours before using, will beat up more lightly and give increased fineness of grain and delicacy of texture to the cake:

Angel Food Cake.

1 cup sifted cake flour
1¼ cups sifted granulated sugar
1¼ cups egg whites (10 to 12 egg whites)
¼ teaspoon salt
1¼ teaspoons cream of tartar
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon almond extract

Sift flour once, measure, add ½ cup sugar, and sift together four times. Beat egg whites and salt with rotary beater or flat wire whisk. When foamy, add cream of tartar and continue beating until eggs are stiff enough to hold in peaks, but not dry. Add remaining sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating after each addition until sugar is blended. Fold in flavoring. Then sift in about ¼ of the flour and fold in lightly. Repeat until all is used. Turn into an ungreased 10-inch angel food cake pan. Cut gently through batter with knife to remove bubbles. Bake in a slow (325-degree) oven, 1 hour or until done. Remove from oven and invert pan 1 hour. Cover with fruit or berry icing.

The repertoire of cherry desserts is an extensive one for there are such things as cherry cobblers, shortcakes, pancakes, fritters, roly poly and pie! If you make the pie with this popular prepared cereal crust you will save time, requires no special technique for making:

Cherry Meringue Pie.

Crust:

3 cups oven-popped rice cereal
4 tablespoons sugar
⅓ cup butter, melted

Roll cereal into fine crumbs; combine with butter and sugar, mixing well. Press mixture evenly and firmly around sides and bottom of pie tin. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 8 minutes. Cool before adding filling.

Filling:

3 cups fresh cherries, pitted
1¼ cups sugar
2 tablespoons flour
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 eggs, separated

Combine pitted cherries, 1 cup sugar, flour, salt and egg yolks. Cook in double boiler until mixture is thickened. Pour into crumb pie shell. Beat egg whites until stiff. Gradually beat in remaining ¼ cup sugar. Spread meringue over pie. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 12 to 15 minutes until meringue is browned.

Orange Ice Cream.

1 pint scalded milk
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 eggs, separated
Grated rind of 2 oranges
Grated rind of ½ lemon
Juice of 4 large oranges
1 quart light cream

Make a custard of the first four ingredients as follows: Mix flour, sugar, salt, and add milk gradually. Cook over hot water for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Take from fire and pour over well-beaten egg yolks, and add grated lemon and orange rind. Return to double boiler and cook until mixture coats the spoon. Strain and cool, then add orange juice, cream and beaten whites of eggs. Freeze. If desired, serve with candied orange peel.

Sliced Pears in Orange Juice.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2½ cups fresh orange juice
2 tablespoons powdered sugar
6 to 8 pears, sliced thin

Sweeten orange juice with powdered sugar and chill well. Fifteen minutes before serving, peel pears, slice thin, and sweeten. Pour juice over the pears, and serve with cookies.

Berries are coming in season and will give a lift to your meals. Cherries go into this pie which is covered with a meringue to save precious fats.

Sliced Oranges in Orange Sherbet.
(Serves 8)

1st part
8 navel oranges
½ cup sugar
1 cup water

2nd part
1 quart water
2 cups sugar
Grated rind of 2 oranges
2 cups orange juice
¼ cup lemon juice

3rd part
1 cup sugar
½ cup water
Whites of 3 eggs

For the first part, peel oranges and with a sharp knife remove all white membrane. Slice oranges into sections between skins. Boil sugar and water together, let cool, then pour over oranges and let stand in refrigerator.

For second part, boil sugar and water for 5 minutes, add grated orange rind, and juices. Cool and strain. Freeze, in round mold.

Make a meringue for 3rd part by boiling sugar and water for 5 minutes, until it forms a soft ball in cold water. Incorporate a little into the beaten whites of three eggs until all used. Continue to beat for 2 minutes. Cool. Remove top from mold in which orange ice is packed, stir in meringue. Serve in large glass dish with sliced oranges in meringue nest.

Seems Sergeant Elmer Taylor, stationed at Honolulu, who's been a fan of Norman's parents for years, sent the youngster a small set of stripes and a replica of the Purple Heart which the sergeant won.

Joan Crawford has had such an interesting career, carved out by her own ambition and energy as well as her talent, that we can look for her to take another big step forward now that she has changed studios. Somebody said that Bette Davis would have to look to her laurels, with Joan right on the ground, and as willing as Bette is to play unsympathetic parts if they're good ones. Just give Joan a couple of good pictures and she'll have the box office eating out of her hand, as she did in her palmiest days.

TO YOUR Good Health
by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

ARTHRITIS

Dr. Barton

A middle-aged patient was referred by her family physician to a rheumatism or arthritis specialist. The specialist listened to her story as to when the symptoms appeared, the nature and degree of the pain, the different kinds of treatment she had received, and finally was told by the patient that she knew that if he operated and opened up the knee joint, she might get better.

The physician then quietly pointed out that the pain in the knee was just a symptom of a general disease in her body, that fixing up or giving relief in one joint would not prevent the disease attacking other joints, tendons and muscles, and that if he were to help to relieve her symptoms, it would be necessary for her to follow a certain diet, take certain medicines, and receive heat and electrical treatment.

What is arthritis? How can the patient or the physician recognize arthritis?

In Archives of Physical Therapeutics, Dr. Ralph Pemberton, Philadelphia, whose work on arthritis I have mentioned before, stated that arthritis is not just a disease of the joints, but a disease of the whole body and its results just happen to be located in the joints. In fact, many patients afflicted with the disease do not have much pain or inflammation in the joints but have pain where the ends of the muscles are attached to the tendons which move the bones forming the joint. There may be a small amount of swelling in parts of the body near the joints and both hands may be cold and sweaty.

That arthritis is not a joint disease but a general disease is shown by the fact that the symptoms are worse in women at menstruation, pregnancy and the menopause. "These patients stand cold poorly."

The underlying cause of arthritis, in the opinion of Dr. Pemberton, is that there is an imbalance (or lack of adjustment with other parts of the body) of the central nervous system and the endocrine or ductless glands (thyroid, pituitary, adrenal, sex, and others).

The thought then is that in trying to find the cause of arthritis, the aggravation of the two systems—nervous and gland—in various ways should be remembered. Infection, injury, emotional disturbances, food, cold, and moisture, general fatigue, should all be kept in mind.

Brain Operation For 'Tension' State

There are cases where the pain is not physical, but mental, and these patients suffer untold agony from grief, anxiety, shame and remorse, ungovernable temper and other mental and emotional disturbances. This pain affects their whole routine of life—food, rest, work. If it were not for the sake of their families or loved ones, this mental pain would drive many of them to self destruction.

How can these cases of severe mental pain obtain relief?

For years surgeons have been able to give relief in physical pain by cutting the nerves supplying the sensation in the part affected. In the same manner, surgeons are now, in the severe cases of mental pain, removing part of the brain.

In the Bulletin, New York Academy of Medicine, New York, Drs. W. Freeman and J. W. Watts, New York, state that the removal of this part of the brain—the frontal lobes—is past the experimental stage and definite relief from mental and emotional pain is now possible. These physicians have followed all their 136 patients for a period of six years and give the following conclusions.

1. The operation interrupts the connection between the front lobes of the brain and the thalamus (the part of the brain which feels or records certain emotional sensations) which reduces the emotional reactions of the patient. This loss of painful self-consciousness causes the patient to look outward instead of inward.

2. Intelligence is unharmed but self responsibility is decreased so that these patients may become lazy and lack tact. Other patients retain the proper degree of responsibility toward others.

3. Best results are obtained in "tension" states with obsessions, good results in depressions, and fair results in day dreaming states.

Household Hints

Most amateur gardeners water their gardens too often and not deeply enough. A good soaking when the ground has become practically dry is the rule for best results.

Watering a garden in the evening means less evaporation and more moisture left in the ground.

A leaky water bucket can be stopped-up by putting melted paraffin inside.

To protect the ends of hemp rope and to prevent them from fraying, wrap well with light but strong twine and then dip the bound ends in shellac.

Place a ball of twine in a twine sack, cut a small hole just above the ball, thread the string through the hole, then hang the sack on the wall and the twine will be handy when needed.

Hooks, eyes, and snaps are most satisfactory when sewed on with the buttonhole stitch.

When buying a housecoat, if you choose a wrap-around model, be sure it has a good lap, sitting or standing. Otherwise it will gap.

Instead of spreading newspapers on the inside of bureau drawers to keep them clean, try finishing them with a coat of white enamel.

String beans will be more tender if you cut them twice lengthwise before putting them on to cook.

Less sugar will be needed if a pinch of salt is added to sour fruits during the cooking period.

From an old French word "mes" derived from the Latin word "missus" meaning a course at a meal, comes the Army's name "mess" for its breakfast, dinner and supper. Favorite meal with the soldier is chicken dinner—his favorite cigarette, Camel. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) A carton of Camels, by the way, is a gift that's always welcome. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Millions of wild Hevea seeds from Brazil have been sent to neighboring countries and as far north as Central America in the extensive program under way to encourage rubber development in the Western hemisphere. Congress appropriated $500,000 in 1940 to stimulate rubber planting in the Americas.

India rubber pontons and ponton boats were used by the U. S. government 100 years ago. They were made of coated canvas in three compartments, each inflated by a separate tube. They were inflated by a hand bellows and collapsed and sank with the slightest leak.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

While in an art gallery I stood before Holman Hunts famous picture of the Christ, "The Light of the World." In this picture the Christ is represented as standing in a garden at the midnight hour. He is holding a lantern in his left hand and with his right hand he is knocking upon a heavily paneled door. I was told this story of the picture that I shall never forget. "On the day the painting was unveiled a group of art critics was present and one of them said to Mr. Hunt. "You have not yet finished your picture as there is no handle on the door". To which the great artist replied, "That is the door to the human heart; It can be opened from the inside only." That picture was true to all Christian theology. We live on the insides of our hearts and we have the will to open and let Jesus come in, or we have the will to keep the door closed against all the knocks of the Master. Open and let him in.

While sitting in a court room I listened to two lawyers as they opposed each other in an important case. I thought from what they said to each other that they were bitter enemies and all they needed to come to blows, was to be on the outside of the court room Imagine my suprise as I saw them at the lunch hour sitting together at the same table and enjoying each others fellowship in a most friendly way. Since, I have learned that if lawyers were to allow difference of opinions to divide them, not one lawyer would be on speaking terms with another. They have learned the fine art of having different opinions and yet remaining friendly. Usually people get along splendidly until they compare beliefs. Lots of us who are not lawyers should practice the spirit of friendship that exists between the men of the bar. Have our own opinions of course, but be friendly to the man who opposes us.

A bright young country boy was beginning his life as a clerk. The first week in the store the employer said to him, "Tomorrow I want you to get out and weigh that cargo of cotton and make a full report on it." The young man accepted the task and over night he made all arrangements with the men to report with their teams early next morning. About eleven the next morning the boss reported to the ware house and found the young man sitting in the counting room waiting for him. On seeing this the employer said, "Young man I thought that I told you that the cargo of cotton was to be gotten out this morning and here you are idle. "It is all done" said the young man. "And here is the report." From that moment that young man's character was fixed. From that moment promotions awaited him. In a few years he was a partner in the business. Young man, if you want promotion, make yourself worthwhile where you are.

Three monkeys were dining together in a cocanut tree and chanced to see some men walking together on the ground. One monkey laughed in monkey glee as he said to the other monkeys. "Those fellows claim that they decended from us, and yet if one of them owned this cocanut tree he would put a fence around it and eat all these nuts by himself." The second monkey said with a knowing look, "Yes, and those fellows [illegible] their wives. This is something that a monkey will never do." The third monkey said with a deep tone of disapproval, "Yes, and we monkeys refuse cocktails and then we stay by our young with devotion and protection, but that is not so with those fellows down there." Then all three monkeys chimed in, "They make a big claim and raise an awful fuss, to be sure they have decended from something but not from us.

OUR HUSBAND AND SON

We would like to say a few words concerning our husband and son Mr. Grady Adams who met such an untimely death a few days ago. Even though the picture of the passing of our loved one is somewhat beclouded we love to think back about five years ago when he confessed Christ as his personal savior. This confession took place during the revival services at Refuge Baptist Church right here at home. The Rev. M. Lock hart was holding his regular summer revival here with the Evangelist M. D. Garrett bringing the messages. He was baptized into the fellowship of the church by the pastor. He lived a consistent life for quite a while, taking an active part in prayer services and doing his share of hard work during the erection of our new church building. The pastor recalls that Grady and his working buddy was anxious to do the hardest task of wrecking the old church building, as well as helping to build the new one. They crawldd up into the steeple of the old building and when they came down it was hard to recognize who they were, because of the dust and smut.

Jesus said: "He that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out." He departed this life with some mumbling words. Could it have been, "Lord remember me when thou comeht into thy kingdom?" Then, could havd Jesus answered: "Verily, I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with me in paradise," Luke 23: 42-43.

Grady leaves a wife, three small children to mourn his loss.

Funeral services were held at Providence Baptist Church in Beat 16, and the Rev N. E. Cook in charge, assisted by Rev Lockhart, Sandlin and Robinson.

The Rev Sandlin and his quartet furnished the music and singing which was very suitable and very much appreciated.

Pall bearers were: J. L., Willie, Arthur and Earnest Adams, Dewey and Reedie Cleckler.—THE FAMILY.

If Hitler wins, the issue for you will be living itself and not just the cost of living. Think that over and figure it out for yourself how much beyond 10 percent of your family income you should put into War Bonds every payday.

FEWER AND FEWER DEATHS ARE NOW OCCURING FROM TUBERCULOSIS

Montgomery,--- Only one death out of every 177 that occurred in Alabama in 1941 occured in tuberculosis hospitals or sanitoria, according to information recieved by the State Department of Health from the Bureau of the Census. In the United States as a whole one death out of every 86.5 occurred in an institution of this kind.

Alabama deaths during that year totaled 28, 715, of which only 162 occured in tuberculosis hospitals or sanitoria. Of the 1, 397, 642 deaths that occured during that year in the entire United States, 16, 159 occurred in institutions specializing in the treatment of tuberculosis.

Put every dollar above the necessities of life into War Bonds. Payroll Savings is the best means of doing your best in helping your sons and friends on the fighting fronts. Figure it out yourself.

War Bonds should mean something more to you than just "a good sound investment." Figure it out yourself.

Eighteen thousand gallons of gasoline saved on the home front will fuel for a whole hour an American tank division moving up to the front.

A carpenter or plumber brings his own tols to the job. So did Army Ordinance employees assigned to repair Army vehicles in Field Service shops. But when it became difficult for civilians to buy highly specialized new tools when their old ones wore out, the Ordinance Department revised its policy. No, cross it out. Joe might not understand about the topcoat, especially if he's shivering in a damp Japanese cell.

Hell, better cross that out, too. They don't ever get vacations where Joe's staying.

Well, what are you waiting for? Go ahead, write the letter to Joe. Try to write it, anyhow.

But mister, if somehow you find you can't finish that letter, will you, at least, do this for Joe? Will you up the amount of money you're putting into War Bonds and keep buying your share from here on in?

NEWS FROM MOUNT NEBO

Rev W. G. Barnes brought several inspiring messages in the revival which closed at Mt.. Nebo last Friday night.

Attendance was fairly good, although no one joined the church.

Little Miss Rose Marie Rain is visiting Mrs M. L. Williams this week.

The following from this community visited Mattie Belle White, who is in a Selma Hospital, Sunday. Burnice Culp, Imogene Williams, Margaret Williams, Lomar Williams, Billie Ruth Deason and Mrs. J. E. Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. Parnell Ratliff and children from Birmingham spent Sunday afternoon with Mr and Mrs John M. Culp.

NEWS FROM ARCHIE'S CHAPEL

The regular church services will not be held at Archie's Chapel this week-end vecause of the revivel being held at New Hope Baptist Church near-by.

However, the Women's Missionary Society will meet as usual at 2:30 Saturday afternoon at the church, and the Young People's Meeting will be held at 7:00 Saturday night with Lorene Bice as leader. The Young People are also asked to come to church Saturday afternoon to work on the church grounds and fix up some things especially to their interests.

NEWS FROM SHILOH

We had a nice crowd at church Sunday night. Corp. Warren Keen who is at home from the army taught the Young People Class Sunday. The Class seemed to have enjoyed it very much since the lesson was on the drink habit and Warren gave us some interesting thoughts on it.

Our revival begins the First Sunday in August. Rev J. L. Hand of Climax, Ga., will do the preaching. Let's all attend these services and worship the Lord together.

NEWS FROM WALNUT CREEK

Preaching Sunday at 10 a. m. at Walnut Creek, then again at 11 a. m. at Shady Grove church. And our revival will begin Sunday night at Concord church. Everyone is welcome to all these services.—REV. REESE FARNELL.

A BETTER CHANCE

Alabama's girl babies have a much better chance of surviving their first year of life than this State's boy babies.

This is the conclusion drawn from a tabulation of 1941 death rates among Alabama infants which was recently prepared by the Bureau of the Census and made public by the State Department of Health.

Greyhound Lines Produce Picture

"This amazing America," the technicolor motion picture produced by the Greyhound Lines in 1940 to promote bus travel, is now serving a new and important purpose in advancing the country's international relations.

The Office of War Information, at the request of the State Department, has obtaind prints of the film for distribution in Russia. Initial showings are planned for the American Embassy in Moscow, but unlike the films once presented by German counselor officials, the picture will show the scenic wonders of America rather than the ruthless invasion of neutral countries.

Its title revised to "North America By Bus," the film has already been shown to more than a million persons in South America under the sponsorship of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American scenic tour of the United States in its plot. The places visited on the screen include Hollywood and Southern California, San Francisco and the bay bridges, California's Redwood highway, Yellowstone National Park, the Minnesota Lake country, the Dutch colony at Holland, Mich., Niagara Falls, New York City, Boston and historic New England, the Natural Bridge of Virginia, the Great Smoky Mountains, Florida beaches, New Orleans and the Mississippi, Texas and the Alamo, and the Grand Canyon.

Since its production three years ago, the film has been viewed by audiences totaling seven million persons in this country.

DID YOU KNOW THAT?—

During the Middle Ages, vegetables were used only for flavoring or for medicinal purposes.

Leading nutritionists say 1 1-2 lbs., of meat weekly is sufficient to maintain the health of any hard-working man, provided he has a variety of other foods.

Per capita consumption of sugar in the US has risen from 13 pounds in 1830 to 96 pounds in 1939, while meat has dropped from 178 to 131 pounds.

Basic foods accounted for 86.8 percent of a laborer's cost of living in 1830, but only 15.4 percent in 1930.

Two-thirds of the people in the world are farmers.

Asserting a number of city water meters have been tampered with, Mayor M. M. Moulthrop of eufaula warned: "Parties responsible will be heavily fined."

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Italians Feel Power of United Nations As Sicily Topples and Rome Is Bombed; Navy Blasts Japs in Battle Off Munda; U. S. Civilians Get Rationing Forecasts

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

FOOD:

Maintain Meat Ration

Maintenance of the present meat ration at "about the present level" was predicted by the War Food administration following the allocation of estimated supplies among civilians, the services and other users for the next 12 months.

Total allocable meat supplies were put at 23¼ billion pounds. Civilians will receive 63 out of every 100 pounds produced, the services will be given 17 pounds, the Allies will get 14 pounds, and allotments for reserves, the Red Cross and exports will amount to 6 pounds.

Of the total supply of beef expected, civilians will obtain 66 out of every 100 pounds, and the services 23 pounds. Other claimants will get 2 pounds. Of the pork production, the civilians' share will amount to 59 out of every 100 pounds, the services' portion will be 12½ pounds, and lend-lease's allotment will approximate 25 pounds.

Total supplies of lamb and mutton are expected to drop sharply from the 939 million pounds of 1942 to 539 million. This compares with the 1935-'39 average of 863 million pounds.

Cheese, Butter

Decrease of government purchases through August, September and October will make available 527 million pounds of butter and cheese for civilians, the WFA said. Of the total, approximately 400 million pounds will be of butter; 92 million pounds of cheddar cheese, and 35 million pounds of other cheese.

WFA also announced that plans were made for about 7 million additional cases of canned baby foods, condensed milk, other milk products and certain canned vegetables and fruits by an increase in canners' tin quotas. However, it was pointed out that shortage in fruit crops may offset the extra tin allotments.

Increased production will allow civilians 388 eggs apiece during the next 12 months, WFA said, 18 more than in 1942.

The Office of Price Administration also stepped into the food picture and announced prices of cabbage and lettuce will be rolled back 25 to 50 per cent.

SICILY:

First Resistance

History will record that the first real Axis resistance in Sicily was put up at Catania. Here, in the midst of the broad rolling plains which are criss-crossed by several rivers, German armored forces met the full shock of Gen. Bernard Montgomery's British Eighth army, charging forward after easy capture of the ports of Syracuse and Augusta.

Adept at tank warfare, the Germans took no chances on exposing their mechanized ranks to the big Berthas of British warships plying along the narrow eastern coast of the island, and to the Allies heavy artillery, which could be concentrated in the tight coastal corridor. Instead, they determined to take their chances in the sprawling Catania plains, where they could maneuver more comfortably.

Montgomery on Sicilian front.

History will show that as the Germans and British locked horns on these plains, with the enemy holding his flexible lines in the early days of the fighting, Gen. George S. Patton's American Seventh army rolled 30 miles inland to Enna, which is situated on high ground and commands important roads running east and west across the island.

SOUTH PACIFIC:

1. Planes blast Jap shipping trying to supply beleaguered garrison at Munda.

2. Navy sees six more years of war in Pacific.

Air Power Scores Again.

The devastating striking power of land-based aircraft against surface vessels was again amply demonstrated in the Solomons offensive when American Liberator, Mitchell and Avenger bombers attacked a strong Japanese concentration of 11 warships and transports in Vella gulf, sinking a cruiser and two destroyers and scattering the others.

Sailing in the dead of night, the Japs were making another try at reinforcing their entrapped troops at Munda airfield, on New Georgia island, where U. S. dive bombers also were in action supporting the ground units' creeping attack on the stronghold's jungle defenses.

The attack in Vella gulf followed others made upon Jap vessels in Kula gulf and brought to 24 the number of different enemy ships sent to the bottom since the Solomons offensive started.

Sgt. Thomas Gacicot kneels at grave of fallen buddy on Rendova island.

Sees Long War.

Because the war in the Pacific must be fought over great distances and bases must be built from the ground up, Vice Admiral Frederick J. Horne, assistant chief of naval operations, declared the navy was figuring on at least six years of fighting.

Horne cautioned against optimism that the war would be over in a hurry, asserting that every slight success fills the people with unwarranted hope and invariably results in a drop of war production. To defeat Japan, he said, we will need a fleet and air force twice as big as the enemy's, and he claimed that the present building program will bring a seven-fold expansion in our navy by 1947.

Neither should we look for a collapse in Germany such as occurred during the last war, Horne said. Clever indoctrination of Nazi principles in the German people has given the nation a firm will to fight the war to the finish, he explained.

ROME:

Raid Momentous

One of the greatest stirs of the war was caused by the Allied bombing of Rome. Both here and abroad, no effort was made to minimize the import of the action.

The Allies maintain that Rome constitutes a legitimate military objective, as best illustrated by the railway yards through which all north and south bound traffic in Italy is routed. Demolition of these yards, the Allies say, would severely cripple Axis communication on the mainland.

Besides the important railway yards, Rome also harbors other industrial installations, it is pointed out. In the raid in which 500 American Flying Fortresses participated, the Allies said a steel plant and a large chemical works were damaged.

The Italian government's belief that Rome would not be bombed because of the cultural and religious landmarks which abound throughout the entire area, was indicated by the lack of strong preparation made against attack. Anti-aircraft fire was weak, few planes rose to intercept the Allied squadrons and 166 persons were killed and 1,659 injured.

LABOR:

Wants Cheaper Food

Declaring "profiteers and speculators are sapping the strength of the nation's army of workers," William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said that unless prices of food were brought down "to a reasonable level," organized labor would demand wage increases.

At present, wage increases have been restricted to 15 per cent over the January, 1941, scales. Leveling his attack on food, Green said that AFL surveys in principal cities had shown costs in labor's market basket had risen from 50 to 200 per cent since the war started.

Criticizing the Office of Price Administration and War Food administration for failing to halt the increase in food prices, Green demanded "intelligent and orderly action to assure workers and their families of a decent place to live in and enough nourishing food to eat within their incomes."

Green's statement followed one by CIO chieftain William Murray, who similarly threatened that organized labor would seek wage increases unless food prices were rolled back. The administration is committed to a roll-back program.

HOGS:

Ceiling $14.75

With a "floor" or minimum price of $13.75 per hundred pounds promised for hogs, the government established a "ceiling" or maximum price of $14.75. At the same time the "floor" was extended to all porkers between 200 and 270 pounds.

Despite the government's promise, however, hogs were selling for less than the "floor" in some big markets. In the Chicago yards, heavy runs recently drove the average price down to $13.35, with tops averaging $13.85 and others bringing $12.85.

Overhauling its present system of slaughter control to provide for record receipts, the government announced that packers will be licensed to operate if they pay not less than the "floor" nor more than the "ceiling" price for hogs, and if they make appropriate division of meat supplies among civilian, military and lend-lease groups.

It was also revealed that the government intended to extend federal inspection to plants now without the facilities. Under present regulations, the government cannot purchase meat from any packers without such inspection. The new arrangement promises a more equitable distribution of meat in the country.

RUSSIA:

Front Aflame

On the offensive for the first summer in three years, the Red army hacked at German lines along much of the vast 1,200 mile front.

The main drive remained directed at the Nazi salient of Orel, with Russian forces bearing down upon that hub from north and south. A junction of the two spearheads behind Orel would seal off thousands of German troops now fighting around the city and also sever the railroad from Bryansk carrying supplies to the embattled base.

While fighting raged around Orel, the Reds pressed home three other attacks. Preceded by heavy artillery and air bombardment, they assaulted Nazi lines below Leningrad, near Smolensk and around the German Caucasian base of Novorossisk, where they had been beaten off this spring.

MANPOWER:

Unfreeze Jobs

Workers frozen into their jobs in war or essential industries by an order of the War Manpower commission April 17, now will be allowed to accept the same positions at higher pay in other plants.

Workers formerly could transfer to other jobs only if laid off for seven days or more, if discharged or if able to show that their skill would be employed to better advantage elsewhere.

NEW YORK. — Hitler himself must doubt the persuasions of Nordic kultur on noting that Poznan provides the new Polish premier to replace the dead Sikorski. Poznan is the most western province of Poland. Germany half embraces it, and from it for a hundred years Germans have tried to squeeze all Polish flavor. Once the squeeze got so tight that even the Poznan school children went out on strike.

Polish Premier a Native of Kultur-Infested Poznan

Stanislaw Mikolajczyk was five then, and might have led a kindergarten sit-down, but he was all the way across Germany in Westphalia. His father, a farm laborer, was trying his luck there. Luck was poor and when Stanislaw was ten and the first World war only three years away the family trekked back to their old home.

When Stanislaw was 16 he stood in the thick of the waxing revolution against Poznan's weakening Prussian rulers. The Polish Republic followed and he rose to leadership of the Peasant party and to a seat in parliament. He is himself a true peasant, off a 50-acre farm, stocky and thick-necked. His half-inch of bristling moustache is only a minor concession to urban influence.

When the Nazis struck he enlisted as a private, the rank he held in the war against the Reds 19 years earlier. After Warsaw he was interned in Hungary but made his escape.

In the years since, first under Paderewski, then Sikorski, his main assignment has been to run the Polish underground, and his name has become a household word to patriots inside his oppressed country. His blacklist of Nazi criminals is the longest in Europe. This, also, must be of depressing interest to Hitler.

IT IS a long time since President Roosevelt got salt fish three times running. The housekeeper called in by the much-traveling first lady now could offer 19 luncheon menus if the President demanded variety. Now there has been added the confusion of ration coupons, but Mrs. Henrietta Nesbit, placid, bespectacled, middle-aged, sorts these resourcefully and to date has not been made either red or blue by the new responsibility. The fact that her husband is White House custodian of supplies may help.

This Lady Is the Boss of Domestic End of New Deal

It is 14 years since Mrs. Nesbit signed up to see that when the master gazed around "with the prophetic eye of appetite," there should be victuals to suit both his scrambled eggs and truffles moods. That was in his first governorship. Mrs. Nesbit, Duluth - born, with casually fluffed hair, had a catering business in Hyde Park previous to this, and Mrs. Roosevelt was sure that the author of such whole wheat bread was the needed woman.

Nowadays, bossing a staff that jumps to 124 for a state dinner, Mrs. Nesbit never consults her mistress, even when her mistress is near enough to be consulted. She will even put on evening dress and drift gently among the ambassadors to make sure every tidbit is as it should be. She doesn't live in the White House and her usual shift runs from eight to six. She doesn't, however, mind working overtime in the kitchen she and Mrs. Roosevelt modernized from knife rack to range.

THE Federation of Musicians lays its fight against radio music transcriptions on the doorstep of Labor Secretary Perkins but it still seems pretty plain that President James Caesar Petrillo has carried on one of the longest strikes since Pearl Harbor in a war-occupied country whose labor leaders have promised, "No strikes." He has dished it out for more than 11 months.

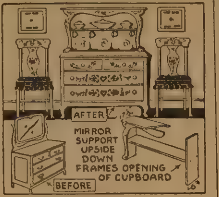
J. Petrillo Makes Lewis Look Like Short Order Cook

Petrillo has been boss of the Federation and its nearly 140,000 members for three years. He is president, too, of the Chicago local and between 1922 and now he jumped the membership of that from 4,000 to 11,000, all well paid.

He can call a strike any time he wishes, fine a member up to $5,000 and suspend the union constitution at will. For discharging these and other responsibilities he is paid by both groups $46,000 plus expenses.

At eight, Petrillo was a trumpet player, at 14 he had his own band, then switched to drums, ran a cigar store for a while and was an active union member at 22. He is so out of practice now he could hardly get a toot out of any trumpet. Fifty years old, short, stocky, as confident as Napoleon, he gets along well with the AFL.

Hint for War Bride: Make Combination Chest and Cupboard From Old Dresser



IF YOU are furnishing a combination living and dining room with odds and ends from the family attic why not use paint and inexpensive fabrics to harmonize unrelated pieces?

Here a combination chest and dish cupboard has been made from an old dresser. The cupboard at the lower right sits on top of the dresser and a quarter round molding nailed to the dresser top holds plates in place. Both dresser and chairs are painted cream color and quaint Dutch designs in gay colors are stenciled on them. The chair seat covers repeat the colors in these designs. Pieces of the cracked mirror of the old dresser are cut to fit painted picture frames and typical Dutch tulip designs are stenciled on the glass.

NOTE: The painted and stenciled designs used by Early Dutch settlers in America are full of sentiment for us today. The Dove of Peace and Hearts and Flowers were favorites. MEAT GOES FAR WITH ALL-BRAN "BRANBURGERS"

Here's a new way to serve that old favorite, the hamburger. Make it with KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN to stretch the meat supply, to give the popular hamburger new interest, and to get ALL-BRAN's nutritional benefits—valuable proteins, carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals.

Kellogg's All-Bran Branburgers

1 egg
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 cup milk
¼ cup catsup
1 cup Kellogg's All-Bran
1 pound ground beef

Beat egg slightly, add salt, pepper, onion, parsley, milk, catsup and All-Bran. Let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Add beef and mix thoroughly. Shape into 12 patties. Bake in hot oven (450°F.) about 30 minutes or broil about 20 minutes.

Yield: 6 servings (12 2½ inch branburgers.)

Hunt Ducks With Nets

It's an old custom, and a favorite pastime, of the wealthy in Japan to use nets in place of guns when duck hunting season opens. Since the sons of the Rising Sun now need all of their weapons elsewhere, and for a different purpose, this odd hunting practice should be most popular.

The idea seems to be to sneak up on the duck. It's quite a trick, but the Japs are masters of sneak attacks.

PIANO BARGAINS

●June 15, 1943, the Piano Manufacturers had a meeting in New York City and had a Government man there to explain to them when they might look forward to manufacturing pianos. He told them not until the war is over. So E. E. Forbes, Sr., decided to go to Chicago and buy a large stock of good used pianos. He succeeded in buying 150 grands, uprights and players. Some of them from fine homes and some look just like new and are as good as new. He had to pay more for these than he used to buy them for. He says that they are getting scarce and if you read this ad and will need a piano within 2 years, you had better buy it now while you can get one. After this year you will have a hard time finding a piano that will suit you. You can buy one of the Forbes rebuilt pianos on easy terms. It will last you a life time. One year after the war is over you can trade it back to Forbes on a new piano if you want to.

See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former feature editor of a North Carolina newspaper, has been inducted into the army and has spent some time in training at Fort Bragg. In his story he has given prospective inductees considerable advice. Immediately before induction he advocates a period of "painting the town red." Once in, the new soldier should "keep an open mind" about what he learns because "the first three weeks are hardest." Private Hargrove has been missing the point of some of his essential training and as a result he has had considerable KP duty. Some of his friends have been advanced to Corporal and his Sergeant has asked why he was not promoted.

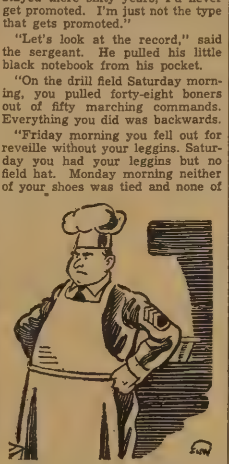
CHAPTER V

"Me?" The idea had never occurred to me. "I'm just not the executive type, I suppose. Back at the News, the boss told me that if I stayed there sixty years, I'd never get promoted. I'm just not the type that gets promoted."

"Let's look at the record," said the sergeant. He pulled his little black notebook from his pocket.

"On the drill field Saturday morning, you pulled forty-eight boners out of fifty marching commands. Everything you did was backwards.

"Friday morning you fell out for reveille without your leggins. Saturday you had your leggins but no field hat. Monday morning neither of your shoes was tied and none of your shirt buttons were buttoned. Tuesday morning it was without leggins again."



"A mess sergeant, according to military legend, is a cook whose brains have been baked out."

"I'm never really awake," I protested, "until ten o'clock."

"You ain't awake then," he scoffed. "Every Monday morning without fail I have to wake you up at least a dozen times. I have to look behind all the posts around here to see which one you're sleeping against. You snore and disturb your classes, too!"

He was exaggerating there, I told him, I don't snore. And I'm sleepy only on Monday morning. The rest of the time I'm alert and energetic.

"You're too energetic sometimes!" he roared. "Just this morning, when the lieutenant was coaching the platoon in rifle sighting and you were on fatigue duty as usual! That was a pretty one! You ran up and down the battery street twenty-two times in thirty minutes and you saluted the lieutenant every time you passed him! Do you think he ain't got a thing to do but return your salutes all morning?"

This was evidently a rhetorical question, so I didn't answer it.

"You don't salute an officer every time you see him when you're right there at his side practically all day. You salute him the first time you see him and the last time you're going to see him.

"And then when the lieutenant explains that to you," he sighed, "then what do you do! The next time you see him, you salute him again, and then ask him was you supposed to salute him that time!"

He put his head in his hands and drummed sadly on the toe of his foot locker. He raised his head after a time and looked into the notebook again.

I knew what was coming next and I edged toward the door.

"And then you low-rated the mess sergeant's recipe for creamed beef on toast and told him his chow was the worst in the Army. And you said you was going to start eating in the next battery. That hurt his feelings so bad that he burned the potatoes for the next three meals!"

I promised to apologize to the mess sergeant. The sergeant read out of his notebook for five or six minutes more, enumerating the things I had consistently done wrong.

"Now, do you know," he asked wearily, "why you don't get the red stripes when they give them out?"

"I suppose I'm just not the executive type," I told him.

A mess sergeant, according to military legend, is a cook whose brains have been baked out. This does not apply to the mess sergeant in our battery, whose feelings are easily hurt by cruel remarks and who weeps tears into the mashed potatoes when he's picked on. This is simply the old Army definition of a mess sergeant.

All of us rising student cooks are eligible to become mess sergeants, Staff Sergeant Adams told us in our first cooking class yesterday morning. Then we can sit out in the cool dining rooms and yell back orders for the cooks to yell at the student cooks to yell at the kaypees.

This is not the beautiful goldbricking life that it seems, though. The mess sergeant has to make requisitions and keep records on all the rations, he has to make out the menus, see that the food is prepared properly and supervise the work of the cooks, the student cooks, and the kaypees. Besides this, he must listen to all the gripes about his food and to the threadbare jokes about cooks who get drunk from lemon and vanilla extract.

All this he must do, with his brains baked out.

The cook, lucky little rascal that he is, also leads an ideal life. He is allowed to believe that he knows more about cooking then the mess sergeant will ever know, although he is not supposed to tell the mess sergeant that he does. He works one day and sleeps the next two.

If the cook is not feeling cheerful, he can pick on at least one student cook and at least five kaypees. On the battlefield, he is in the safest position behind the lines, since the food is endowed with more sentimental value than the top sergeant. The jokes about Army cooks being shot at from both sides are not based upon fact.

However, friend cook has to greet the morn before the morn gets there. On the days when he works, he has to get up between 3:00 and 3:30 o'clock in order to prepare a substantial breakfast for about two hundred healthy, growing boys whose appetites are exceeded only by the size of their mouths and the power of their lungs.

Yesterday we started to school, with cookbooks and manuals and loose-leaf notebooks for our homework. The only way in which it differed from public schools was that the naughty boys didn't have to go and sit with the girls. Also, the dunce seat, instead of being in the corner of the classroom, was said to be behind a large sack of potatoes in the battery kitchen.

The only hope for an easy time in class was gone in this school. There's no percentage in bringing a shiny red apple to a teacher who has the key to at least one well-stocked pantry.

In the kitchen, they tell us, all the cleaning-up work is to be done by the kaypees, so that the cook may be doing more important things. This, unfortunately, doesn't apply to the daily task of cleaning the stoves thoroughly. The stoves, it says here in the books, are the cook's tools and he must do his own grinding.

It isn't worth the time to wait for the stoves to get comfortably cool before you begin the twilight beautification of these overgrown infernos. In order to avoid the rush at the theater, and to let the kaypees off early, start work now.

The stoves must be cleaned inside and out—thoroughly. First, shake down the fire. All the live coals must go into the ashpan under the grate. That much is simple. Then remove the ashpan, red coals and all. It must be dumped into the ash can out on the garbage rack. This entire procedure should be simple, too, it says here. All you have to do is catch the front handle with a heavy glove and catch the little hook in the rear with the far end of your cap lifter. Here we go!

Carry the ashpan well in front of you. Ain't it hot! When you get to the door, simply open it with the toe of your shoe. Like this. Like— Doesn't seem to work. Try again. Try pushing the right screen so that the left one will swing slightly toward you. Ready? Slightly push the right screen. Something seems to be wrong here.

During this time, you will become increasingly aware that the glove over the ashpan handle is becoming hotter and hotter. Just as you get your toe into the door, the heat penetrates the glove and you decide—very suddenly—that perhaps it's best to drop the whole matter. Drop it slowly, carefully, tenderly—if you can. Do not drop it upon the wooden floor. Look around, if you think you have time, and locate an overturned boiler on which to set it. Whew, that hand's hot! No boiler? Then drop it anyway!

You will find that dropping the ashpan, even though you did it gently, has released a small amount of floating ash, all of which will be absorbed into your mouth and nose. Patience, brother. See that the ashpan isn't lying where it will burn anything, such as a perfectly good wooden floor. Pour cold water on the glove, wait for the resulting steam to blow away, prop open the door as you should have done in the first place, and try, try again.

This time you will almost reach the garbage rack before the glove again gets hot. Slide, Kelly, slide! You won't get there without dropping the whole pan into the clean road, but at least you tried.

Beat the pan against the ash can several times for sound effect. Return to the kitchen, where the mess sergeant, who was watching you through the window all the time, will direct you to return and clean it up.

By the time you have finished and look about you, the kaypees have finished their work and are sitting around gaping at you as if you were a steam shovel. A very, very black steam shovel.

Isn't gas a wonderful fuel?

Private Sher and I were sitting out on the back steps to dodge the cleaning work going on inside when we saw the sergeant bearing down on us from the other end of the battery street.

"It's no use scooting inside, Hargrove," said Sher. "He's already seen us. Look tired, as if you'd already done your part of the work." Private Sher is the goldbricking champion of Battery A and always knows what to do in such an emergency.

We both draped expressions of fatigue over our faces and the sergeant skidded to a halt before us. He reached into his hip pocket for the little black book and aimed a finger at both of us.

"Bums!" he shouted. "Bums! I worked my fingers to the bone yesterday morning getting this platoon to pretty up the barracks for inspection. Comes inspection and two privates have dirty shoes lying sprawled all over the floor under their bunks! Private Hargrove and MISTER Private Sher! Report to Corporal Farmer in fatigue clothes."

We reported to Corporal Farmer, who looked at his list of jobs. "As much as you don't deserve it," he said, "you two goldbricks are in line for canteen police."

Mr. Private Sher and I walked up the battery street toward the canteen.

"Is this canteen police business good or bad?" I asked.

"Oh, so-so," he said. "You have to clean up the papers and cigarette butts around the post exchange first thing in the morning. Then you come around and check up three or four times during the day."

I stopped, aghast. "What do you do between times?"

"Just be inconspicious," said Sher. "That's all there is to it. Please pick up that candy wrapper over there. My back aches."

We cleaned up the grounds around the post exchange and sat for a while in the shade, watching a battery going through calisthenics. With beautiful precision, the soldiers swung their rifles up, down, to the right, to the left. They went through the quarter, half, and full knee bends and the shoulder exercises and the rest of the routine.

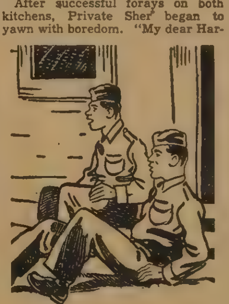
"Those boys seem to be improving, Mr. Sher," I said.

"Result of hard work," said Maury. "Personally, I get awfully tired watching this. We'll wear ourselves out. Let's go over to my kitchen and handshake for a bottle of milk."

"No," I protested. "We must go to my kitchen."

"To avoid a tiring argument," suggested Private Sher, "we will go to both our kitchens. We can't be thrown out of both of them."

After successful forays on both kitchens, Private Sher began to yawn with boredom. "My dear Hargrove," he said, "we must stimulate our minds. Let us adjourn to my place for a game of checkers." Private Sher's "place" was only one flight of stairs removed from my squadroom, so we adjourned.



"He's already seen us. Look tired as if you'd already done your part of the work."

After two games of checkers, Private Sher waved his arms. "This is folderol," he said. "You are no checker player, Hargrove. You have no idea of tactics. Let us sit by the window and watch our comrades drill. There is something stirring in the sight of fine young men perfectly executing a marching order."

While we were sitting there being stirred, another corporal disturbed us. He wanted us to go with him to haul coal.

"Much as we would like to help you haul coal, my good man," said Maury, "we are now actively engaged in the work of policing up the post exchange. Feel free to call upon us at any other time."

The corporal placed his hands on his hips and stared at us. "You're being punished," he asked, "with canteen duty?"

"There's no need to be vulgar," said Sher. "If you will excuse us, it is time for us to go again to look for cigarette butts around the post exchange. Coming Mr. Hargrove?"

"Coming, Mr. Sher. And a good day to you, corporal!"

GOD DELIVERS HIS PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 5:22, 23; 6:1-7; 12:51

GOLDEN TEXT—Call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.—Psalm 50:15.

Why doesn't God do something? People are quick to ask such a question in a time of crisis. Today they want to know why God permits the war to go on. In the day of our lesson Moses wanted to know why God did not deliver His people from Egypt. He and Aaron had been appointed of God to lead them out, but their first efforts only met with failure and increased persecution.

The complaint of Moses, and the response of God make an instructive story for our consideration and guidance. It will answer our questions.

I. Moses Said, "Thou Hast Not Delivered Thy People" (Exod. 5:22, 23).

When the efforts of Moses brought heavier burdens on the people they blamed him and Aaron for making their situation worse. This sorrow and shame made them doubt God's calling and commission. How quickly men are discouraged in their purpose to serve God.

The people were wrong in their attitude. They should have been patient. They ought not to have assumed that the loss of the first skirmish meant the loss of the whole campaign.

Are we not just like them? The new minister or the recently elected Sunday school superintendent makes a mistake and instead of helping him to pick up the pieces and start over, we decide that he just will not do, that we must have a change.

Even though the people were wrong, however, the man of God should not have lost his faith and accused God of failure to keep His promise. He was supposed to have learned the lesson of patience in the long years on the backside of the desert. Had he forgotten the experience of the burning bush?

II. God Said, "I Am Jehovah, Thou Shalt See What I will Do" (Exod. 6:1-7).

In other words, Moses was to remember that he was dealing with the Eternal One, unchangeable, and always true to His word and able to make His will come to pass.

So often men in dealing with God think of Him in terms of their own weakness and failure. What we need is to have a Godlike conception of God, not a manlike idea of Him. God is the infinite and Eternal One with whom we have no right to quarrel, and whose dealings with us are too high for us to judge (Ps. 139:1-6).

God's covenant with His people was established (v. 4). He had heard their cry (v. 5) and His deliverance was sure (v. 6). The only thing Moses had to do was to wait and see God work.

That word "wait" is a little one. It seems to call for no effort, to be easy of fulfillment; yet it seems to be the hardest thing for a human being to do. Men who carry the burden of active warfare with ease and with honor become discouraged and sick when they must sit in a prisoner's concentration camp and wait for deliverance.

Christians who can speak and work for God when things are active and moving become querulous and despondent when they have to wait for something to happen, or when they are laid aside for a time.

His promise is sure. That is not just a religious sentiment. It is a fact, and it is proved by history. Note that in the case of Moses—

III. History Said, "It Came to Pass the Selfsame Day" (Exod. 12:51).

Moses had to take God's word, for "the selfsame day," which we read here came later. It came in God's own time, after He had, through Moses, humiliated and broken the hard will of Pharaoh. Then He gave His people the great memorial feast of the Passover, teaching them the needed lesson that redemption is by the shedding of blood.

In that night Jehovah did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt. That deliverance was as certain the day He made the first promise to Abraham (v. 3, and Gen. 12:1-3) hundreds of years before, as it was now that it had been accomplished.

History is really God's story, revealing His outworking of His plan for mankind. The torn and blotted pages are man's handiwork. Sin and unbelief have caused him to hinder the work of God, but God is not defeated, and in the midst of man's self-created chaos, He proceeds quietly to work out His own purpose.

The many prophecies of Scripture which have been fulfilled not only prove its divine inspiration, but demonstrate its dependability. Every promise of God is "yea and amen" in Christ (II Cor. 1:20, 21). We can count on that!

WAR SAVINGS STAMPS

As we go into the third week of the drive for July in the sale of War Bonds and Stamps the report from the State office shows that the sale of bonds was satisfactory for the first week of the month, but the sale of War Savings Stamps is falling far behind the expected quota of this form of security. The County Chairman is asking every person that can possibly do so to buy at least a dollar's worth of stamps this month. The committee of women for the sale of these securities, with Mrs. Hugh Jones as chairman, will have representatives on the streets of Clanton, and in the stores during the last five days of this week and next. Your cooperation in lending your money to your government will be greatly appreciated by these good women. Please see one of them and buy a bond and some stamps.

Our boys are certainly doing a wonderful job OVER THERE, so let us do our part here. These boys must be kept supplied with all kinds of war materials. It is with your help and cooperation that they can be kept supplied. — Patterson Hicks, Acting Chairman.

C. Reese Mullins To Be Candidate County Treasurer

The political bees are beginning to buzz already for the election to be held next year.

Mr. C. Reese mullins tells us that unless he changes his mind he will be a candidate in the Democratic Primary to be held next spring, for the office of County Treasurer. Mr. Mullins states this office does not pay enough to spend a lot of money on or to have any fuss or discord over. If there ever was a time when all the people should pull together he thinks is now. He stated that he did not think that it would be wise for our party or our Democratic Executive Committee to indorse anyone Let everyone run for office that wants to run for office and lets have an honest-to-goodness, fair and impartial election, and the majority rule. This is Democratic. He thinks a man should be as honest with his sacred ballot as he is in his church affiliations, but let every fellow who wants to run, run on his own merits.

Mr. Mullins further stated that if he does decide to run that he will submit his race to all the voters of the county. All the people of this county know that Mr. Mullins managed the campaign here for Governor Sparks in 1938. He would have managed it again for the Governor in 1942 but had to decline on the account of his health at that time. Mr. Mullins states that he has now fully recovered and enjoying the best of health. Mr. Mullins further states, as we all know, that he has been in business here for the last 40 years. That he has represented some of the largest Fire and Life Insurance Companies in the business. Also the Singer Sewing Machine Company and has probably handled more than a half-million dollars during all these years and has never been short one cent.

Mr. Mullins further states that he has fought and bled for the Democratic Party for all these years but He has never run it to an extreme for he has always realized we had as good and competant men in the Republican party as we have in the Democratic party, he further stated. The only difference is letting the money power rule instead of the people which he considers the very foundation of the Democratic Party.

In conclusion, Mr. Mullins further states, that if he finally decides to make this race which he is now inclined to think he will, that he will promise the voters of this county that he will continue to go on down the same old straight and narrow trail that he has been travelling for all these years and that his platform will be condensed and will be set out in only seven words, to-wit: "Honesty first, last and all the time."

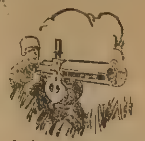
What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The 50-caliber Browning machine gun is one of the most efficient short range weapons used by U. S. Fighting forces. It is effective at ranges up to 2,000 yards and fires about 600 forty-five caliber bullets per minute.



One of these guns costs about $1,500, while a thirty-caliber machine gun costs approximately $600. Our fighting forces need thousands of these rapid-fire guns. Even a small town or community can buy many of them by uniting in the purchase of War Bonds. At least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every pay day will do the trick. *U. S. What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The Bofors anti-aircraft gun is designed for greater range and heavier calibre than the average anti-aircraft or rapid fire gun. They are mechanically intricate and more costly. The two-gun Bofors mount costs approximately $98,000 while a Bofors quad-mount runs up to $140,000.

We want our fighters to have the best equipment possible and your purchase of War Bonds will help pay for these guns, giving them an advantage over our enemies. Buy War Bonds every payday. At least ten percent of your income, or as much as you can buy will help pay the war cost, provide you with a nest egg for the future, and pay you good interest. U. S. Treasury Department

Refrigerators are out for the duration. Manufacturers have now tooled their plants for production of war materials. Common-sense folk, however, are saving now, not spending, and building up a fund for purchase of refrigerators and other domestic needs through investment in U. S. War Bonds.

Your Money put into War Bonds today will bring you back $4 for $3 at maturity. So start saving for those domestic needs when you will be permitted to buy them. Join the Payroll Savings Plan at your office or factory and let's all "Top that Ten Percent." U. S. Treasury Department

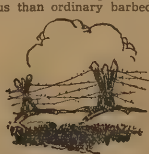
Barbed wire used by Uncle Sam's fighting forces is vastly different from that used on American farms. Army and Marine barbed wire is much heavier and the barbs, about three inches in length, are more vicious than ordinary barbed wire.



The Marine Corps pays fifty cents for each twelve yards, or 36 feet of this specially manufactured barbed wire. The Army and Marine Corps needs thousands upon thousands of feet for defensive warfare. Your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps will insure sufficient quantity for their needs. Invest at least ten percent of your wages in War Bonds every pay day.

Dixie Cafe Under New Management

The Dixie Cafe, long known in Alabama and the South for fine food has changed hands again. This time the war was responsible. Melvin Mims who has operated the Dixie very successfully for the past several years was called to the Army and his business was purchased by the Foshee Brothers.

Luther Foshee is well known in Central Alabama. He was in the automobile business here many years and has a host of friends here. For the past 18 months he has been employed at Childersburg.

The other brother member of the Firm is C. D. Foshee, also an old resident of Chilton County but has been away until recently doing construction work.

It was announced that the Dixie would continue under the same name and serve the same fine foods as in the past, however the interior will be repainted and redecorated in the near future.

R. L. Henley Uses Farm To Aid In War Effort

Mr. R. L. Henley of Route 3, Clanton, Alabama, is making a great contribution to the war effort in the way of food production.

According to Mr. Henley's statement, he was faced with the problem of making good on his farm this year or losing everything that he had. He was placed in this position as a result of several bad crop years. He has been able to carry on his farm operations through these lean years of production by securing financial aid from the Farm Security Administration.

After giving much thought to his case and discussing his problems with the FSA supervisors he decided not to plant any cotton at all this year. The labor shortage was a prime factor in making him decide these. His entire farm has been devoted to the production of food and feedstuff this year; at which a creditable job has been done.

By thus changing his farming practices he has not only helped in the production of the vitally needed food products, but he has also been able to meet all of his financial obligations as well. At the present date he has marketed approximately $3,000 worth of food crops. Of this amount about $2,500 has been applied on old debts, and he will have enough capital to finance his farm operating expenses next year. Along with his splendid job of food production, he will also produce sufficient feedstuff for his livestock.

The Henley's are going a long way toward living at home. Mrs. Henley is doing a lot of canning, and plans to increase the size of their laying flock to 100 hens this fall. They will have a number of hogs to market this fall, after keeping a sufficient number for home use.

This farmer and wife have demonstrated what can be done in many cases where financial and encouragement are given such as FSA gave this family during the years when they made poor crops and they are to be commented on the fine job they have done in producing food for the war effort.

Plans Completed For County Wide Revival At Court House

Plans for the County-wide revival meeting which begins at the Courthouse auditorium at Clanton have been completed. The Evangelist, Hardin Pearson is urging all pastors and churches of the town and county to attend the first service if possible.

Evangelist Pearson's first message, "Arouse - Awake." If you are interested in seeing a great awakeing on the part of the church people, line up with God and righteousness in this campaign. Old time Gospel singing by the congregation will be a feature of these services.

Services will continue on Sunday night at 8:30 and continue through the week every night.

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an opportunity for employment in the position of Clerk at $900.00 per annum in the office of the War Price and Rationing Board at Clanton, Ala.

Applications for this position may be obtained from and must be filed with the Commission's local Civil Service Secretary, Reese G. Mullins, Postoffice, in the Clanton, Ala. Postoffice not later than the hour of closing business August 10, 1943.

Applicants must be citizens of the United States not less than sixteen years of age.

Appointments in the Federal service are made in accordance with War Manpower Commission policies, directives, regulations, and employment stabilization plans. This means generally that persons employed in certain activities or occupations may be required to obtain statements of availability from their employers or from the United States Employment Service before they can be appointed. An offer of Federal appointment will be accompanied by instructions as to what steps the person must take to secure necessary clearance Statements of availability should not be secured until an offer of appointment is received.

Applications are not desired from persons engaged on war work unless the position applied for calls for the use of higher skills than the worker is now using in his present employment.

Qualified persons are urged to apply for this position.

TEETH NOT SO GOOD

The teeth of 52,547 Alabama school children were examined last year in the State Health Department's dental hygiene program, and only 7,754 of them, or about 15 per cent, were found to be in satisfactory condition.

Pilots Meet With Mrs. Laura Little

The regular meeting of the Pilot Club was at the home of Laura Little on last Tuesday night, with Mamie C. Smith as co-hostess.

According to the Clubs year book Sophia Jones was hostess for this meeting as she had to be out of town Laura very kindly offered her home. Mattie Jo Barber gave a very interesting and enlightening talk on "Women In Industry," presenting both sides, leaving one to form their own decision.

At the close of her talk she left us with this question: "Just Which is the Most Important to the Welfare of the Home and children, Money or the Mother?"

Alabama Will Honor Molly Pitcher Aug. 7

August 7th, Alabama, along with the rest of the nation, Chilton County will honor Molly Pitcher, the Revolutionary War heroine, who so nobly dared the fire of the enemy to carry water to the men who fought at monmouth and who, when her own husband fell wounded at his cannon, took his place and fired his gun until the battle was won. For her heroism she was given a commission as Sergeant in the Army by General George Washington. Modern Molly Pitchers serve their fighting men on the production lines, in Red Cross Work, in carrying on civilian activities, and by buying and selling War Bonds and Stamps. On National Molly Pitcher Day, the War Savings workers, along with the women of the American Legion Auxiliary will take to the street corners, the store and factory entrances, and ask every person in Chilton County to buy a war stamp or bond. Each person who buys a bond or stamp will be given a Molly Pitcher Tag. This tag will be their badge of honor on a day set aside to honor one of the nation's greatest women heroines.

FRED LAWRENCE

FRED LAWRENCE IS DEAD IN SOUTH PACIFIC

Word was received by Rev. and Mrs. B. Lawrence and Mrs. Fred L. Lawrence on July 17 of Fred's recent death in the South Pacific area

Fred's parents reside at Holtville. His wife makes her home at Laurionville, N. C., but was visiting his parents when word came from the War Department with information of his death.

He spent all his early life in Chilton county, where his father was a successful educator, minister, merchant, and farmer. He is the youngest of three sons of Rev. and Mrs. Lawrence. A young man of sterling character and unswerving devotion to duty, when his country called he joined the U. S. Marines. He worked himself up to a Sergeant's rating, and also rated Chief Cook. at his post somewhere in the South Pacific.

His parents and wife were informed that death came of encephalitis (brain fever), and that interment would be made at the station where death occurred, until cessation of hostilities.

Survivors include his widow, who is with his parents in Holtville; his parents; three brothers, Henry B., in service with the U S. Army; W. H. Lawrence, Childersburg, Ala.; Floyd Lawrence, Holtville, and three sisters, Avoleen, Christine and Mary Lawrence, all of Holtville.

ALABAMA QUAIL HUNTERS GIVEN 11 EXTRA DAYS

The 1943-44 State hunting and trapuing regulations issued recently by the State Conservation Director give the quail hunter 11 more days to hunt the bird than they have been allowed in the past.

The Season runs this from November 20th to February 20th. The bag limit remains the same—12 a day.

AGRICULTURE BOARD WILL MEET AUG. 10

Montgomery, Ala. — The State Board of Agriculture will meet August 10 in the office of Commissioner Joe Poole, to consider rules and regulations under the new seed law recently passed by the legislature. The public will be given opportunity to present views on any regulation under consideration, Commissioner Poole announced.

In 1942, people in the United States spent an average of $1 each in retail vitamin sales, practically all of which could have been secured by correct diets alone.

With this issue of the Chilton County NEWS, the publishers of this newspaper announce the launching of a new and interesting feature which we feel sure will meet with the hearty approval of all the people of this entire territory. A Grand Baby Competition to determine who are the popular and prominent little ones of Chilton county and abutting territory.

It is to be for little ones up to five years of age, and at the conclusion of the campaign, we are going to distribute the generous and alluring sum of $300.00 to the Babies who shall be declared the winners of this appealing newspaper feature.

For years now, it has been the practice to conduct campaigns to determine whom shall be crowned with special honors as representating this or that commodity, or some outstanding event which needs commerating because of its significance to the community. Strange as it may seem, these affairs have always been for grownups. They have entirely overlooked the most attractive, the most interesting and the most lovable of all human personalities—A little child.

Well, now we are going to change all this and give 'Baby' the belated recognition it so justly deserves; its place in the sun, as it were; its opportunity to bid for public approval; its chance to be crowned with distinctive honors and at the same time, its opportunity to come into possession of valuable and worthwhile cash prizes.

For the next several weeks, then, the Babies are going to occupy the spotlight and everything else will have to take a back-seat. At any rate it will give us a wholesome and refreshing something to think about occasionally instead of dwelling on the somber thoughts of war and its tragedies which continually presents itself to our vision.

One of the most interesting features of this whole affair will be the publication of the Babies pictures. We want, and hope to be able to publish, the pictures of all the little ones taking part in this attractive campaign, and in this connection we trust the parents of the babies will cooperate with us to the extent of furnishing us with a good picture of their baby. If you have a photograph of the baby, please loan it to us and we promise to return it to you in the same condition as when received. If you have no photograph, a good kodak picture will serve our purpose just as well as long as the baby's little face is clear and distinct. We have engravings made from the picture and as all this takes time, the sooner we get the picture, the earlier it will appear in our paper. The picture part of this affair is entirely free to you as we pay for the engravings.

You may not have thought of this particular angle, but just the same, we have right here in this section of the state, some of the sweetest and most attractive little darlings that can be found any place in this entire country. If you have any doubts about this claim, just wait until you see their lovely little faces smiling out at you from the pages of our newspaper and we know you will agree with us.

This is going to be strictly a voting competition, it costs nothing to enter and it will be the public by their support and votes that will determine the winners at the conclusion of this stirring affair. All the babies, in this prescribed territory, up to five years of age, are eligible to compete and share in the valuable cash prizes we have provided.

The first, or Grand Prize, is $125.00, then will follow five other prizes

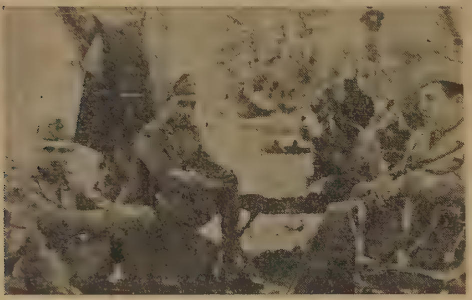
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Mussolini's Exit Marks End of an Era For Fascism; Italy Ponders New Setup; Reds Continue Strong Westward Drive; WMC Rule Effects 'Super Critical' Jobs

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



Seated at right, General Cotti-Porcinari, commander of the Napoli division of the Italian army in Sicily, fell as prisoner of war to the advancing British army. Allied armies finally encountered stiff resistance in the northeastern area.

MUSSOLINI:

No Caesar

Biggest news story of the war—that was Benito Mussolini's resignation as Italy's prime minister and strong man for 21 years. Taking his place was Fascism's shadow, Marshal Pietro Badoglio, avowedly Mussolini's bitter enemy, yet the builder of his armies and his conqueror of Ethiopia.

Mussolini left the scene with Italy's empire lost; with Axis armies pocketed in the northeastern corner of Sicily by Allied forces, and with the Italian mainland afire from bombs. As he left, King Victor Emmanuel called on all Italians to stand firm in the most fateful hour of the country's destiny. Italy again will find the road of the future, he said.

Twenty-one years ago, Mussolini took over the Italian government following a march of 8,000 of his Blackshirts on Rome. Italy writhed in disorder, her industries crippled from strikes, and her unemployed war veterans in riot. In the crisis, King Victor turned to Mussolini, and thus did the strong man come to power.

He restored order. He created public works and set up the corporate state, in which all economic groups are represented in government. He settled papal claims to the amount of 92 million dollars and recognized the Vatican's sovereignty. But it was over empire that Mussolini stumbled.

Take Up Last Line

At the beginning of the final stage of resistance in Sicily, the Axis line roughly ran from the east coast port of Catania westward to the mountains, and then curved northward to the shores of the Tyrrhenian sea.

Near Catania, strong Axis forces held firm after early tank battles had failed to pierce their lines. To the west, Canadian troops picked their way through rugged terrain to advance on the Axis outpost of Regalbuto, which huddles behind mountainous ranges.

After seizing the big Sicilian port of Palermo, Gen. George S. Patton's American Seventh army drove westward along the Tyrrhenian coast toward the last Axis defenses defending Messina, which lies at the extreme tip of the island, two miles from the Italian mainland.

German attempts to reinforce Axis troops in Sicily by means of giant Junkers and Merseberg three- and six-engined transport planes met stiff opposition from the Allies.

RUSSIA:

Reds Press In

With three columns driving in from the north, east and south, and another force swinging wide to the west to cut off the rear, Russian armies tightened their hold on the German held bulge of Orel.

The westwardly drive threatened the railroad linking Orel with the great Nazi supply base of Bryansk. Severance of the line meant interruption in the flow of supplies being shunted to German troops stubbornly resisting the Reds' three-cornered drive on Orel.

While the Russians pressed slowly against German defenses at Orel, the Nazis told of a massive Red offensive south of Lake Ladoga on the Finnish front and below Leningrad. The Germans also said strong Russian attacks at Novorossisk in the northwestern Caucasus had been repelled.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:

Jungle Fighting

Working their way through jungle brush, American doughboys braved hidden Japanese machine gun outposts to advance within range of the enemy's main perimeter of defenses around the strategic airfield of Mundo in the Solomon islands.

As the troops crept closer to their objective, the U. S. air force continued furnishing heavy support, dive-bombers roaring in to pound the Japs' nest of wooden and earthen pill boxes.

In New Guinea, Liberator and Mitchell bombers gave Salamaua a going over, dropping 250 tons of explosives in two days. As the air force softened up this important enemy base, Allied ground troops fought off Jap patrols to advance eastward to the town.

MANPOWER:

'Super-Critical'

Over and above the 3,000 jobs that the War Manpower commission has designated essential, it has prepared a list of "super-critical" occupations for which draft boards will be asked to give especial consideration, WMC Chairman Paul V. McNutt announced.

The new "super-critical" list will not replace the old list, McNutt explained, but rather will be given preferential ranking above it. Draft boards will not be ordered to exempt workers in the "super-critical" occupations because the boards have this power under law.

The new "super-critical" classification followed WMC plans for allowing workers to transfer to other plants to receive higher pay for the same jobs.

HARVEST:

Production Down

Despite unfavorable spring weather, the nation's farmers have all but completed their harvesting of spring wheat, being but only one week behind normal schedule, according to federal crop statisticians. But as of July 1, total production for 1943 was estimated at 790 million bushels against 981 million last year.

Only in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio did harvesting fall back to any extent. Through Oklahoma, Texas and Kansas the wheat was cleaned up according to schedule, and work in Nebraska and Missouri progressed favorably.

Estimations of the winter wheat harvesting showed Kansas with a crop of 150 million bushels, against 206 million last year; Nebraska with 53 million against 68 million; Oklahoma with 32 million against 57 million, and Texas with 33 million against 47 million. Illinois with 17 million against 12 million was credited with the biggest advance over last year.

RATIONING:

Mark Up Butter

To keep purchases in line with supplies, the point value of butter was raised by 2 to 10 points per pound for the period ending September 4, the Office of Price Administration announced. The action followed civilian purchases in excess of allotments during the last few months.

Housewives switching to other fats will be able to obtain shortening, lard and cooking and salad oils at one point less. Margarine remains unchanged at four points.

POLAND: The German army is constructing a line of fortifications in Poland, 400 miles back from the present Russian battle lines.

BOMBERS:

Strike Nazi Industry

Heavy round-the-clock raids on Hitler's European fortress got under way again with a U. S. raid on the Nazis' Norwegian submarine port of Trondheim and a neighboring aluminum plant.

No sooner had the bombers alighted than fresh squadrons took off, this time for northern Germany. The RAF pointed bomber noses toward the great North sea port of Hamburg and dropped 2,300 tons of explosives. Another British force struck hard at the gigantic Krupp arms works at Essen.

Following in the wake of the British, U. S. airmen worked over Hamburg in daylight. Continuing the concentrated assault on German industry, other formations plastered rubber factories at Hanover and the Focke-Wulfe aircraft assembly plant at Warnemuende. Shipyards were hit at the German naval station of Kiel.

Almost 60 Allied planes were lost in the raids, the bombers encountering heavy anti-aircraft fire to a height of from 20,000 to 35,000 feet, and fleets of fighters.

95 Billion!

The American home front's tremendous effort is best grasped by congressional appropriations for U. S. war spending for the next 12 months.

Approximately 88 billion dollars was appropriated for expenditure on tanks, planes, guns, etc., and for the purchase of food, etc., for our embattled allies. In the fiscal year ended last June, 73 billion dollars was spent for war purposes.

Besides the 88 billion dollars for the war, an additional seven billion dollars was appropriated for other government expenditure. Of the total amount, three billion dollars will be used for payment of interest on the public debt, which amounted to 140 billion dollars last June.

All told, government expenditures have been estimated at 95 billion, 330 million dollars for the next 12 months, greater than the total national income in peak years of prosperity.

WHEAT:

Stocks for Feed

Feeling that the present corn shortage is the gravest emergency facing the country, and that any future civilian wheat scarcity can be met out of Canada's record production, the Commodity Credit corporation has determined to raise practically all limits on its sales of wheat stocks for feeds.

Under the new regulation made in agreement with the War Food administration, only 30 days trade and 90 days feeders inventories will be held. The CCC had 215 million bushels of grain with which to start the program, and it was expected that stocks would be augmented by purchases of excess elevator supplies. Since wheat generally was selling above the CCC loan rate, it was not thought that stocks could be built from this source.

At the same time, CCC divulged it was seeking to import additional grain from Canada by rail. Approximately 154 million bushels are to be shipped over the Great Lakes. Coastal shipment from Canada to American Pacific ports also was being sought.

TREASON:

Broadcasters Named

Eight American citizens charged with broadcasting Axis propaganda from Germany and Italy were indicted by a federal grand jury for treason. To secure the indictment, the government presented phonograph recordings of talks, and acquaintances identified their voices.

Among the eight, six of the accused are native Americans and two are naturalized citizens of German birth. Most prominent of those indicted is Ezra Pound, 57-year-old poet and writer who has lived in England, France and Italy since 1911. He was said to be the only one of the group broadcasting from Italy.

Three of the group, including a woman, were former newspaper reporters. According to the indictments, the broadcasts included denunciation of communism and the Jews, criticism of the American war program, and praise of Germany and Italy.

STRIKE:

Test New Law

First test of the new congressional anti-strike law came with a Pennsylvania grand jury's indictment of 30 United Mine Workers local officials and members for conspiring and acting to interrupt production in government-held pits. Conviction on the charges would make the defendants liable to fines up to $5,000 or sentences up to a year in jail.

No Longer Raise Sitting Ducks, but Screaming Eagles

NEW YORK.—Our newest battleships mount such firepower of such diverse calibers, that they can pound a mountain to rubble or plunk a humming bird at fifty feet. Rear Admiral William H. P. Blandy puts it another way. He says they have finally caught up with the parade; meaning they are no longer, as was Britain's Repulse, a sitting duck for any dozen dive bombers.

Of all our admirals Blandy should know. He is chief of the bureau of ordnance and has been fathoms deep in gun design and manufacture, fire control, armor and projectiles for a quarter century.

At Annapolis he was top man of his class and even then tops in ordnance. He has the Class of 1871 Sword to prove it. He was barely graduated when he wanted to marry. She was Roberta Ames, just about Washington's prettiest in 1913. However, he was sent on a cruise and the wedding waited for almost a year.

His present post, at fifty, is the cap sheaf on a single-minded career. Besides that sword he holds commendations for increasing the accuracy of fire of his destroyer squadron. And while he was gunnery officer on the New Mexico she won pennants, gunnery "E's," trophies and cups, everything in sight.

He has been ordnance chief since 1941. About then world events made it plain that this country was going to need a man who could fix its battleships so they could pound mountains to rubble and plunk humming birds at fifty feet.

Stick to War Now, Better Peace Later, GFWC Head Says

ONE national leader who is not writing a peace plan at this early date is the Junoesque president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. She counsels that peace will get better treatment in the years ahead if her followers limit themselves these days to understanding the war effort and helping it along.

She is Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Baltimore, Sara to Maryland's club women, five feet eleven inches of executive vacuum cleaner, but a model wife also who wouldn't be coaxed out of domesticity until she had phoned her husband and he had said it was all right with him.

Mrs. Whitehurst has been federation president since '41. She was headed for medicine, with special notions about psychiatry, until she met John L. eighteen years ago. Since then she has dug into national and international affairs and, when she counsels her followers, she does not need to read from a book.

She is that rare bird, a woman who does not like to shop. Something sensibly dark and tailored for the street, something light and lacy for evening sums up her specifications when she does her semi-annual buying. Plus pearl earrings: "I hardly feel dressed without them."

Pearl earrings and all she is a good cook. Waffles, spaghetti and what lobster newburg! She is a good musician, too, piano and pipe organ and likes Beethoven and Tschaikowski. Sinatra? Hardly! She can also knit and crochet a blue streak, and serves on a raft of boards to boot.

Home to Guide Us Through Highly Dramatic Days

EVER since the present war began H. Freeman Matthews has been in the thick of things on the diplomatic front in Europe. Now that events are moving toward a climax on that beleaguered continent, he's coming home to head the European division of the state department. With him he's bringing plenty of knowledge gained first hand both in France and England.

For a time after the fall of France, as charge d' affaires he ran the American embassy in Vichy. That was after Ambassador Bullitt left and before Admiral Leahy checked in. After the naval man's arrival, Matthews sat in on all the talks with Petain and the late Admiral Darlan, serving as interpreter for Leahy. Late in '41 he was shifted to London and he was counsellor of the U. S. embassy there when the call home arrived.

This forty-four-year-old native of Baltimore is a career diplomat. He received his initial assignment just three years after leaving Princeton and its Quadrangle club in 1921. He was sent first to Budapest. Later he turned up in Bogota, Colombia. Jefferson Caffrey was there at the time, and he liked his young aide so well that he took him along with him when he was made ambassador to Cuba. Those were hectic days down in Havana and some thugs once attacked Matthews' automobile, but fortunately he was elsewhere at the time.

When the soldier talks about "the skipper" he means his captain, the head of his company. And that's just what the title "captain" means. It comes from the Latin word "caput" meaning "head." Another leader high in the Army man's favor is Camel cigarettes—they're first choice with men in the Army. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) When you're sending gifts from home, keep in mind that a carton of cigarettes is always most welcome. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. PIANO BARGAINS

● June 15, 1943, the Piano Manufacturers had a meeting in New York City and had a Government man there to explain to them when they might look forward to manufacturing pianos. He told them not until the war is over. So E. E. Forbes, Sr., decided to go to Chicago and buy a large stock of good used pianos. He succeeded in buying 150 grands, uprights and players. Some of them from fine homes and some look just like new and are as good as new. He had to pay more for these than he used to buy them for. He says that they are getting scarce and if you read this ad and will need a piano within 2 years, you had better buy it now while you can get one. After this year you will have a hard time finding a piano that will suit you. You can buy one of the Forbes rebuilt pianos on easy terms. It will last you a life time. One year after the war is over you can trade it back to Forbes on a new piano if you want to.

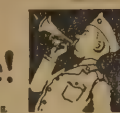
See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove



THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former feature editor of the Charlotte (N. C.) News, has been inducted into the army and completed the first few weeks of his training at Fort Bragg. Before getting into the army, Hargrove advises selectees to "paint the town red." Once in, "the first three weeks are the hardest" so keep "an open mind." Hargrove has had plenty of trouble learning the fundamentals of army life and as a result has spent a good share of his time on KP duty. Classified as a cook he thinks it's good experience. His sergeant doesn't agree. Hargrove has learned a large portion of army slang and is about to enlighten the civilian on this score.

CHAPTER VI

When Junior comes home from camp on furlough or for the week-end, he probably will throw out his chest, pull his shoulders almost out of joint, and speak a sort of jargon entirely unintelligible to you. There is no cause for alarm; Junior is merely exaggerating to show off his familiarity with military life.

You will not be consoled by this knowledge when he begins speaking this unknown tongue. In order to understand some of his conversation, you might tear out this page and tuck it away in the drawer with your recipes and patterns.

Goldbricking is an Army term signifying in a word, loafing. In its strictest sense, it means avoiding your fair share of the work, thus making the load harder for the other boys. When Junior uses the term, however, it merely means hiding from the work in the first place or stretching an easy job out to make it last as long as possible.

Batting the breeze is the military equivalent of "bullshooting."

Police, as nearly as it can be explained, means "to clean up" or "to keep clean." Examples are kitchen police, or kaypee, canteen police, and police the area.

Fatigue duty is work that is not actual military training, but a part of the turnabout method of getting the dirty work done. Fatigue clothes are the blue denims worn for extra duty. Regular uniforms are called OD's, an abbreviation for "olive drab."

GI is short for "Government Issue." GI soap is the yellow laundry soap, a GI brush is a hard-bristle scrubbing brush, and a GI haircut is the regulation style which sacrifices two-thirds of Junior's wavy locks to cleanliness and sanitation.

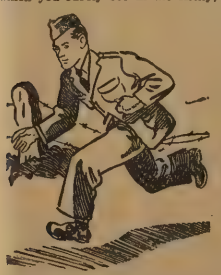
The PX is the post exchange, or canteen, a co-operative enterprise which sells practically everything the soldier needs. Three times a month, canteen books of credit tickets may be obtained in denominations from one to five dollars. Ten per cent of the proceeds from these are returned to the battery fund, which is used to buy nonessentials for the battery.

The old man is the battery commander, who may also be referred to among yourselves as the BC or the skipper. The top kick is a first sergeant, the chief of the battery's noncommissioned officers.

Jawbone is an apt word meaning "credit." A Jawbone corporal is an acting corporal, who has neither the rating nor the pay of a corporal.

Over the hill is an artistic way of referring to unauthorized absence. This is another expression for AWOL.

Food is chow or mess. Stew is slum or slumgullion. Salt pork, which you rarely see in the Army, is called lamb chop. "They lam it against the wall to get the salt out of it and then they chop it up into the beans."



"Over the hill is an artistic way of referring to unauthorized absence —AWOL."

To fall out, soldiers vacate the barracks quickly, before the sergeant gets really mad. To fall in, they take their places in ranks.

A yardbird is the lowest form of animal life in an Army camp. Under the common law, he is rated as one rank below a buck private. The yardbird, for this misdeed or that shortcoming, spends most of his time in menial labor about the battery area.

When Junior refers to a yardbird, you will notice, he is invariably speaking of someone else.

It was our afternoon off and we were lying around in our barracks, too lazy to dress for a movie or a trip to the Service Club. All of us were, that is, except Private Zuber. With an enthusiasm and energy foreign to a cook's afternoon off, Zuber was applying a blinding glaze to his shoes. This finished, he connected an iron and began sharpening the creases in his trousers.

"Going somewhere, I take it," asked Private Clarkin, the Jersey milkman.

Private Zuber grinned happily, and nodded. He donned his fresh clothing, gave his necktie several unnecessary tugs, and combed his hair for the twelfth time.

Private McGlauflin, late of the Minneapolis bar, laid down his copy of the Bartender's Guide and sat up on his bunk. "Didn't you know?" he asked. "Zuber's girl's come down from Rochester. They're going riding."

"That's a fine thing," crowed Clarkin. "I haven't been for a spin since I've been here. Get your shoes on, Hargrove. And straighten your name plate, McGlauflin. We must make a good impression on our guest . . ."

"You sure are a pleasant surprise, ma'm," Clarkin prattled on to the pretty girl in the front seat. "Fancy Ben Zuber even knowing anybody like you. You should see the homely looking things he brings to the dances here."

She smiled a polite thank-you at Clarkin and glanced sharply at Zuber. "I never could even get him to the dances at home," she said. "He wouldn't even look at the girls at all. Would you, dear?"

"No, ma'am," groaned the martyred Zuber, who spent almost all his evening hours writing letters to Rochester.

"Just to look at Ben," said McGlauflin, "you'd never think such a quiet-seeming boy could raise so much devil. It constantly amazes me."

Private Zuber's girl friend's smile was not so spontaneous this time, and there was a baleful gleam in her glance at poor Benjamin. "What have you been doing, dear?" she asked with terrible gentleness.

Private McGlauflin went on glibly. "Tell her about the time you got tight in Fayetteville and tried to take the policeman's hat away from him, Ben!"

The one-girl audience was shocked. Her expression, as she looked at Zuber, was one of anxiety and doubt.

Clarkin began again. "And the terrible fight he had that time—ooof!" McGlauflin gave him a hearty dig in the ribs. To make sure that it had registered and created sufficient horrible curiosity in the feminine mind, he repeated it.

Private Zuber, guiltless but helpless, drooped his shoulders further as the terrible ride continued. "Here's the Service Club, dear," he finally said. "Shall we go in and have something to drink?" He gave the three of us a pathetically beseeching glance.

"They don't sell lemon extract in there, Zuber," I suggested. Clarkin, McClauflin and I exchanged looks that purposed to show a hidden knowledge of another terrible paragraph in the collapse of the soul of Benjamin Zuber.

We sat at a table in the Service Club drinking the sodas our victim bought for us. Clarkin looked long at his glass of water.

"The sight of water," he remarked, "reminds me of what the sergeant was telling Ben last week about daily bathing."

McGlauflin took pity on the innocent Zuber, who was dying for a cause he knew not. "We'll have to be going. We have things to do and I imagine you two young people want to enjoy each other's company."

"Yes," said Zuber's fiancee slowly. "Ben and I have SO much to talk about." Private Zuber shuddered and his shoulders slumped tragically.

"We certainly have enjoyed the afternoon," crowed Clarkin. "Lovely time."

One of the first people I looked up when I went to Charlotte on leave was Ward Beecher Threatt, who writes a column of sorts for the Saturday edition of the Charlotte News.

"Well, Hargrove," began the postcard philosopher, "how's the Army agreeing with you? I've been aching to find out what you've been doing." This was a subtle slam at my column.

"Well, all things considered—" I began.

"Nothing like the Army," said Ward Beecher. "I wouldn't take a million dollars for the time I spent in it. Nobody'd offer me a million anyway. Have you got a rating yet?"

"Well—" I began again.

"Lord, did I have my ups and downs! Got all the way up to sergeant three times and was busted three times—for the good of the service." He paused to light another cigarette and I thought I saw an opening.

"Let me tell you about the trip over," I said. "We left the—"

"We started a crap game on the train," said Threatt, "and I had to wire home for money before I got to Rock Hill. Have you had a payday yet?"

"We'll have one—" I started.

"On that ocean voyage," he broke in, "I went for fourteen days without a cigarette. I followed one man all around the boat waiting for him to throw away a butt. Instead of throwing it on the deck, where I could have scooped it, he flung it over the rail. I followed another and just when I thought he'd be ready to throw it away, I asked him for the butt. The son-of-a-gun told me he had three different kinds of colds—and he threw his cigarette over the side. He didn't have another, he said."

"We landed at Brest," he said, "and we had to walk up one of the longest derned hills I've ever seen before we could drop our suitcases. The Frenchmen swarmed around us, selling everything from steamer trunks to fine-toothed combs. Twenty of us boys pooled our pocket money to buy a pack of cigarettes for fifty cents. What are you going to spend your first pay on?"

"Oh, I suppose I'll—"

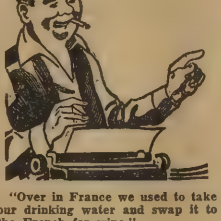
"First payday I had I went out and bought myself a pack of cigarettes and lay awake almost all night smoking them. Best cigarettes I ever tasted. By the way, how's the food at Fort Bragg?"

"I find it very—"

"Over in France we used to take our drinking water and swap it to the French for wine. It was a toss-up which tasted worse—our water or their wine. Ah, them was the days! Like your uniform?"

"I think it's very—"

"Nothing like the ones we wore. There we were, in the hottest part of the summer, with these woolen OD's, Russian high collars, wrap-around leggins, and all the works. How do you like my costume?"



"Over in France we used to take our drinking water and swap it to the French for wine."

"Well, confidentially—"

"This field cap ain't the one they issued to me. I lost that one and had to help myself to this one. I wouldn't tell you where I got it. I used to get into more potato-peeling work for not getting this collar fixed right, too. Looks right distinguished, doesn't it?"

I looked at the modernistic clock on Ward Beecher's parlor table. I took my eyes off it quickly, lest he tell me again about how he won it at the firemen's convention.

"Well, Ward," I said, jumping desperately into a gap in the conversation. "I've enjoyed talking to you about my life in the Army, but I have to get along uptown again. I've got—"

"Sure thing, fellow," said the man of letters; "it certainly is interesting to hear from a soldier in this army. I could listen to you for hours."

When a sergeant tells you that it's the little things in life that are important, he's not just saying it. A sergeant who impresses that one corny slice of homely philosophy upon a rookie's mind is giving him one of the most important lessons of his Army life.

The soldier has a thousand and one small things to remember in his everyday life. Most of these he forgets at least once before a non-com etches them vividly on his mind with kitchen duty.

At retreat, the afternoon inspection of the soldiers, I always check everything before I fall out for the onceover. Are my shoes shined? Is my rifle cleaned and oiled? Is my name plate pinned straight over my left shirt pocket? Can I get by with this morning's shave? Do I need a haircut? Are all my pockets buttoned? When I make sure that everything is as it should be, I sigh with satisfaction and fall out.

The battery assembles in a neat, precise picture of mass formation. The battery commander orders the top kick to "Prepare the battery for inspection!" The top kick opens the ranks and the lines straighten out to perfection. From where I stand, everything looks perfect.

The battery commander begins his inspection. Until he gets almost to me, I feel almost smug to think that for once I've stood retreat and not fallen short somewhere. To bask in my own perfection, I sneak a forbidden peek at my gun and uniform.

Then, to my horror, I see two shiny strands of stainless steel just below my belt—the chain on that dadblasted dollar watch! Your whole day can be spoiled by doodads such as that marring the neatness and simplicity of your uniform. Back to the kitchens, Dulcy!

There's one good thing, however, about forgetting to take off your nonkosher watch chain for retreat, or to put on your leggins for reveille, or to straighten the shoes under your bunk! After the first time, you remember them!

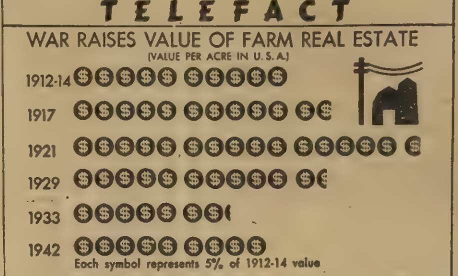
Fear of Farm Land Boom Adds to Inflation Worry

Official Figures Show Agricultural Unit Values Have Increased 20 to 24 Per Cent in Year.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.



WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

For many months now, government offices and conference rooms, no matter how they might echo with glowing reports from the home or the battle front, have never been quite free from a ghost. It hovers in the corner and sends chills down every spine—it is the ghost of Old Man Inflation, trying to come back to the scene of his crimes in the roaring twenties.

The Office of War Information has just issued a warning that this specter may appear in his most frightful form if we are not careful. The fat pay envelope is the inflation danger you hear most about. But there is a worse one, namely, a farm land boom. So far, there has been no spectacular rise in farm land prices but a dangerous trend has been discovered in some states and the bureau of agricultural economics is decidedly worried. Here are some figures.

Up 20 Per Cent

As of March 1 of this year, increases in farm land values over those of the previous year were 20 to 24 per cent.

In September, 1941, I wrote in these columns:

"Money to burn!

"And the burning question is how to stop the conflagration before it starts. The chief danger is another prairie fire of farm land speculation such as started in Iowa in World War I . . . Today, two years after the present war started, farm land prices are up 1 per cent . . ."

Remember, that was written in September, 1941. Well, steps were taken to prevent speculation then and they met with success. However, as we have seen by comparing figures, land prices in some states have now increased considerably. That is natural for much has happened since 1941. In 1942, as the Office of War Information points out, "for the first time in 20 years, the annual average of farm prices reached parity with other prices." Since the outbreak of the war, the average of farm prices has risen more than 90 per cent, and farm income by about 80 per cent while the average prices paid by farmers, including interest and taxes, has increased about 25 per cent.

Farm income was around 19 billion dollars in 1941—it will be about 22 billion for 1943.

That means, of course, that the farmer has money to spend and it is natural that land values would rise to some degree. As I said, they have gone up as high as 24 per cent in some states and less than 6 per cent in only six states. Those figures, says the bureau of agricultural economics "bear watching"! It is also reported that bankers in some parts of the Middle West believe that in some cases, the land values have risen beyond their real worth based on the long-time earning capacity of the land. That, if it is true, of course means that right now some farmers are buying land that won't pay for itself.

It is reasonable to suppose that they are not members of that unhappy group of 85,000 farm owners who met Old Man Inflation before and who lost their property under foreclosures in the decade that ended in 1939. If they are, they deserve to suffer again. But the unfortunate thing is that when the farmer loses, the rest of the country does, too. We have struggled through minor industrial panics, as we used to call them, but when the farm goes, it means that things are in such a way that there is no stopping until everybody touches bottom.

Campaign Worked in '41

The article which I wrote in 1941 reported a meeting here in Washington of mortgage bankers, insurance people, farm organization representatives and others who were urged by the Farm Credit administration to make normal appraisals of land. Apparently they did a pretty good job. Meanwhile, an educational campaign was started urging the farmer, instead of rushing out and buying land with the first money he got as income increased, to pay off his debts. It was gratifying to see the results. In the next year (1942) the net reduction of mortgages was 360 million dollars as against an average of 120 million reduction over the three preceding years. Of course, there is nothing Old Man Inflation hates worse than seeing debts paid up.

Another thing which has helped the present situation is the fact that the farmers who are buying land now usually put up a large initial cash payment. In other words, they are avoiding future debts and that is another thing, of course, which is equally unpleasant to Old Man Inflation.

There is nothing to stop the farmer from speculating in land if he wants to, buying on a margin the way the gamblers used to do on the stock exchange. Now such transactions are considerably limited by law but there is no law to keep a farmer from gambling if he doesn't know any better.

'Psychology for The Fighting Man'

I have just been reading a little booklet called "Psychology for the Fighting Man." It is one of those books published primarily for the soldiers, and every soldier able to read, ought to have it. It has 20 chapters, each written by a well-known psychologist or expert in his line. Any chapter can be read separately and they are all highly interesting. Familiarity with them will make any man a better soldier and a better leader. The chapter on mobs is only one. It tells how and why mobs form, what starts a panic and how to stop one.

But here are a few of the other topics I found exceedingly interesting:

Psychology and combat
Seeing in the dark
Color and camouflage
Food and sex as military problems
Differences among races and peoples and many others.

Simply-told psychology.

In this war, a man needs all the helps of that kind that he can get for the contrast between army life and civilian life is greater than ever.

This book, "Psychology for the Fighting Man," is put out by a non-profit corporation — the Infantry Journal, here in Washington. It costs only a quarter. It is for the soldier, sailor, private or general, ensign or admiral. And it would be a good idea for a lot of next of kin to read this book, too. It might help them to understand what the soldier is up against.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

In addition to the two pairs of shoes issued every American soldier on entering the service, three extra pairs must be available in reserve, and two more pairs in process of manufacture.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

San Francisco, Calif.
July 25, 1943.

To The Editor of The Chilton County News.

Dear Editor:

I received my copy of the Chilton County News last Thursday. It was a week in reaching me but it looked good to me. It was like getting a letter from home.

Will you please allow me space in the good old Chilton County News for just a few lines to my dear old Alabama friends.

I arrived here o. k. two weeks ago today and after all the warm weather we had been having in good old Alabama I almost froze on my arrival to San Francisco.

Don't let anyone kid you that California has beautiful sunshine all the time, for it sure doesn't.

The sun was shining here this a. m. and it was comfortable with a spring coat. But this p. m. as the tide comes in a nice fur coat would be more comfortable But I'm not kicking it, I like my home for the duration just fine, but am looking forward to being back in good old Chilton County again some day and enjoy a few more good cottage prayer meetings.

Friends, all of you write to me. For you know letters from home would look good. I'm waiting for my ship to come in.

The baby was sick last Thursday and my little daughter 6, (Mary Lou), said Mother send for Dr. Moore, He will make her well.

Well friends, I guess I'd better knock off for this time so I will go, hoping to hear from all of my friends and loved ones real soon.

I am, Yours truly,
Just Lucile.

My address is:
Mrs. R. M. Kemp, 1677 Bush St. San Francisco, 9 California.

"IT IS REQUIRED IN A STEWARD, THAT HE BE FOUND FAITHFUL"

(From The Baptist Messenger)

" 'God crown thy good with brotherhood.' What an opportunity we had! And how miserably we have failed! Ingratitude, pride, and selfishness have led to ruthless exploitation, to gross injustices, to vast fortunes on the one hand, to slavery on the other hand. Ruthlessly we have deprived large numbers of our commonwealth of their rightful heritage. property rights have become more sacred than human rights. Carelessly and with unprecedented shortsightedness we stripped our hills of their forests without making provisions to replace them.. For the sake of driving up prices we have resorted to the method of creating a state of scarcity. We dumped large quantities of food into rivers and lakes, permitted fruit to rot on the trees and potatoes to go to waste in the ground. We plowed under cotton, cut down fruit trees, wasted coal and oil—all for the sake of profits. At the same time, we permitted millions of people to live in dire poverty. Why did we do it? Because we forgot that God is the giver and that we are stewards."

We wish through this paper to acknowledge and express our appre- and sympathy shown us in the recent deat ho four brotehr and uncle. We also thank you for the beautiful flowers. Tahnking you each and everyone. — The Baker Family.

War Bonds should mean something more to you than just "a good sound investment." Figure it out yourself.

ALMOST as much a part of most Southern villages as the Court House, itself, is the bulk storage plant at the edge of town bearing the old familiar sign: STANDARD OIL COMPANY. Wherever people congregate and work and live, there you will find the tanks, the office and the yard of an Agent of this Company.

The Agent is a part of the community. He is neighbor, friend and fellow-townsman. And to the community HE is the Standard Oil Company.

He lives "on the ground." His feet are on the ground. And that may explain how it is that Standard Oil can and does keep so close to the interests of every locality it serves. Our aims and actions are deep-rooted in the very soil of every Southern County.

The people of the South make the South. We are proud to be one of them by reason of our sixty genial years in their midst.

NOTICE — GARDENERS

Victory gardeners saving seed for the first time this year may obtain helpful suggestions on harvesting and storing from P. H. Smith, County Agent.

Since next year's victory gardens will depend to a great extent on seeds saved from this year's vegetable crops, the Agent urges gardeners to save and store every seed possible.

It will be good economy to save seed, store them properly and label the containers, Mr. Smith advised. Among the seed to be saved from the home garden are: Asparagus, beans, lima beans, corn, cucumbers, egg plant, kale, lettuce, cantaloupe, mustard, okra, pepper, squash, tomatoes, watermelons and cowpeas.

Gardeners needing assistance in saving and storing these seeds are urged to contact the County Agent.

DAIRY COWS GIVE MORE MILK BY BETTER FEEDING

If every dairy cow in Chilton county would produce an extra glass of milk each day, the total increase at the end of the year would be enormous, County Agent, P. H. Smith, says. This can be accomplished by better feeding and management the agent declares.

Since cow numbers increase slowly, we must depend largely upon getting more milk from the cows we now have, at least for some time. Here are a few suggestions on how to increase milk production during hot weather.

First, there is the importance of water — good clean, fresh water. Many dairy cows will drink from 100 to 150 pounds of water on hot days, and if they do not get plenty, milk production will decrease.

Second, shade is important. The shade should be near the water supply.

Third, flies may cause a decrease in milk during the summer months, and every effort should be made to control this pest.

Dairymen often overlook the fact that summer grass is much lower in feeding value, especially protein, than Spring grass. The remedy is to have some other grazing patches of peas, lespedeza, kudzu sudan grass or others.

CULLING HENS

In culling hens it is highly important that these that are diseased be removed along with non-producers points out P. H. Smith, County Agent

A close eye examination plays an important part in controlling fowl paralysis, long a scourge and the costliest poultry disease, points out the County Agent. One of the signs of this disease is a grey eye with irregular pupil. In addition the eye may be "fishy" or bulging.

Lame birds that show no foot injuries should be removed too, as suspected carriers of fowl paralysis. The diseased birds may lay for a while but eventually they lose weight and go out of production.

The majority of fowl paralysis cases occur in birds from four to twelve months of age, the County Agent declared. Since the disease affects many birds just as they begin to lay it is costly to the farmer and should be controlled.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The giant four-motored Navy Patrol Bombers are the world's most powerful planes. They cost approximately $700,000 each. The Navy also has a lighter Bomber called the Scout Bomber which costs about $143,000 apiece.

The battle for Britain was almost lost because England had none of these giant four-motored planes with which to fight back. We need thousands of them and they are coming off the assembly lines in our production plants at a high rate of speed today. You can help buy these for your Navy by purchasing War Bonds and Stamps every pay day. Put at least ten percent into Bonds or Stamps and help your county go over its Quota.

Can you qualify for the WAVES?
Check your qualifications against these requirements

CITIZENSHIP—You must be a native-born American. Or you or your parents must have naturalization papers.

AGE—Between your 20th and 36th birthdays. If under 21, you must have written consent of your parents.

MARRIAGE—If married, you may enlist, provided your husband is not in the Navy. If unmarried, you may marry after you finish training, even though you do marry a Navy man.

DEPENDENTS—Women with children under 18 are not accepted.

CHARACTER—You will be asked to furnish 3 letters of recommendation from reputable citizens who know you.

EDUCATION—At least 2 years of high school or business school.

And you must pass a simple aptitude test.

EXPERIENCE—You must submit a record of your occupation since leaving school.

PHYSICAL—You must submit a health certificate from your family doctor and also pass a Navy physical examination to show you are in sound health.

HEIGHT—At least 5 feet.

WEIGHT—At least 95 pounds, with weight in proportion to general body build.

EYES—Not less than 6/20 in worst eye, with binocular vision not less than 12/20. Each eye correctable with glasses to 20/20.

HEARING—Distinguish whispered words at 15 feet.

TEETH—Must be in sound condition, or you must have satisfactory replacements.

IF YOU CAN MEET these requirements, there is a place waiting for you in the WAVES. A place as radioman, storekeeper, yeoman, parachute rigger, or some other important full-time Navy job now held by a man—a job which you can fill and release that man to fight at sea. As a member of the WAVES, you wear the same Navy blue and draw the same Navy pay (up to $126 a month, plus allowances) as America's finest fighting men. Get all the facts about this exciting service today. Ask at your nearest Navy Recruiting Station for "How to Serve Your Country in the WAVES."

TO YOUR Good Health

by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

FRESH AIR AND RAW VEGETABLES

Dr. Barton

It is unfortunate that just at the time when wartime gasoline rationing is making it necessary for many to do more walking, some of our health authorities are advising the middle-aged particularly, that they do not need daily exercise. As mentioned before, these health authorities have in mind that many of the middle-aged with failing hearts, high blood pressure and other ailments have also the idea that daily vigorous exercise is absolutely necessary for their health; in an endeavor to take this exercise they put a strain on heart and blood-vessels. These authorities would not suggest that the healthy man or woman of middle age should not take a daily walk at a leisurely rate.

Not only does the daily walk give the heart regular and rhythmical work to do, but it means the breathing in of more fresh air. Man was made to live outdoors, all his organs show this, but hours are spent indoors and minutes only are spent outdoors by most of us.

In the Journal of the Royal Institute of Public Health and Hygiene, Great Britain, Dr. Wilson Jameson, chief medical officer, ministry of health, says:

"Fresh air and fresh salads—take all you can of both should be a helpful maxim." Dr. Jameson urges people to spend as much time as possible in the open air in order that metabolism (the breaking down and building up process of the body) and bodily efficiency may be increased. The working processes of the body, the most efficient results from these processes, can be achieved without vigorous exercise. Thus another high authority warns against exercise, but here again it is against "vigorous" exercise. No Britisher "ever suggested that walking is not helpful to everybody."

Coming back to fresh air and fresh salads, this parting advice is given:

In view of the fact that if we were short of anything it is of vitamin C, it will be of great value if people will form the habit of eating a certain amount of raw vegetables with meals—almost any vegetable can be eaten raw provided it is finely chopped just before the meal.

While this raw vegetable daily, even though finely chopped, might not agree with nervous and emotional individuals, practically all others would be benefited by it.

Heart Murmur Not Important

Many practicing physicians can well remember the importance attached to heart murmurs during their student days in medicine and for some years afterward. Thus, in final examinations at college or for state board or provincial certificates, the location of the murmur on either side of breastbone, between what ribs, or distance from breastbone, whether murmur occurred during or after the first or second beat, were all considered vastly important, although the treatment of all murmurs was very much the same.

It was felt that after Dr. James Mackenzie pointed out that murmurs in themselves were not important, that it was the strength of the muscular walls of the heart that meant heart strength or weakness, the words "heart murmur" would gradually disappear. Not so, however, and today a physician mentioning the presence of a murmur always qualifies it by saying that a heart murmur always means just a small leak in one of the valves which will do no harm because the heart muscle is strong. Unfortunately this word "murmur" and "leaking heart" fastens itself on the mind of many patients and they begin to worry about their hearts.

It sometimes happens that a patient will consult a physician complaining about his heart and there are present also a murmur or some irregularity in the beat. He will complain of shortness of breath, pain under breastbone and a feeling of weakness. The physician examines the heart, notes the murmur or slight irregularity, and if not careful to make an exercise test, X-ray examination and an electrocardiogram, may treat the patient for serious heart disease. What the physician does not know is that the patient has been worrying about his heart for months, and may, unintentionally, exaggerate to some extent.

Dial Phone

By JAMES FREEMAN

Associated Newspapers—WNU Features.

WE WERE having an outdoor steak roast up at Abner Bascom's camp on Lake Winnipesaukee. It was a crisp, cool October night, with a full moon. The fire felt good and the steak tasted good and everyone was having a fine time.

About seven o'clock the telephone began to ring. It kept ringing at regular intervals.

"Sounds as though you have a dial system here," Dana Atwater said.

"We have," Abner replied. Everyone looked surprised, because you wouldn't think of a place way up here in the country having a dial system. "It's just for The Weirs though," he added. "You can only dial folks in The Weirs, and there are comparatively few." The Weirs, nearest settlement to Abner's camp, is part of the city of Laconia.

Dryson, Abner's house man, came out and said: "It was the Elton camp, Mr. Bascom. Mr. Elton himself was on the phone. He asked for help. He seemed quite desperate."

Abner scowled. "Elton asking for help? Did he say what was wrong?"

"No, sir. He was sort of gasping. He said; 'Send help, quick. Elton camp.' Then his voice trailed off and I couldn't rouse him again."

"Seems funny he wouldn't call the police if he needed help that badly," Abner remarked, still hesitating.

During the drive over Abner told me a little about Elton. It seems he was a queer old duck, a retired lawyer who owned a camp on a point of land on Dockham Shore. He spent most of his time alone, fishing. He wasn't especially well liked.

We drove through The Weirs and turned up the Alton Bay Road, entered the Dockham Shore road near the riding stables. Abner slowed his pace, for the way here was rough and narrow.

No one answered Abner's hello, and when he knocked there was no reply, either. "We'd better just go in," he said. He tried the door and it opened. We went in and almost instantly we saw the man lying on the floor. He was bound firmly and apparently had fainted.

Abner swore under his breath. "Elton!" He knelt at the prone man's side. "Get a knife, somebody! Get some water and towel! Looks like the old boy's done in."

Presently we had Elton released and were administering to him. He opened his eyes and looked up at us. Suddenly he sat erect.

"Have they gone? Have they gone? Then he seemed to recognize Abner and relaxed. "Bascom. Thank God you came."

"What happened?" Abner asked. "Take it easy. We've sent for a doctor."

Elton started up again. "Doctor! Send for the police. I've been robbed. The family silver. Worth a fortune. You know that, Bascom. You've seen it.

Abner nodded. "That's right. I have. It's worth a lot of money. How does it happen you have it up here with you? Why didn't you call the police yourself?"

It developed that Elton had sold his home in Newton and had brought most of his things of value up to the lake. Later, when he rented an apartment in Boston for the winter, he'd bring them back. He was eating his dinner when two masked men entered, he said. They asked him where the silver was. He refused to tell them and they hit him over the head. When he came to he was bound. He could see that the bottom part of the sideboard in the dining room had been opened and the box containing the silver was gone.

"I crawled over to the phone, knocked off the receiver, picked up a pencil in my teeth and dialed your number. It was the only number I knew. I couldn't dial the police, because Laconia isn't on this system."

"Smart thinking," Abner said. He looked up at me. "Dial the operator and ask her to get the police here, will you?"

"Sure," I said, and started for the phone. Ainsworth was near the phone table.

"Just a minute," Ainsworth said. He held a pencil in his hand. "This is the only pencil I could find. It was on the floor. It must be the pencil you used to dial with, Mr. Elton. Is it?"

Elton looked at the pencil. "Yes," he said, "That's it."

Ainsworth pursed his lips. "Then I wouldn't bother to dial the police. There's something wrong here." He paused. We looked at him queerly. "I've tested the spring on your dial phone, Mr. Elton. It's pretty strong. I tested this pencil by pushing my thumbnail into it. It's pretty soft. A man who held such a pencil in his teeth and exerted enough pressure to work a dial phone would necessarily leave the imprints of his teeth on the pencil. There aren't any imprints on this pencil."

We got back to Abner's a half hour later. "Are you going to do anything about it?" I asked.

"No. Why should I? When an old man like that goes so broke he has to steal from himself to collect the insurance it's pretty tough. I suggested to him that he sell his silver for what he can get. Maybe that's the answer to his problem."

Follow Rules to Make Canning Easy
(See Directions Below)

Fruit Canning

It's time now to begin putting up fruits for next winter and fall to help stretch those ration points and to make sure your family is going to get the two fruits a day required by the nutritional yardstick.

Be wise and watch the fruit trees or berry vines or markets—wherever you get your fruit—to see that you get it for your canning at just the ripe stage. Fruits should be firm-fleshed, ripe but not over-ripe and in prime condition. Remember canning does not improve any product; it merely preserves it for later use, so it follows that you get out of the can only what you put into it.

Methods for processing fruit for canning in order of their desirability are hot-water bath, pressure cooker, steam cooker, open-kettle. Although many homemakers prefer the open kettle for the fruits, the degree of spoilage is so high and the vitamin loss so great that it is less desired than processing in the jars.

Hot Water Bath.

For a hot water or boiling water bath as it is sometimes called, utilize a large deep vessel. Fit it with a rack of some kind that will hold the jars ½ inch from the bottom of the canner. Be sure the vessel is deep enough so that when the jar is immersed in the boiling water, the water comes to within 1 to 2 inches over the top of the jar.

Place jars on the rack, allowing free circulation of air between the jars. The water should be kept boiling during the entire processing period. If it boils down, particularly during some of the lengthy processing times, add sufficient boiling water to keep it at the proper height.

Oven Canning.

Many homemakers like to use the oven for canning fruits and tomatoes. This can be successful if the oven you are using is thermostatically controlled and will keep the required temperature of 250 degrees.

The jars should be set on a rack, at least 2 inches apart—starting with a cold oven. The jars should not be allowed to touch the sides of the oven. If a second batch of jars is going in after the first batch, the oven does not have to be cooled.

After the jars are placed on the rack, turn on the switch or light the oven. Start counting processing time as soon as the oven is turned on. Temperature should never exceed 250 degrees. Higher temperatures cause liquid to boil out of jars and evaporate.

Cooling and Testing Jars.

If you have used a self-sealing lid on the jars canned, do not invert them after taking from the canner. Instead, set them upright on several thicknesses of newspaper or clean towels, away from drafts and let them cool. After the jar has thoroughly cooled, remove the screw band and re-use it again and again. To test for seal, tap the lid of the jar with a spoon, and if you get a clear, high ringing note you can be certain that the jar is well sealed.

Fruits for canning are most often cold-packed, rather than hot-packed as are non-acid vegetables. Select fruit only in prime condition, ripe rather than over-ripe. Wash it thoroughly, then prepare as for table and pack in jars. Fill with hot syrup to within ½ inch of the top. Process according to the time table:

Fruit Canning Timetable.
(Time in Minutes)

Fruit	Hot Water Bath	Oven
Apples*	25	75
Apricots	20	68
Berries	20	68
Cherries	20	68
Figs	30	90
Fruit Juices	20	68
Grapes	20	68
Peaches	20	68
Pears*	25	75
Pineapple	30	90
Plums	20	68
Quinces*	35	75
Rhubarb	10	68
Tomatoes	35	75

*Pre-cook fruit in light syrup (3 cups water and 1 cup sugar boiled together 5 minutes), for 3 to 5 minutes before packing in jar.

Precook fruit 5 to 10 minutes in syrup before packing in jar.

Fruit Juices.

Many homemakers who will be unable to put up all the jellies they would like this summer may put up fruit juices and make them into jelly later. Canning fruit juices either for jelly or other uses is a fairly simple matter, and processing is usually done in a hot water bath, at a simmering temperature, 180 degrees F.

Flavor of the fruit juices depends upon the fruit selected. The juice of fully ripened fruit should be used. Partially ripened fruit lacks flavor whereas over-ripe or bruised or decayed fruit will make sterilization more difficult.

Extracting Juice.

The cold process method must not be used if the fruit is extracted for jelly making. It is far better to heat the fruit or berries. Do not add much water, particularly for soft fruits and berries. Simmer at very low heat—do not boil—until the juices start running.

Strain the fruit juices through a cotton flannel bag, and fill sterile jars to within ½ inch of the top. Adjust cap, and process in hot water bath for 30 minutes.

Working as quickly as possible will save the flavor of the juices and make it more desirable for jelly-making.

If you have a canning problem, write to Miss Lynn Chambers, Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

Lynn Says:

Canning Pointers: Most fruits are canned by the cold pack method, but apples, pears, pineapple and quinces are pre-cooked in their syrups to give them that lovely, transparent look. Most homemakers are using the light syrup—three cups water to one cup sugar—for canning.

If you can't afford any sugar, use fruit juices in place of the sugar, and then sweeten the fruit when ready to use. Or, if you can't make up all the jellies and jams because of lack of sugar, put up the juice and make it into jelly during the winter when you do have sugar.

Honey syrup may be used in canning fruits, but expect to have a slightly different flavor to the fruit and somewhat darker appearance.

Use a large kettle in cooking honey syrups because they have a tendency to boil over and foam while being cooked.

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE first picture which Katharine Hepburn will make for M-G-M under her new long-term contract will be "Without Love," in which she starred on Broadway last season; it's by Philip Barry, who wrote "The Philadelphia Story." It's one more version of the old, old tale about the young woman who marries with the understanding that the marriage is to be purely one of convenience, and then discovers that she loves the man, after all.

Until about two months ago Dick Haymes was just a chap who sang with a band—Harry James', Benny Goodman's and Tommy Dorsey's, in that order. As vocalist with Dorsey, he'd had a share in "DuBarry Was a Lady," when it was made at Metro last spring. Recently his star began to rise; he had a successful night club engagement, cut two tremendously successful records, was given stellar billing in the air's "Here's to Romance." He'll probably sign with a major studio before you read this. Somebody at Metro realized that the lad was hot stuff, and ran "DuBarry" for a look at him. Every scene he appeared in had gone to oblivion on the cutting room floor!

"For Whom the Bell Tolls" still heads the list of what New Yorkers are talking about—with the war excepted, of course. The general opinion seems to be that it is by far the best picture that has come along in 1943, worth sitting for nearly three hours to see. You'll enjoy it more if you've read the book, since it had to be changed a bit to conform to the Hays code. But on the whole it is remarkably true to the story. The cast is excellent; it was nothing short of inspiration to give Katina Paxinou the role of "Pilar." The photography, in technicolor, is some of the best that we have seen.

The 350 soldier actors of "This Is the Army" were forbidden by the war department to talk to actresses on the Warner lot while making the picture. Joan Leslie, the leading lady, couldn't understand their indifference to her. They sent a second lieutenant to her dressing room, finally, to say "My men want you to know that by unanimous vote they have chosen you as the motion picture star they'd most like to meet." After that Joan felt better.

RKO Radio announces that stage, radio, night clubs and little theaters have been combed to provide the studio with new film talent having possibilities of stardom. Edward Small, whose pictures are released by United Artists, announces that he has signed Tony Devlin, 16-year-old student of a Los Angeles high school, the first of a list which he hopes to recruit from high schools and colleges for possible motion picture careers. The talent search is on!

A complete file of the London Times for the period of the great blitz of 1940 was received by Warner Bros. for source material for the Ida Lupino-Paul Henreid picture, "In Our Time." One of the issues included an account of the death of Stanley Lupino, Ida's father, who was killed in the blitz. The famous actor was serving as a defense volunteer. Incidentally, you'll hear Ida humming one of her own songs in the picture; paid $25 for it, she sent the money to the Hollywood Canteen.

About a year ago Russell Wade was picked right out of a group of extras by RKO and given a term contract. He'll be featured in "Ghost Ship."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for August 8

GOD SHOWS HIS PEOPLE THE WAY

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 13:17-22; 15:17-22a.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my strength and song, and he is become my salvation.—Exodus 15:2.

The destinies of the nations are in the hands of God. Warriors are mighty in battle, counselors are quick to declare their wisdom, and diplomats are clever in the manipulation of wealth and people. But when they have all exercised to the limit their ingenuity and power they have only succeeded in bringing us "blood, sweat and tears" as the portion of all mankind.

Israel was about to be delivered from the bondage of Egypt, and God through His leader Moses was ready to be their guide. Even so He guides every believer in Christ. We may learn three things from this lesson.

I. God Has a Plan (Exod. 13:17-19).

There was a direct, easy road along the coast of the Mediterranean up to Canaan, but God with His pillar of cloud and fire did not lead out in that way.

How strange that He should take them by a longer, more difficult way! Not at all. He knew the danger of the easy way. It was there that the warlike Philistines would be lying in ambush. Such immediate conflict would discourage Israel and tempt them to return to the fleshpots of Egypt. So He took them the other way.

Note that God's guidance for them was one of intelligent planning, not just impulse or chance. He knew what to do, and He did it, for their good.

God has a plan, not only for the nations, but also for individuals, for your life and mine. Let us find His will for us, for it is good, acceptable and perfect (Rom. 12:1, 2).

Note the honoring of the faith of Joseph in God's promise (v. 19). The memory of his assurance was a blessing to his descendants, and they honored it and him. What will our descendants have to say about our faith in God?

II. God Provides Guidance (Exod. 13:20-22).

God's plan is made known to His people as they follow Him step by step. This means that there must be guidance, moment by moment, if His plan is to be worked out. He gives such guidance and it is only when His children fail to follow it that the pattern of life becomes confused.

The field of divine guidance is one in which Christians have widely divergent experiences. Some know the sweet, unconfused daily experience of God's hand upon them, caring for even the minor details (or are they minor?) of life. Others have known the directive power of God in some life crisis, but not in the ordinary affairs of life. Many, and perhaps most, think of divine guidance as a spiritual theory of which the preacher talks, but know nothing of it in their own lives.

What makes this great difference? Faith—or the lack of it. Those who trust God accept and receive His blessed leadership moment by moment. It is as simple as that. Others reach out and take it when the pressure of life makes them cast themselves on God. Others simply muddle along "doing their best," which is not their best, for God is not in it.

The pillar of cloud, which became luminous at night, was ideal for the guidance of Israel. It provided shade by day from the hot sun, and a sure guide in the darkness of the night.

III. God Gives Joyous Victory (Exod. 15:17-22a).

Israel soon came against the insurmountable barrier (humanly speaking) of the Red sea. Then Pharaoh, regretting that he had released them, came up after them—an impossible situation, and the people began to berate Moses. This time he stood fast in his faith and said: "Stand still and see the salvation of Jehovah"—and it came!

Then followed the song of victorious joy, which Moses wrote and the people sang. Deliverance brings joy, and forget it not, God is able to deliver those who put their trust in Him.

The application to our spiritual lives is a blessed one. Setting out on God's way does not mean that one will not have trials. They come, and quickly. We do not get farther than our Red sea when the world sees an opportunity to draw us back and comes charging at us from the rear, like Pharaoh. What to do? Trust God, and He will drown the Pharaoh who pursues you in the very Red sea which is now your difficulty. He will bring you through dryshod if you count on Him.

Fearful, fretting, fussing Christian, why not "stand still" and let God work out your salvation. You cannot bear the burdens of all the world. He can, and will set you free so that you too may go forward for Him.

OLD WASHSTAND WITH SIDE SHELVES, NEW TOP AND 4" BASE BOARD MAY BE USED IN LIVING ROOM, DINING ROOM OR ENTRANCE HALL

TODAY'S living room is often furnished with streamlined pieces that have served a more humble purpose. Almost any plain washstand or dresser may be given long smart lines by adding open shelves at the ends. Here a top of plywood with a plain moulding around the edges extends across the stand and shelves. By adding a plain baseboard and a coat of paint the piece is finished with a modern air. The paint should match the woodwork and if old hardware is removed to make way for simple new drawer pulls the screw holes should be filled with plastic wood and sandpapered before painting.

The diagram at the upper right shows how to make the wall decoration from a remnant of flowered chintz. If you use an old frame, the chintz picture may be given the appearance of an oil painting by applying several coats of varnish, allowing plenty of time for each coat to dry thoroughly.

Note: The remodeled washstand is from Book 10 of the series of homemaking booklets prepared for readers. Book 10 also contains more than 30 other things to make from things on hand and available materials. Booklets are 15 cents. Address:

Housewives Are Urged To Turn in Waste Fats

That there is an acute need for more fats and greases is emphasized in a recent statement by Donald M. Nelson, chairman of WPB.

Over 85 per cent of all glycerine produced is now used for military purposes and the need is increasing. Housewives have been most co-operative in response to appeals to save waste fats; but government surveys reveal that while six out of ten women are saving fats, only three out of ten have thus far been delivering their waste fat to meat dealer collectors.

Directions are very simple. Housewives simply strain waste fats of every kind into a clean can and, as soon as the can is full, take it without delay to a meat dealer or frozen food locker operator. Any clean can will do.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The annual consumption of gasoline on highways, which has a bearing on rubber consumption, jumped from 8,500,000,000 gallons in 1925 to 22,000,000,000 gallons in 1940. Some figures to keep in mind when gasoline shortage is mentioned today.

In general, guayule rubber has the same qualities and characteristics as plantation tree rubber, except that it has a high resin content, about 20 per cent, compared with 4 per cent in tree rubber.

The first manufacture of rubber footwear outside of the United States took place in 1856 in Scotland.

In case of ties, equal amounts will be given those tied.

Two coupons appear on another page in today's issue. One is a nomination coupon and when properly filled out with the baby's name, etc., will entitle the baby to 1,000 free votes. The other, is a coupon ballot good for 25 votes. Only 1 nomination coupon ballot will be credited to any individual baby so after the baby has been nominated, pay no more attention to this coupon. However, as many of the 25 vote coupons as you can collect, may be sent in to be credited to the baby. You will note an expiration date is on each coupon, after which they become void. Be sure and get them in before the date expires. The date will be extended from week to week so as to give you ample time to collect them and send them in before they become void.

This is going to be a mighty interesting affair, and we know all of you who have little ones eligible, will want to take part in it. If you have no baby of your own, there is sure to be some precious little one in your neighborhood, or among your kinfolks of whom you are very fond. Well, why not send in its nomination? The parents will appreciate it, we know, and at the same time you may be starting the baby on its way to winning a handsome cash prize, and a much coveted honor.

An advertisement will be found else where in today's paper, giving a list of the prizes provided, coupon ballots and other information. Turn to it and read over carefully. Then get busy with the coupons and send in the Baby's nomination and the 25 vote ballot. If convenient call at our office in person and have it all explained to you. Get in touch with your friends who take our paper and ask them to save their voting coupons for you, incidentally, you might tell them that if, and when, they pay their subscription, ask that the votes we are going to give on them be credited to your baby.

Lack of space today prevents us giving you complete details of this splendid affair, So be sure and get next week's NEWS when the whole campaign will be explained thoroughly. In the meantime, don't forget the pictures! Send them in as soon as possible as we are anxious to start the picture part at the earliest possible moment.

Thorsby Milk Plant Nears Completion

The Foremost Dairies, Inc., of the south expansion program includes development of the dairy industry in suitable sections adjacent to the Birmingham market. After extensive surveys, it was desired to erect a condensery in the heart of Chilton County, Thorsby, Ala.

Chilton County now has a population of over 8,000 with no fluid milk outlet. The Foremost Dairies plant will receive and condense up to 5,000 gallons of grade B milk daily and will also manufacture cottage cheese and butter.

Mr. James Howard is in charge of the condensery and field operations. The entire plant embraces not only the processing of dairy products but development throughout the county in the breeding of productive milk cows, thoroughbred bulls, balancing rationing, and producing feed and forage crops.

Officers of the Foremost Dairies recently visited the plant and are enthusiastic over the possibilities of milk production in this section. W. H. Harper, Vice-President, stated that the type of soil is well adapted to forage crops and permanent pastures with an ample supply of water both in wells and streams. The farm units average from 40 to 200 acres per farm, providing a strong foundation for future growth.

Milk hauling routes have already been organized, able to handle about 50 farms per route. Milk will be handled through sanitary strainers and cooled in five-gallon milk cans on the farm and either collected once or twice daily as weather conditions indicate. With the program of importing milk cows from other sections, Foremost Dairies officers feel that Chilton County can easily produce an excess of 50,000 pounds daily of grade B milk as the territory developes.

Provision will be also made for producers who desire to qualify for grade A milk production. Sour cream shipments will also be handled on the pick-up routes.

Much of the machinery and equipment is now being placed in the plant on the Montgomery highway at Thorsby. The plant will employ about five at the start and will be open doing business the early part of August.

The officers of Foremost were delighted in the fine cooperation received by the bankers, the county agent, Pat Smith, Dairy extension Professor Burns from Auburn, and many leading citizens of Thorsby and Clanton.

A large opening day rally is planned for the early part of July, the exact date will be announced later

PLAN FOR PICKING AND GINNING 1943 COTTON

Now is the time to make plans for picking and ginning the 1943 cotton crop, P. H. Smith, County Agent, points out.. Since labor is scarce, it is desirable that plans be made well in advance of the job to be done.

If the cotton remains in the field until it is seriously weather damaged it will not be suitable for the manufacture of supplies needed by the Army, the County Agent declared. If the cotton is dry when carried to the gin the ginner will usually turn out a smooth job. If it is wet from dew or rain the cotton may be roughed up a bit at the gin and its value greatly reduced.

Do You Have "WAR NERVES"?

Whether one realizes it or not, chances are that all of us are to some extent afflicted with "war nerves." Not because we fear the outcome of the war, but as a result of anxiety about the safety of some loved one and the yearning to see him; difficulties brought about by shortages of one thing or another and the inability to get needed help; rules and regulations pertaining to the war effort which of necessity must be changed and revised from time to time to meet the changing demands of the war.

The men and women who are our employees are trained persons. At times, in the case of severe damage by storms, they seem to do the impossible in restoring service quickly. But they are not superhuman. Like you they have their loved ones in the war; they too must accept shortages and inconvenience; they too sometimes find some of the war rules for civilians a bit difficult to understand.

As a company, also, the necessities of war restrict our normal operations and service.

Despite the daily difficulties which contribute to "war nerves," we have received numerous comments from customers commending employees for some service performed or courtesy extended. Occasionally we receive a criticism. Criticisms are not treated lightly but are thoroughly investigated. In most cases we have found that the employee responsible is one who has a record of doing his work well, is usually thoroughly dependable, courteous and willing, but who, due to some worry or confusion, failed momentarily to maintain his high standard.

While we do not condone such "slip-ups," we do try to consider them with understanding. We believe you do too.

Chief cook and bottle washer at Clanton Laundry & Cleaning Company, one Mr. Leo Thompson, prop., is basking in the sweet sunshine of Lagoona Beach, Fla., this week. Bet Leo looks across the Gulf at all that water and thinks, "My goodness, all this water and no water bill to pay, and not a thing to wash."

Well the news finally came through. Melvin Mims landed in New Jersey and Buck Tucker landed in Tyler Texas. Both arrived O. K. and said that they would let us here more later.

LeRoy and Clyde Martin presented each other with a fine baby girl Saturday morning. From PeeWee's attitude you would think that he had something to do with the affair. Reminds me of the cartoon a few days ago in the paper. The old farm lady was telling her husband: "You and the old rooster do all the crowing round here, but me and the hens do all the work." But that's beside the subject. Both mother and baby are doing fine and the name is Miss Mary Mell Martin.

About the time you read this we will be in Birmingham attending the summer meeting of the Alabama Press Association. We will try to keep things in line there and learn all we can and you try to keep things in line here and learn all you can so you can keep us posted when we return.

Clanton Kiwanis Send Cigarets To Boys In Service

The Clanton Kiwanis Club is happy to announce the complete success of the campaign it sponsored for funds to buy cigarettes to send to our boys on the fighting fronts of this global war. The patriotic people of Chilton County dropped enough pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters, halves and dollars in the jars which were placed in the business places of Clanton to purchase and send to our soldiers at the front 110,000 cigarettes.

It being impossible to see every one and thank him or her personally for their splendid cooperation, the club is taking this method of thanking every person who put money in the jars that were placed in the business houses of this community for the reception of this fund and to especially thank the proprietors of the businesses for their fine cooperation. It also especially thanks Mrs Ruth Waters and her band of little girls for the extra work they did.

It is a great source of satisfaction and pride to have the privilege and honor of living in a city, county and nation where the great majority of the people are so generous, unselfish and deeply concerned for the relief and comfort of our soldier boys and for all humanity.—J. C. Pattillo, Ch'm of Committee.

Molly Pitcher Day Bond Sales Success

War Stamps and Bonds was the cry everywhere on the streets of Clanton, Saturday in observance of Molly Pitcher Day. The Committee was at work as early as 7:30 a. m. and remained throughout the entire day, is the report of Mrs Hugh Jones County Chairman of the Womens' division of Bonds and Stamps. All of the groups have not yet been heard from, but each individual of the committee worked faithfully and the spirit of cooperation which prevailed on the day and the preparation for it was a splendid patriotic tribute to the Molly Pitcher Day. This attitude was shown throughout the entire county, with pitchers everywhere in evidence.

In addition to the ladies of Clanton who worked so tirelessly: Mrs Omar Reynolds, Mrs Rip Burnett, Mrs Frank Scott, Mrs John Mullins, Mrs G. C. Walker, Mrs Ed Mullins, Mrs N. S. Johnson, Mrs Dick Hayes, Mrs Jack Hayes, Mrs Hance Alred and Mrs John Higgins, were the following ladies throughout the county: Miss McKee, Thorsby, Mrs Barnett Deramus, Verbena; Mrs Taylor, Coopers; Mrs McKee, Terry's Store; Mrs Huff, Stanton; Miss Patton, Jemison; Mrs Daniels, Maplesville.

A special "thank you" goes to all who assisted: The cooperating organizations, the Union Banner, Chilton County News, Merchants and Business firms, all who made purchases on Molly Pitcher Day, and especially to the Molly Pitcher Girls: Miss Ina Saxon McCraney and Miss Mary Elizabeth Mullins and to Miss Anne Callen who was chairman of the young girls group. War Stamps were awarded to the two Molly Pitcher Girls.

Surgical Dressings Unit Has New Hours

During the hot months of August and September the surgical dressings unit will be open from 8 a. m. to noon. In making this announcement the supervisors in charge pointed out that the work is urgently necessary. The dressings are shipped overseas by the Red Cross for use in combat areas.

Any woman who wishes to have the great satisfaction of taking part in the war effort, and our President has said that every man, woman and child in America should have some part in the War effort, should know that their work of rolling surgical dressings plays a significant role in the saving of the lives of our soldiers both in this country and at the battle fronts.

It is to be hoped that every table will be filled during these short hours of the morning.

VOCATIONAL AGRICULTURE TEACHERS HOLD CONFERENCE HERE

The teachers of vocational agriculture of Chilton county attended a 2 day conference that was held in Clanton, Aug. 5-6.

The main purpose of the meeting was to decide on a definite plan of action to be taken by the teachers in planning their individual program of vocational agriculture for another year.

It was definitely decided that every teacher of vocational agriculture would further streamline his program during the emergency in the most effective way to meet the growing needs of the war effort. Continued emphasis at all times will be placed on producing more and more food.

An all out effort will be made by every teacher to get even more food projects in operation by his all-day boys studying vocational agriculture.

The adult farmer classes will be encouraged to produce more food and they are also to be assisted in repairing their farm machinery. These teachers of vocational agriculture will continue to supervise the Rural War Production Training Program which will supplement their regular program of vocational agriculture and enable them to reach more people with instructons in producing more food and repairing farm equipment.

The following teachers of vocational agriculture from Chilton county attended this meeting and have pledged themselves to plan their work for the future on a round-the-clock basis: H. H. Denson, Jemison; J. H. Camp, Isabella; and J. H, Jackson, Clanton

Community Wide Revival Continues

The community wide revival continues at the court house and all the churches of the town called in their Sunday evening service to cooperate in this revival. All of the pastors were present and their people. The Evangelist thanks God for this splendid cooperation of pastors and churches. The mid-week prayer service was also called off.

The Evangelist is bringing plain Gospel messages urging the people to repent of their sins and come back to God and the church.

The evangelist Pearson is asking all the children to come join the Boosters Band, Thursday morning at 10 o'clock to organize a large junior choir. He is asking all the fathers and mothers to cooperate in this movement. Rev. Pearson has been very successful working with the children everywhere he has been in meetings.

Rev Hyman Atcheson the song leader is inviting all singers to come join in the great congregation singing. Next Monday night, August 16, there will be a candle to be burned for each son and husband in Chilton County. Rev Pearson is asking that fathers, mothers, sisters and brothers be present to light a candle and there will be special prayer for each one.

Services begin each evening at 8:30 o'clock.

Flood Of Baby Nominations Have Been Received In Our Thrilling Baby Competition

Names Of The Little Ones Nominated Shown On Another Page In Today's Issue

VOTES TO BE GIVEN ON SUBSCRIPTIONS

THE PRIZES

FIRST PRIZE	$125.00
SECOND PRZE	75.00
THIRD PRIZE	50.00
FOURTH PRIZE	25.00
FIFTH PRIZE	15.00
SIXTH PRIZE	10.00

The announcement in last week's CHILTON COUNTY NEWS of the Great Baby Competition which this newspaper is sponsoring, and through the medium by which we are going to distribute the attractive amount of $300.00 in cash prizes to the babies having the largest number of votes when this affair is brought to a close, has very definitely struck a responsive chord in the hearts of the mothers and fathers and admirers of the dear little tots of this whole section.

This fact has been made apparent to us by the flood of nominations which have literally poured into our office since the campaign was announced last week. From all the different sections of the county and it's environs yes, even from many distant places where we have subscribers, have come nominations and votes for numerous little ones whose names will be found on another page in this issue of our paper.

The liberal prizes we are giving away free, and which we have listed at the head of this article, will be awarded to the six little ones who have the largest number of votes when the campaign is brought to a close, and any one of these prizes can become the property of your own little honeybunch if you parents will give the matter a little attention, and a little of your spare time during the next several weeks.

There will be two ways of securing votes for the baby. One is by clipping the coupon good for 25 votes that will be found each week in our paper, asking all your friends who take the NEWS to save theirs for you, and then sending in, or bringing them to our office to be credited to your baby in the voting that will be listed each week.

The other, and we might add, by far the most profitable way, is turn in subscriptions to our paper, upon which we will give votes. Votes will be given on both old subscriptions (or renewals) and new subscriptions. A list of the votes to be given on subscriptions will be found on another page.

Very likely a large number of your friends and neighbors are subscribers to our paper and will be glad to give you their renewal even though their subscriptions may be paid a little in advance; they would be credited with a year from their present expiration date. In the event of their not taking the NEWS, they very likely could be easily induced to do so, thereby being a material factor in the baby's victory. Every one of us, if we are normal persons, have a warm spot in our heart for a little child, and get a real thrill out of doing the little graceful acts which contributes to its interest and prestige, so if you give the affair a little of your time, you will have no trouble getting all the votes necessary to make your baby a prize-winner.

In order to be of assistance in this laudable effort, we are now prepared to furnish you with a list of our subscribers in your particular neighborhood, also one of our little receipt books, upon the cover of which you will find a list of the votes given on subscriptions and all necessary information. These are free and we will be glad to give them to you, or mail them to you, upon request.

As an extra incentive, and in order that you may be able to make an immediate and impressive showing, we are today, announcing a big bonus offer that will make it easily possible to accumulate a host of votes for baby. The bonus, which you will find on another page, is good for 5,000 extra votes on each year you turn in between now and Wednesday evening, August 25. This bonus is in addition to the regular schedule vote and will apply on both old and new

JANE INEZ DUKE AND LT. W. S. LUFANS, JR., VOWS ARE SOLEMNIZED

The marriage of Miss Jane Inez Duke, daughter of Mr and Mrs French N. Duke, and Lt. Walter Scott Lafans, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs Walter S. Lafans, Minneapolis, Minn., took place at 8 p. m., July 28 at the home of the bride's parents with the Rev Roswell Owens, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Clanton, officiating.

Southern Smilax, ferns and magnolia leaves formed the background for the alter which was banked with baskets of white gladioli and snapdragons. Candelabra held burning white cathedral tapers.

Miss Louise Lovelady, Sylacauga, vocalist, and Miss Anniece Polk, Clanton, pianist, presented the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin, which has been in her family for a number of years. Her full length veil of illusion fell from a coronet of seed pearls and she carried a shower bouquet centered with orchids.

Miss Mary Frances Duke was her sister's only attendant. She wore peach marquisette and carried a bouquet of peach gladioli and lavender asters.

Miss Ruth Duke, wearing pink marquisette, and Miss Sarah Helen Duke wearing white marquisette, lighted the tapers.

Grady Heflin, Clanton, served the bridegroom as best man.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained with a reception. Mrs. Duke, mother of the bride wore a gown of pink lace with a corsage of pink rosebuds.

Following the reception the couple left on a short wedding trip the bride wearing a navy blue crepe with white pique trim. Her corsage was of orchids.

The bride is a graduate of Thorsby Institute and also attended Massey Business College in Birmingham. Lt. Lafans graduated from the University of Minnesota where he was a member of Sigma Chi social fraternity

Following their wedding trip, the couple will be at home at Camp Roberts, Calif., where Lt. Lafans is stationed.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

FDR Favors Higher Taxes to Restrict Size of Public Debt, Defeat Inflation; Russia Continues Steam Roller Attack; 'Unconditional Surrender': Allied Terms

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

TAXES:

More in War Economy

Higher taxes—that, in short, is President Roosevelt's recipe for offsetting the tremendous federal wartime expenditure and at the same time heading off inflation.

Said the President: The government will spend 106 billion dollars during the next year. The public debt is expected to increase by 69 billion to 206 billion dollars by June, 1944.

The national income should approximate 150 billion dollars for the year. But the manufacture of civilian goods has been sharply reduced, thus leaving the public with large amounts of surplus money with which to bid up prices for smaller supplies.

Hence the President's conclusion: More taxes with which to meet current expenditure and restrict the size of the mounting public debt, and with which to mop up excess inflationary buying power.

6 Billion at Most

President Roosevelt's call for increased taxes was met by Sen. Walter F. George's prediction that the most that could be expected to be raised was 5 or 6 billion dollars.

Senator George

The influential chairman of the senate finance committeee, Senator George, said of the 5 or 6 billion dollars, about 60 per cent will have to be obtained from individual taxpayers. The rest could be gotten by raising the corporate normal and surtax rate and broadening the federal tax on goods.

Declaring the U. S. stands to collect 35 billion dollars under present rates, George said any increases in individual rates would bear most with low or moderate fixed incomes.

RUSSIA:

At the City's Gates

Russia's steam-rolling attack on Orel continued to meet heavy resistance even as the Red columns bore into the suburbs of the big Nazi base. As the Russians' pressure increased, long lines of German troops were seen withdrawing westward toward the secondary Nazi hub of Bryansk.

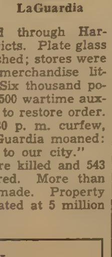
Slugging matches raged all along the winding 1,200 mile front. The Reds attacked heavily south of Leningrad in an effort to widen the corridor leading to the besieged city; both sides fought to a standstill in the Donets basin, and the Russians stabbed stiffly at the Nazis' foothold along the Black sea at Novorosissk.

Principal action of the summer centered at Orel. Here, the Russians, with masses of infantry following up in the echo of thunderous artillery fire and chugging tank attacks, jabbed deeper and deeper into German defenses, until they stood at the gates of the city itself.

RIOTS:

Sweep Harlem

Allegedly interfering with the arrest of a Negro woman in the lobby of a New York hotel, a colored soldier was shot by a police officer. While the wounded man was being removed to a hospital, a crowd collected. Wild rumors began to circulate, a pop bottle was thrown, and the worst riot since 1935 in America's largest city was set off.



Fiorello LaGuardia

Negroes stormed through Harlem's business districts. Plate glass windows were smashed; stores were looted; crumpled merchandise littered the streets. Six thousand policemen aided by 1,500 wartime auxiliaries were called to restore order. In imposing a 10:30 p. m. curfew, Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia moaned: "Shame has come to our city."

Five Negroes were killed and 543 persons were injured. More than 500 arrests were made. Property damage was estimated at 5 million dollars.

FOOD: Food output this year will be about 4 per cent higher than last year, according to department of agriculture estimates. About three-fourths of the supply has been set aside for civilians.

ITALY:

Allied Terms

When Benito Mussolini's government fell, one of the requisite conditions for an Allied treatment with Italy for peace was established. To Marshall Pietro Badoglio, Italy's first soldier, was given the charge of a new military regime.

The hectic days following Mussolini's fall saw a diplomatic stew. Axis sources declared that Badoglio's assumption of power was a perfectly natural evolution since what was more appropriate for a country faced with invasion than to concentrate all action in the hands of a military commander? Meanwhile diplomatic skirmishing indicated proposals from the Allies.

The Allies laid down these terms for peace: 1. Cessation of resistance; 2. An end of collaboration with Germany; 3. Withdrawal of Italian troops from Greece, Albania and Jugoslavia; 4. Surrender of war materials undamaged; 5. Establishment of an Anglo-American-Soviet military government of occupation; 6. Arrest of war criminals; and 7. Release of all Allied prisoners of war in Italy.

Decisive Action

Viewing the campaign in Sicily, military authorities might well credit the Americans of Gen. George S. Patton's command and the Canadians under Gen. Bernard Montgomery with decisive action in the final phase of the fighting.

With Montgomery's British forces stalled before strong Axis positions in the Catanian plains to the southeast of the defensive triangle, roaring artillery covered General Patton's Seventh army's cautious advance over barren hills in the face of mortar fire from enemy sheltered in trenches and caves. Capturing Troina, the Americans cut the supply road linking the Axis' right flank with their left and bending the whole enemy line in this sector toward the sea.

Maj.-Gen. G. G. Simonds, commanding the First Canadian division, wades ashore during operations in Sicily.

Farther to the south, Canadians broke through the Axis stronghold of Regalbuto, thus menacing the enemy's whole Catanian line from the rear. The advance also put the Canadians within sight of the supply road rimming towering Mt. Etna, along whose slopes the Axis have entrenched themselves.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:

Tanks in Jungles

Brought into the fight after aircraft had failed to reduce sufficiently strongholds the Japs had hewed in the jungle, 13-ton tanks led the Americans' drive on Munda in the Solomons.

Unable to detect the Japs' positions through the dense brush and foliage, aircraft were compelled to drop their bombs over a wide area, hoping that a heavy tonnage would land on some defenses. But whenever the infantry attempted to advance after the barrage, it met stiff enemy machine gun and mortar fire from the concealed pill-boxes.

Then the tanks were flung into the battle. Grinding their way through the thick growth, they drew the fire of the hidden enemy. Following the course of the gun-fire, the tank crews discovered the Japs' strong points and then blasted them at point blank range. By such tactics, they gradually overran stubborn centers of resistance as the drive approached the encircled Jap base.

WOOLENS:

Army Buys Less

The army quartermaster corps will purchase about 50 per cent less wool and worsted products for the remainder of the year, and will defer buying these goods until the first four months of next year, according to the War Production board.

This change in plans will immediately release about 10 million yards of material for civilian needs to be made into blankets, coats, mackinaws and winter clothing.

DRAFT:

Call Dads Oct. 1

Fathers 18 to 37 years of age who are not "key" men in agriculture and industry will be inducted into service starting October 1. According to the War Manpower commission, they will be called in their draft order numbers, regardless of the number of their children.

Burton K. Wheeler

The WMC's announcement of the forthcoming draft of dads drew an immediate promise from Sen. Burton K. Wheeler that he would press for passage of his bill postponing the induction of fathers until January 1 when congress reconvenes September 14.

According to the WMC, fathers will be called only when draft boards run out of men in the other classifications. Some boards are expected to be faced with that predicament by October 1, others are not, thus delaying the induction of dads in their districts beyond the date. Approximately 875,000 childless married men are to be called by October 1.

780 Miles Per Hour!

Last September, 36-year-old Lieut. Col. Cass S. Hough of Plymouth, Mich., took his P-38 Lockheed Lightning fighter plane 43,000 feet in the air.

Then Colonel Hough coolly nosed the plane into a power dive, and down it roared, cutting through the wind before it, at 780 miles per hour before being leveled off at 18,000 feet.

But last February, Colonel Hough decided to crowd two thrills into a lifetime. This time, he took a P-47 Thunderbolt 39,000 feet up and again plunged it into a whining power-dive, straightening out once more at 18,000 feet.

Technical director of the 8th American fighter command, Colonel Hough undertook the two flights to obtain scientific information for assisting fighter pilots. For his services the European commander of fighter planes decorated him with the Distinguished Flying Cross. In private life vice president of the Daisy Air Rifle Manufacturing company, Colonel Hough is married and has two children.

PRODUCTION:

7,000 Planes a Month

Thirty-four years ago, congress appropriated $25,000 for the army to purchase its first airplane—a Wright brothers 1909 model CI craft, with a wing span of 48 feet 6½ inches and a four-cylinder, 28-horsepower motor. Capable of flying 32 miles per hour, the plane could stay in the air 2 hours and 19 minutes.

Today, American aircraft production averages 7,000 planes a month, with the army air forces receiving 4,500 of the total of sleek, high-powered craft. Since the attack on Pearl Harbor, 73,132 planes have been delivered to the army, and up to June 30, 1943, 40 billion dollars was allotted to the air forces.

Against America's record production, it was estimated that the Axis puts out 4,000 planes monthly. Of this total, Germany makes 2,200, Japan 1,200 and Italy 600.

BERLIN:

Ordered Evacuated

With Germany's great industrial port of Hamburg laying in ruins, with 8,000 of its people killed and 259 of its factories demolished, Paul Joseph Goebbels ordered all residents of Berlin not engaged in essential war work to leave the city.

Paul Goebbels

The Nazis made no effort to minimize the destruction in Hamburg. Besides the vast number killed, it was reported an additional 4,000 were missing and 18,000 were injured. Along with industrial installations, large residential areas were wiped out, it was said, and others were badly mauled.

In ordering the evacuation of Berlin, Goebbels instructed residents with relations in other parts of Germany to make use of such accommodations, while those who could not were told to apply to the government for housing facilities. According to reports, the Nazis prepared for mass evacuation several months ago, laying up stores at central points throughout inner Germany.

U. S. Transfers Vessels

Speaking before the house of commons, Prime Minister Winston Churchill revealed that the United States was turning over from 15 to 20 cargo vessels a month to the British merchant marine.

In making the announcement, Churchill quoted from a letter of President Roosevelt's, in which he said the transfers were being made in order to employ Britain's surplus of trained seamen.

Very young men who rebel at having to trudge along behind lawn mowers these summer days ought to know Paul Whiteman's story. As a youngster he so hated to practice on his violin that he smashed a $60 instrument against the music stand. His father made him mow the lawn, at 25 cents a session, till he'd paid for the fiddle. After that his parents gave in and decided that maybe he wasn't cut out for a musical career—and he took up the violin in earnest!

Rationing by State

Certain foods that cannot be rationed on a nation-wide basis because of differences in sectional eating habits will probably be distributed in the near future on state quotas. For example, the annual per capita consumption of rice varies from two pounds in the Northwest to fifty pounds in the South.

The gaily enameled unit insignia you see on a soldier's lapels and overseas cap are reproductions of his regimental shield displayed in the center of the eagle on his regimental flag. It's a part of U. S. Army tradition. Traditional, too, is the Army man's preference for Camel cigarettes. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) It's a gift from the folks back home, that always rates cheers. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former newspaper feature editor has been inducted into the army and has spent some time in training at Fort Bragg. In his advice to prospective selectees, Private Hargrove had advocated a pre-induction period of "painting the town red." Once in the army he thinks "an open mind" is the best policy for the "first three weeks are the hardest." Some of the more fundamental phases of army life have gone over Private Hargrove's head and his conduct has landed him often on KP duty. He has been classified as a cook. Between his KP duty and his regular cook assignment he has spent considerable time in the kitchen.

CHAPTER VII

One of the nicest things about working in the kitchen in Battery C of the 13th Battalion has been the knowledge that its number-one chow hound, Buster Charnley, would drop around after supper and the conversational fat. It's like a letter from home to listen to Buster's slow and mournful drawl, and his refreshingly dry humor is a pick-me-up at the end of a long, hot afternoon.

Buster came prancing up the chow line, the other evening with a grin that started at the back of his head and enveloped his face from the nose down.

"What's eating you, Walter," I asked him, "—besides that egg-sucking grin?"

"Leaving here, boy!" he sang. "You won't see me around for three months. And when you see me, son, you'll see stripes on my sleeves and a look of prosperity on my clean-cut Tarheel face!"

The man behind him wanted to get to the mashed potatoes, so Buster had to move on down the line, I got the whole story from one of the kaypees while I waited for him to make his evening call.

Of the 200-odd men in Battery C, two men had been selected for three months' training at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. At the end of their three months, they will come back as gunnery instructors, with a non-commissioned officer's rating and a specialist's extra pay on top of that. Mrs. Walter Charnley's little boy Buster was one of the two men selected.

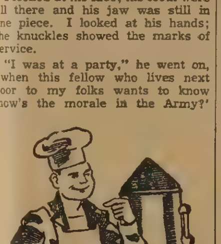
One of the sergeants near here came back from a recent leave with one of the most glorious shiners that ever darkened the human eye.

"Run into a door?" I asked him.

"Gave a guy the wrong answer," he replied simply, "or rather, the answer he didn't want."

I looked at his face; his teeth were all there and his jaw was still in one piece. I looked at his hands; the knuckles showed the marks of service.

"I was at a party," he went on, "when this fellow who lives next door to my folks wants to know 'how's the morale in the Army?'



"Leaving here, boy," he sang; "You won't see me around for three months. Then I'll be wearing stripes on my sleeves."

'Excellent,' I tell him; 'excellent!' He looks me up and down sort of pitying-like and wants to know don't I read the magazine stories about how poor it is. Well, I tell him, 'I spend all my time with the boys and I believe what I see more than what I read.'

"He goes on from there making cracks at the Army and the country and the suckers we are for giving our time for what's not worth fighting for in the first place. I listen politely for a while, because even though I'm not in uniform I don't want to look rowdy. I stand as much as I can and then I ask him to his feet. It isn't long before his three brothers join the fight. It was one of the brothers put his finger ring in my eye."

"Brother," I told him, "that ain't a black eye. That's a badge."

"I lost the fight," he said.

"You won the argument, though," I told him.

"I'd like to use the sergeant's name, but he made me promise not to."

"I told the Old Man," he said, "that I got the shiner playing baseball."

"How can I fit you into a coat," moaned Supply Sergeant Israel, "with you fidgeting around like a race horse at the post? Stand still, dern you, stand still!"

"Heavens to Betsy, Thomas," I complained, "you're getting to be the fussiest old maid in the outfit. I'm not squirming!"

"In the first place, my man," he said, "don't call me Thomas or try to get overly familiar with your elders and betters. In the second place, don't argue with me. In the third place, don't fidget in the first place. And in the fourth place, don't agitate me unnecessarily. I'm at the end of my patience with you and I ain't feeling in no holiday spirit anyway."

I buttoned the handsome winter blouse and he stepped back to inspect it with the eye of an artist. "Every time my wife gets mad at me, she has her picture taken to send to me. The picture I got today showed she's going to eat my heart out unmercifully when I can't put off my furlough any longer and I have to go home. And with domestic difficulties on my hands, I have to fit your winter uniforms."

He yanked at my coattail, straightened the collar and scratched his head. "Hargrove—37 long," he yelled to the boy at the desk.

"Man that is born of woman," I comforted him, "is of many days and full of trouble."

"Git off the platform and into this overcoat," he sighed. He held the coat while I got into it and he slapped my hand for fidgeting again. "Sometimes I wonder why I go to so much trouble keeping you boys dressed right. Here I spend the whole afternoon wiping sweat out of my eyebrows, just to see that your clothes fit you and you won't look like a bunch of bums—which you are.

"Do you know what some ungrateful kitchen termite said the other day? He started putting it around that the Army could double itself in half an hour by filling up the extra space in its trousers. Do your trousers fit you bum?" He straightened the pleats in the back of the overcoat and gave the tail an unnecessarily vicious yank.

"Did I say they didn't?" I groaned, raising my arms despairingly. "Just because somebody else says you stretch the coat in the back so the man will think it fits right in the front, you have to go picking on me!"

"Me pick on you?" he screamed. "It's a wonder my nerves ain't completely shot! Do I come around and put signs on the door saying, 'Walk Up One Flight and Save Five Dollars'? Do I throw gunny sacks on your bed and ask you to take up the cuffs two inches?

"With my thankless job, it's a wonder I haven't collapsed before this. I wish I was a permanent kitchen police instead of a supply sergeant. Hargrove — 37 long! NEXT!"

"This battery is my baby," Corporal Henry Ussery said, loosening his belt for a real bull session. I've watched it grow from thutty-one men to what it is now. It was hard work building up this battery to what it is now, but it's worth it when you look around and see what you've done."

The assembly sighed en masse and decided to loosen its belts. Ussery was wound up again.

"When I got here, there wasn't anybody here but the instructors. We spent four weeks eating dust and running rabbits. There I was—I'd spent thutteen months learning the old drill and tactics to where I reckon I had it down better than any man in the whole Army. Then they started this 'minute Army,' with a bunch of green ignorant Yankees—and I had to teach them what they had to know!"

The bull session nodded wisely and Corporal Ussery went on. "Now, this young Corporal Joe Gantt, for instance. Now, this Corporal Gantt, when he first came in, was one of the greenest rookies in the bunch. But he snapped out of it and made corporal in four months.

"Was that soldiering," a voice broke in, "or handshaking—as the Latins used to say, mittus pop-pu?"

"Much as I can't stand Gantt, I'll have to admit it was soldiering. That's the way it is. You sweat your head off hammering the drills and the calisthenics and the military courtesy and guard duty and the physical hygiene and the manual of arms into them. They're all clumsy and awkward as a bear in an egg crate at first, but then you can see them, after a while, snapping into it and getting better and better. By the time we've had them thutteen weeks, and they're ready to be assigned to their posts, they're as keen and alert as a bunch of West Point cadets. They're extra good cooks and better soldiers."

"Isn't a good soldier a specialist at griping and growling?" somebody asked him.

"Griping is an art, just like goldbricking's an art. Before you leave here, you learn that you don't enjoy griping a bit when you spread your energy all over everywhere, griping about everything. You learn to choose one thing and specialize in griping about that.

"If you want to be a specialist at griping, you have to get on your toes. You get to where your clothes are comfortable. Where you used to think the food was terrible, now you pretend that you don't get enough of it. You like the beds and by nine o'clock you're sleepy. So you have to find something special to gripe about. If you haven't got any originality at all, pick you out one special noncom and gripe about him.

"Now, you take Private Hargrove, for instance. First came here, he griped about me telling him he was carrying his rifle wrong. Now he gripes when I tell him he's carrying it right. He might have something there. He still carries it like it was a 75-millimeter gun. He's getting so shiftless, even at griping, that he can't find anything to beef about except not getting any mail. I'm going to write all his creditors, so he won't even be able to gripe about the mail."

Somewhere on the wild coast of South Carolina, the battalion in which I cook is being treated to a weekend to combine business with pleasure. We can romp in the Atlantic while we get a "taste of the field." With the wind blowing the sand into kitchens and pup tents alike, it will be nice to get back to Fort Bragg for a taste of the food we eat. A vexed soldier here doesn't grate his teeth. He crunches them.

At night we sleep, or simulate sleep, in pup tents made by our own hands with loving care.

We made the trip here in lorries, which are the mechanical age's nearest approach in appearance to covered wagons. You've probably seen them rolling noisily but smoothly through town—large canvas-topped trucks with a folding bench down each side inside. You'd expect to be hauled out of one of them, beaten to death, at the end of a 130-mile trip. They give a tolerably bumpy ride, just tolerably.

When we started pitching camp, about a quarter of a mile back from the beach, we found the place already inhabited — by cannibals. These creatures, which masquerade as harmless flies and even camouflaged by the harmless sounding name of sand flies, must have vampire blood back in the line somewhere.

I don't bear any grudge against the easygoing, good-natured house fly—in fact, I feel rather cruel when I squash one for tickling me—but it arouses my pioneer fighting spirit to see a stunted horsefly light on my bare leg, make himself sassily comfortable and start draining off my life's blood. But what can you do? Slapping one only serves to make him mad at you.

At night we sleep, or at least we simulate sleep, in pup tents made by our own hands with loving care, blood, sweat, tears, two pieces of waterproof cloth, two lengths of rope, and a handful of turned lumber.

I share my little duplex with Private Warren, the new student cook who told me the story about the man at the boarding house. When I stumbled home last night, primed to the gills with a blend of sand and salt water, I discovered that we had an overnight guest! The chief cook on our shift, in the task of packing the field kitchen, had neglected to put his own field pack (tent half, blankets, etc.) on the truck, so he decided to drop over and have us put him up for the night.

A pup tent, as you probably don't need to be told, will accommodate two men, provided neither of them walks in his sleep. If three men are to sleep in one tent, at least two of them must be midgets or babes in arms. Cooks should never sleep two to a tent, because of their tendency toward plumpness.

We arranged ourselves in the tent by wrapping knees around the tent poles, putting all feet outside for the night and raising one side of the tent high enough to make a rustic sleeping porch of the whole affair.

The guest proved to be one of those loathsome creatures who pull all the covers to their side of the bed. We had quite a lot of trouble with him, since he slept in the middle and rolled up in both our blankets. We remedied this by waiting until he started snoring, then recovered our blankets, rolling ourselves in them and throwing a raincoat over him.

The three-man arrangement was very uncomfortable for a while. When I finished opening my eyes by scooping the sand from them, I found that I had rolled through the opened side of the tent and spent the night under a myrtle bush ten yards down the slope.

During my first off hour, I succeeded in getting a tan which must have darkened the very marrow of my bones. My chest, back, and legs looked the color of a faded danger flag and smelled like the roast pork that the cook forgot to watch. After that, the surf and the sun went their ways and I went mine.

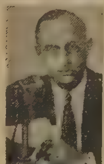
Geography Is Factor in Determining War's End

Road to Tokyo Both Long and Rough; Pacific Remains Studded With Well-Fortified Japanese Strongholds.



By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

No victory over Japan before 1949? When that sentiment was broadcast from Washington by Vice Admiral Horne under the aegis of Secretary Knox, a good many eyebrows were raised here in the capital. Of course, it is fully realized here that once the American people think the war is in the bag, they will be ready to resume the plowshare and the pen as simple citizens again, not as dollar-a-year men or munitions workers or victory gardeners or rationers or any of the other things we don't like. So Washington can't afford to be overoptimistic. But 1949 is a long, long way off.

When Admiral Halsey finally admitted that the capture of the important air base of Munda was "within reach," it looked like another easy victory scored and that Tokyo ought to tremble.

About Distances

But how much nearer are we to Tokyo? Get a map of Asia, including the Solomon Islands and if you can identify the little specks which are Guadalcanal where our main base lies, and Rabaul, our objective, note the distance between, and then see how much farther it is to Tokyo. It's as far as from New York to Casablanca.

And there is a lot of difference between the two roads. When we sent our troops over the Atlantic to Africa, it was pretty nearly our pond —there wasn't an Axis base en route. The Pacific is studded with Japanese bases.

There are two powerful Jap strongholds, much better protected than Munda right in the Solomon Islands, on Bougainville island and Rabaul, the hub of the Japs' empire in the Southwest. Beyond, over a long stretch of water, is the little island of Truk, said to be the main Jap naval base in the Pacific.

From New Britain, where Rabaul is located, it is 690 miles to Tokyo—further than from Tunisia to the northern tip of Norway.

In order to realize why we are still so far away from our objective in the Pacific war, we have to consider what it took to get as far as we have already gone. It took six months, some terribly gruelling fighting, and many lives, to capture the little island of Guadalcanal. It took another five months before the Allies were ready to start their second offensive movement with the final capture of Rabaul as the objective. Progress at this rate and with this type of island-to-island advance is taken for granted by those who put 1949 as the date when Japan will be vanquished.

Defensive Action

It took MacArthur approximately as long to turn back the Japs on New Guinea, fighting to reach Port Moresby, and to capture their key point of Buna, so they could move on Salamaua and Lae driving the enemy out foot by foot from these pretty much isolated points.

The fighting, up until the drive beginning with the capture of Rendova on June 30, has been nothing more than offensive-defensive. Before that the effort, and a successful one, was to keep the Japs from attacking Australia from Port Moresby, from seizing the Solomons and making the Australian east coast vulnerable and to save the life line of men and supplies moving from America to Australia.

Only now, summer 1943, are we really taking offensive action in the Southwest Pacific and, as I said, if you look at a map of Asia which shows all of the territory held by the Japanese, you will see that what we have won since our offensive really began is a very thin sliver, geographically speaking. In enemy effectives destroyed, it has been larger in proportion, but the navy men in Washington who talk about 1949 speak with a conservative geographical accent.

Diary of a Broadcaster

Isn't it awfully dull in Washington with congress gone home and everything closed up?

If you think so, you are dreaming a midsummer night's dream.

When I arise and start down toward Pennsylvania avenue, I note the little spring cat which has joined its maltese mother and its tiger (perhaps) father. Is it going limp with boredom? It is not. It prepares its toilet with the same tongue-wearying energy that it did when congress was in session.

That is just an example. The buses are just as crowded. Telephone numbers as hard to get. Laundry lingers as long among the launderers. Pants pant for pressing.

Recently I tried four leading hotels before I could reserve places for lunch. One of them was not air cooled. "I am ordinarily a two-suit guy," said a newspaper man to me the other day when Donald Nelson was complaining about the heavy buying of clothes, "but if I didn't have four suits now, I'd go to work unpressed and uncleaned or in a barrel."

'The Little Prince'

You recall I reviewed "The Little Prince" by Antoine de Saint-Exupery in this column some time ago. I have had many letters concerning the author whom I said was at the front.

Recently Leonard Lyons, New York columnist, reported that the aviator-author, who is back on the fighting line again although he is 43 years old, wrote to his American translator:

"After seeing the fighting men and the mighty armaments, I realize that I must come to Africa to appreciate America."

He was spared, after the fall of France, "to fight again."

Let us hope he will be spared, when she rises, to write again.

Food Program

It was a cooler and more peaceful day than many which had preceded it in Washington. The President was in a genial mood when he met the press and radio representatives.

The administration, he said, is working on a new food program.

A few days before, I talked with a member of the administration who said to me: "Frankly, if we have a food program, I can't find it." And he was very anxious to locate it because a lot of his friends had been asking . . .

The President, at the conference I referred to, explained that he'd be tickled to death if anyone would explain to him how he could reduce prices in accordance with the stabilization under the present limitations set by congress.

A little bit later, I heard it said flatly: "We've got to increase prices if we expect the farmers to raise enough food to meet the present goals."

Now, Howard Tolley, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, (whose business it is to figure out what is needed, not how we'll get it) says this:

Increased Consumption

"If the United States carries out its proposed international pledge to do all that is needed to provide better diets for its own people, the consumption of dairy products here would have to be increased 40 per cent."

That is just one product—representing, of course, milk, butter, cheese.

In order to bring the national diet up to the standard set, truck crops would also have to be increased about 80 per cent, eggs more than 20 per cent, fruit about 20 per cent, according to Mr. Tolley, and to raise crops for such a market would take about 40 million additional acres of cropland or about one-eighth more than is now cultivated.

With the present full employment, Tolley says that this extra output of the farmer's product could be absorbed. And this leaves out what would be sold abroad.

Right now, industry is working on plans to maintain this "full employment" by converting war plants to peace plants. Industry is trying to compete with the government in post-war planning in this field.

How many farmers are interested enough to get up and say "their say" in favor of a plan that will keep enough people at work so that they can buy this extra 40 million acres' worth of food they need to be healthy?

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

subscriptions alike. This is the largest bonus that will be offered during the life of the campaign and we hope you all will take full advantage of it.

Now, about the pictures. This will prove the most interesting part of this whole affair and we trust you will furnish us with a good picture of your sweetheart as soon as possible. We have to have engravings made from the picture and as they have to be sent to a larger city to have this done, and as this takes time, the sooner the picture is received the earlier it will appear. We stand the cost of the engravings so it will mean no extra cost to you at all. We are all going to get a big kick out of seeing their dear little faces looking out from the columns of our paper, and we are looking forward eagerly to their appearance.

There have been a large number of coupon ballots reaching here for the various little sweethearts. We had intended to publish them this week, however, we have been so busy with the various details involved in getting this feature underway, we have found it impossible to do so at this time, so, this week, we have just credited each baby with 1,000 votes given with each nomination and when the names next appear they will be credited with all the votes that have been received for them up to that time.

The campaign is now definitely launched on its journey and will be brought to a close Saturday evening, October 2nd. If you have been undecided as to whether or not you would enter your baby in this appealing little race, don't hesitate any longer, send in the baby's nomination and the make up your mind you are going t enter into the spirit of this interest ing affair and make the necessar effort that will bring victory for you darling at the conclusion of the petition. Remember, all the little o in this prescribed territory, up to t years of age are eligible to compet and that an early start has its vantages.

Please take note of the date on th ballot good for 25 votes and see th they reach here before they becom void. The date will be extended week to week in order to give yo ample time to get them here bef the date shown expires.

THIS COMMUNITY HAS A SPECIAL WAR JOB

THIS COMMUNITY is on the spot! We are in a pulpwood growing section and there is now a pulpwood shortage. The country needs vast quantities of pulpwood for explosives, rayon parachutes, gas mask filters, shipping containers and a thousand other uses—yet some of the mills that make these things are actually shutting down for lack of wood.

This is a desperate situation—a war emergency. Something must be done QUICKLY!

And only we who live in the pulpwood cutting areas can do anything about it.

This is OUR responsibility.

How the problem can be solved

Mr. Donald M. Nelson, Chairman of the War Production Board, gave the key to the solution in the following statement:

"If every one of the more than 3,800,000 farmers in the 27 pulpwood producing states were to devote 3 EXTRA days in 1943 to cutting pulpwood, we could overcome the threatened 2,500,000 cord shortage with wood to spare."

Will you enlist for 3 EXTRA days?

If you are now cutting pulpwood part time; if you have cut it in the past; or if you have never cut it but know how to use an axe and saw, will you pledge 3 EXTRA days (at regular pay) to meet Mr. Nelson's challenge?

Fill in the coupon, Mail it to this newspaper and you will receive the pledge badge which identifies you as a Victory Pulpwood Cutter.

This is a war emergency.

FOOD FOR THE ELDERLY

Dr. Barton

Now that men and women live longer and there are so many more "old" people in the world than in previous years, many of these old men and women are not allowing the younger members of the household to give them friendly advice for their old age.

Until recently it has been accepted as the "proper" thing that the elderly should eat much less food than those who are middle aged. I have spoken before of one of Charles Dana Gibson's drawings showing an old man eating crackers and milk while his day dreams showed him as a boy eating turkey and all the "fixings." Under the picture were the words "Backward, turn backward, O Time in thy flight; make me a boy again just for tonight."

That the elderly should eat less food than when they were active and doing physical work is right, but elderly men and women today do not sit around all day; most of them get about doing light chores or walking some part of the day. As exercise stimulates all the body processes, heart, lungs, digestion, increases the appetite and prevents constipation, the elderly not only want more food but they need more food.

One of the arguments against elderly men and women eating hearty meals is that all their body processes are becoming weaker and so must not be forced to handle large quantities of food. Thus it has been believed that the stomach in the elderly is "drying" up, becoming smaller, does not empty as rapidly as when they were younger. It is interesting therefore to read of a recent experiment in the American Journal of Physiology.

Drs. Edward J. Van Liere and David W. Northrup, West Virginia university, investigated how aging affected the emptying time of the stomach. Twelve men, the youngest 58 and the oldest 84, were studied. Ten were without funds and resided in the county infirmary; one was a college professor and one was a janitor.

A definite amount of food was given each man and about two ounces of barium sulphate was added which enabled the investigators to watch the position of the meal by X-rays.

The average length of time for the test meal to leave the stomachs of the 12 men was one hour and 56 minutes. The emptying time of the stomach in 59 young adults previously studied averaged about two hours and two minutes.

This investigation shows that elderly men and women can safely eat more food if they feel like it.

Removal of Adenoids Restores Hearing

One of the common causes of loss of hearing is a partial closure of the opening of the eustachian tube carrying air from the throat to the middle ear. Enlarged tonsils and the formation of soft jellylike tissue (adenoids) is often the cause of closing the opening of the eustachian tube. By removing the enlarged tonsils and adenoids from about this opening, hearing is often restored.

However, where there is a persistent growth of this soft adenoid tissue about this opening and operation is not possible, the use of radium is giving excellent results. I have mentioned this method of treatment before. There is now further information at hand.

In Archives of Otolaryngology (ear, nose and throat), Drs. Ernest B. Emerson Jr., Andrew H. Dowdy and Clyde A. Heatley report that treatment by radium of deafness due to growth of adenoid tissue yields excellent results. They describe the simple instruments used to place the radium in the exact position necessary to shrink or remove this adenoid or lymphoid tissue.

Before applying the radium treatment all disease present such as infected tonsils or adenoids is removed. Then by means of a local anaesthetic the condition of the opening of the eustachian tube is learned. If there is a great amount of this lymphoid tissue about the eustachian tube or if the opening seems swollen, the patient is given the radium treatment—irradiation.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Would cigarettes have any effect on a stomach ulcer?

A.—Tobacco is forbidden in the treatment of ulcer of the stomach.

Q.—Please explain what causes a constant cracking at the back of the head. Could this be caused by a crooked septum?

A.—There are very few people with a straight septum. Cracking in head—back of head—usually is common. No treatment necessary if no pain present.

GOD PROVIDES FOR HIS PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 16:11-18; 17:3-6.
GOLDEN TEXT—Give us this day our daily bread.—Matthew 6:11.

Only God can provide the necessities of life. Rationing has taught us that lesson anew if we have been at all thoughtful about it. The plan is one of sharing. Sharing what? The food and other provisions which come to us from God's hand. Unless our crops are good there will be less to share. Only God can help us.

This was the lesson Israel learned in the wilderness. To reach the goal to which God was leading them they must pass through the wilderness. Not only were there many weary miles to travel, but there were privations to be borne. Life is like that.

Now they cried for food. Note how elemental are man's needs in the final analysis—bread and water. The very things we take almost for granted as we concern ourselves with life's weighty interests and profound problems become, if lacking, the only things that have any real meaning. And who is it that can provide them? No one but God Himself.

I. Bread from Heaven (Exod. 16:11-18).

Israel's longing for meat was met by the miraculous coming of quantities of quail (v. 13). But that was not the food to sustain them day after day. For this they needed bread, and it came from heaven, every day until they entered the promised land (Josh. 5:12).

Observe four things about the manna.

First, it was a divine provision. There are responsibilities in life which we may bear—and must bear—but in the ultimate meeting of our real needs we must look to God.

Secondly, it was a daily provision. What forehanded folk many of us are, and no doubt rightly so, for God puts no premium on improvidence. But once again we must recognize, as did Israel in receiving the daily manna in the wilderness, that ours is indeed a moment by moment existence.

We plan bravely for the next decade or the next generation, but as a matter of fact it can only come to pass "if the Lord will" (read James 5:13-17).

Next, it was a limited provision—enough for the day and no more, except for a double portion on the sixth day, and none at all on the Sabbath. These provisions were made clear to Israel, and yet there were those who attempted to lay up for the morrow, and some even went out to seek manna on the Sabbath day.

We marvel at their stubborn obtuseness, but are we not often just like them. Some there are who are always expecting that the laws of both God and man should be set aside for them, but they come to grief.

Finally, it called for diligence and action on their part. They had to be out early each day (except the Sabbath) to gather it. God's mercies are for those who are willing to obey Him. He gives to those who receive by active faith.

II. Water from the Rock (Exod. 17:3-6).

"And the people thirsted"—for the daily manna was not enough, they must have water. Needy, yes, constantly needy are God's children.

"Every life knows the bite of necessity . . . every soul cries out in pain because there is wanting some completing favor, some culminating and all-contenting benediction. Here it is bread; there it is water; but everywhere a famine . . . in many a case a famine of soul, a spiritual destitution, a consciousness of a void which time cannot satisfy or space content."

God always provides. There is a rock in the wilderness. But what pleasure does a murmuring people find in a rock when they famish for water? It is God's delightful custom to meet our needs in unexpected ways and by means which we do not understand. Even our physical necessities come from unthought of sources.

III. Christ, the Bread and Water of Life.

Our lesson does not give the New Testament application of Israel's experiences, but let us not miss that blessed spiritual truth.

In John 6:31-33, Christ is declared to be the true bread from heaven, of which the manna was but a type.

Paul speaks in I Corinthians 10:1-4 of this incident in the history of Israel, saying that they "did all eat the same spiritual meat, and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ" (see also John 4:14).

Hungry and thirsty soul, you who are still unsatisfied after tasting all that life apart from Christ has to offer, will you not, just now, take Him?

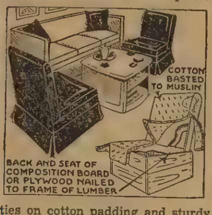
THERE is no reason that you should do without smart looking upholstered chairs while you are awaiting the day that you will have the living room furniture that you have always dreamed about. Scraps of lumber and plywood or even old packing boxes may be used to make simple chair frames and there are no priorities on cotton padding and sturdy cotton covering materials.



COTTON BASTED TO MUSLIN
BACK AND SEAT OF COMPOSITION BOARD OR PLYWOOD NAILED TO FRAME OF LUMBER

A simple frame for a chair of this type is shown here. It is padded with cotton batting basted to pieces of unbleached muslin cut to fit the back and well over the sides of the seat. A separate cushion filled with cotton, down or feathers is then made for the seat. Either plain or figured material with contrasting seam welting may be used for covering.

PIANO BARGAINS

● June 15, 1943, the Piano Manufacturers had a meeting in New York City and had a Government man there to explain to them when they might look forward to manufacturing pianos. He told them not until the war is over. So E. E. Forbes, Sr., decided to go to Chicago and buy a large stock of good used pianos. He succeeded in buying 150 grands, uprights and players. Some of them from fine homes and some look just like new and are as good as new. He had to pay more for these than he used to buy them for. He says that they are getting scarce and if you read this ad and will need a piano within 2 years, you had better buy it now while you can get one. After this year you will have a hard time finding a piano that will suit you. You can buy one of the Forbes rebuilt pianos on easy terms. It will last you a life time. One year after the war is over you can trade it back to Forbes on a new piano if you want to.

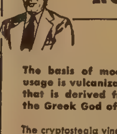
SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER



The basis of modern rubber usage is vulcanization, a word that is derived from Vulcan, the Greek God of Fire.

The cryptostegia vine yields about 17 drops of rubber latex a day, a seven-year-old Hevea tree three to six pounds of rubber a year. Properly treated Hevea trees, when 10 years old, can give from 1000 to 1500 pounds of rubber per acre per year. About eleven pounds of rubber are used in making a small automobile tire.

Lay rubber articles flat when storing, allowing them to assume their natural position. Rubber loses its life when under a permanent strain.

Ripe Cherries Make Sweet Jams
(See Recipe Below)

Jelly Season's Here!

Think of the good cheer in a sparkling, quivery dish of jelly to go with your golden brown biscuits or rolls in the cold of winter. Do you need more than that to start you on a spree of jelly-making? My guess is no.

There's a great interest in jelly-making in spite of sugar rationing, for many is the smart homemaker who realizes what a spark and zest those little bits of bright-colored jelly can lend to wartime meals. So, go out into the berry patch, and let's get started on a batch of jelly.

Cherries, plums and blackberries are coming into season and make splendid jellies. They're all easy to handle and make nice, rich, luscious jellies:

Ripe Sweet Cherry Jam.
(Makes 7 6-ounce glasses)
3½ cups prepared fruit
4 cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, pit about 2½ pounds fully ripe cherries. Crush thoroughly or grind. If a stronger cherry flavor is desired, add a few crushed cherry pits to fruit during cooking.

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure fruit into a 5- or 6-quart kettle, filling up last cup with water if necessary.

Place over a hot test fire. Add powdered fruit pectin. Mix well and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Pour in sugar at once, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, bringing to a full, rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire. Skim. Pour at once into sterilized jelly glasses and paraffin at once.

Ripe Plum Jelly.
(Makes 7 medium glasses)
3 cups juice
4 cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, crush about 3 pounds fully ripe plums. Do not peel or pit them. Add ¾ cup water, bring to a boil and simmer 10 minutes. Place fruit in jelly bag or cloth, and squeeze out juice. Add small amount of water to pulp in jelly cloth and squeeze again, if there is a slight shortage of juice.

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside. Measure juice into saucepan. Place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Pour in sugar at once, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, bring to a full, rolling boil, and boil hard ½ minute.

Remove from fire, skim, and pour into glasses quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

Lynn Says:

Jelly Forum: Pectin is the magic ingredient that makes jam "jam" and jelly "jell." There must be a just right amount of it. Pectin is a natural jellying substance found in fruits and berries, but when the fruit or berry is shy on it, a liquid or powdered form of pectin may be added.

Jams and jellies may be kept for various lengths of time, but for best practical purposes it is best not to try to keep them for over a year.

Melt paraffin for jelly in a small pot over boiling water. Paraffin should not be smoking hot because it might lend a disagreeable odor to the jelly or jam.

It's possible to put up fruit juice to be made into jelly later if you do not have enough sugar to do it during the summer. Prepare fruit according to directions given in the jelly recipes but do not add water to the recipe. Squeeze the juice in a jelly bag if it is for jelly. Fill hot sterile jars with juice and process in a boiling water bath for 20 minutes.

Your Canning Cupboard

*Ripe Cucumber Sweet Pickles
*Peach Nectar
*Recipe Given

Blackberry and Sour Cherry Jam.
(Makes 8 medium glasses)
3½ cups prepared fruit
4½ cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, crush thoroughly about 1 quart fully ripe blackberries. Pit 1 pound fully ripe cherries. Crush thoroughly or grind. Combine fruits. Measure fruit into a kettle, filling last fraction of cup with water if necessary.

Place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Pour sugar in at once, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute.

Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once.

You'll enjoy pickles, too, for your winter menu pickups. I've found some perfectly delightful recipes for you which will not take too much sugar — just in case you want to use most of the sugar on jams and jellies. Remember that you must use a pure apple cider vinegar and good, firm, fresh cucumbers to get nice, crisp pickles:

Cucumber-Raisin Pickles
4 cups sliced cucumbers
1 cup salt
1 cup white vinegar
1 cup sugar
6 tablespoons raisins
1 tablespoon celery seed
1 tablespoon mustard seed

Soak cucumbers overnight in salt solution made of 1 cup salt to 1 gallon water. Drain. Combine remaining ingredients and heat to boiling. Add cucumbers. Boil 10 minutes. Pour into sterilized jars and seal at once.

Ripe Cucumber Sweet Pickles.
8 large ripe cucumbers
½ pound stick cinnamon or oil of cinnamon
1 ounce cloves (or oil of cloves)
1½ pints vinegar
3 pounds sugar

Pare the cucumbers, quarter. Take out seeds and cut quarters into medium-sized pieces. Scald in salted water (2 tablespoons salt to 1 quart water). Drain and simmer in clear water until they are tender but firm. Drain well. Tie the spices in a bag and boil them with vinegar and sugar for 5 minutes. Pour this mixture over cucumbers, cover jar and set away. Next day pour off syrup and boil for 10 minutes, then pour over cucumbers again. Flavor is improved by repeating the process several times. With last heating, place pickles in clean, sterilized jars, cover with hot solution and seal at once.

Like fruit drinks for winter? You can make delicious nectars out of fruits easily and use them when fresh fruit juices are no longer available:

Peach Nectar.

Select sound, ripe fruit. Peel and crush. Combine 4 cups fruit with 3 cups water and heat slowly to simmering. Press through colander, then through fine sieve. To each pound of fruit pulp and juice, add ¾ pound of sugar. Bring to simmering temperature. Stir until sugar is well dissolved. Pour into clean, sterile jars. Put on cap. Process 30 minutes in a water bath at simmering temperature (180 degrees F).

If you have a canning problem, write to Miss Lynn Chambers, Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Please enclose a self-addressed envelope for your reply.

NEW YORK. — Vice-Adm. Frederick Joseph Horne takes a good look ahead through his binoculars and reports that the end of the war is not on the horizon. It may run until 1949 in the Pacific, he says, and he knows plenty about the Far East, and Tokyo in particular. He was in Japan all the time the United States was in the last war. He went out there as naval attache to the American embassy in January, 1915, and stayed four years. His government handed him the Navy Cross for what he accomplished, and Japan, being one of the Allies in those days, passed him a decoration, too, the Third Order of the Sacred Treasure.

Adm. Horne Sights No Early Peace on Pacific's Horizon

This is the third war in which this native New Yorker, now 63, has had a hand. He had entered the Naval academy in 1895 at the ripe young age of 15, and while still a middie he served in the North Atlantic aboard the USS Texas in the scrap with Spain. When the war was over, he went back to Annapolis, graduating in 1899. Since returning from Tokyo, he attended the Naval War college. What's more he went to the Army War college, too.

Back in the mid-Twenties some of his flying officers got his sea dog dander up when they tried to tell him that the orders he gave couldn't be carried out. He promptly had himself assigned for training with the air arm at Pensacola, and in 1926 he was qualified as a naval aviation observer. Later he commanded the aircraft carrier Saratoga. Since March, 1942, he has been one of Admiral King's right bowers in planning sea operations. Planes are his specialty.

IF Katharine F. Lenroot were settling upon a prayer for children, and who would be more likely to pray for them, she might easily cull from the atharva-veda, those loosely phrased hymns from India's old, old scripture:

Statistics Are Her Grenades in Battle For Child Welfare

"Old Age! This child shall grow to meet thee only;
None of the hundred other deaths shall harm him."

Children have been Miss Lenroot's concern for 30 years and on, and though progress must seem slow she probably would agree that in her time some of those hundred other deaths have been scotched.

Just back from South America she notes that there also at least a few have been; under-privileged children receive low-priced, even free food; medical care spreads. It is 13 years since she was last in South America and she found a change so great "I could hardly believe my eyes."

Ever since she went into the children's bureau of the department of labor, Miss Lenroot has had a strong interest in South America. She is well known there, and speaks Spanish fluently enough to make an easy way from the plateau cities of New Granada to low-lying and windy Punta Arenas, though she might be more comfortable if she stopped at Buenos Aires.

Children everywhere have been Miss Lenroot's strongest interest ever since she came out of the University of Wisconsin. Even earlier she was badgering that state's legislature in their behalf.

After graduation, a novice lawyer, she hired out as a deputy industrial commissioner, but after a couple of years found her life work with the federal bureau at Washington. She has been its chief for ten years, and is an authority on its multitude of problems.

She is a systematic chief and calm, but if the objective is big enough she can make a final drive as headlong as this fellow Patton, now all over Sicily. Statistics once led her to declare in distress that mothers were this country's cheapest commodity, so many of them die in childbirth. If she were saying that now she might put it ironically that they are as expendable as P-T boat crews at Corregidor. Her arsenal of facts and figures is inexhaustible. It would stretch from here to there and back again.

She Exposed the Expendability of Nation's Mothers

This is not to say that she is dull. Her sense of humor is keen and catholic and her public utterances can amuse as well as devastate, and her voice can charm. She comes from northern Wisconsin where those cold winds off bleak Lake Superior, or something, all too often put an edge on native voices, but hers is low and agreeable.

The figure that encloses the voice is on the stocky side, topped by loosely dressed hair that used to be blonde, about half way between a Harlow platinum and Bette Davis' middling locks.

Send Your Pulpwood To War

From the day a soldier goes to war, he is dependent on paper.

From his draft card to his honorable discharge, his records are kept on it.

His rations are packed in it; his explosives are made from it; his cartridges are wrapped in it; his shoes are lined with it; his letters are written on it.

His barracks are built with paper wallboard, paper roofing, paper insulation.

He shoots at paper targets, eats from paper plates, drinks from paper cups.

His battles are planned, his orders are issued on paper.

Literally, he lives, trains, travels and fights, with paper his indispensable ally.

School Postponed One Week; Will Begin Sept. 7

According to an announcement from the County Superintendent's office, the Chilton County Board of Education has decided to postpone all county schools for one week to aid farmers in picking cotton. A short schedule will be adopted by all schools for the first two weeks of the term.

School busses will operate under the same ODT restrictions as they did last year, with the exception of a regulation prohibiting the practice of transporting children by schools where their grades are being taught. Unless crowded conditions develop, children will be required to get off the bus at the nearest school.

All schools will begin together and there will be only 15 days difference between elementary and high school terms. This difference will cause high schools to run three weeks after elementary schools close next spring.

In spite of war-time shortages, only seven of the 207 teaching positions in the county are vacant. A complete list of teachers will be published later.

CHILTON COUNTY WAR FINANCE COMMITTEE TO MEET COURT HOUSE FRIDAY

COOPER - MARTIN

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Cooper of Jemison, Ala., announce the marriage of their daughter, Evelyn, to Cecil E. Martin, USN, of Lay Dam, Clanton, Alabama, at 8:00 p.m. Monday, August 9th.

The Rev. Ivy Edwards read the vows at the Dawson Memorial Church in the presence of intimate friends.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Miss Clarice Rowe.

Miss Louise Cooper, sister of the bride, served as the brides only attendant.

The bride wore a soldier blue suit and a corsage of pink rose buds.

The bride attended Florence State Teachers College and is a teacher at Jemison High School, and is a member of the Delta Kappa Gamma Sorority.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Martin of Lay Dam, Clanton, Alabama, and is in the USN.

After a short wedding trip the couple will return to Norfolk, Va.

SHILOH

Our Sunday school attendance was not so good Sunday, but let's all come to church next Sunday and try to have a better lesson.

Pictures of Handsome Little Men and Lovely Little Ladies Competing in Our Great Baby Campaign

RONALD TERRY BATES

SANDRA FAYE PETERSON

We are particularly fortunate in starting the publication of the pictures of the darling little children who are taking part in our Great Baby Competition, to be able to present today, for your pleasure and enjoyment, the pictures of those two charming little ones shown above.

Ronald Terry Bates is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Braxton Bates who reside in the Alabama Mills Section of Clanton. Little Sandra Faye Peterson is the lovely little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Peterson, Jemison, Ala.

Both of these delightful little folks were early entries in our Great Baby Feature, and you may be sure their parents will make every effort possible to return them victorious at the end of this appealing little race.

THIRD PRIZE	50.00
FOURTH PRIZE	25.00
FIFTH PRIZE	15.00
SIXTH PRIZE	10.00

On another page today will be found the first count of votes in our appealing Baby Competition, and now, the adorable little tots who are competing for the highest honors in Babyhood hereabouts (and incidentally for some very substantial cash prizes) have started on their merry way which will come to an end in a blaze of glory on Saturday evening, October 2.

The voting, as shown, is largely made up of coupon votes clipped from our newspaper. Here and there, however, a number of the little honeybunches have started stepping out a bit, as will be noted by their temporary leadership. This was caused by turning in a subscription in their favor and having it credited up to the baby in the voting shown on another page. And by the same token, there is not a little one in the list but what could be in the same position if their supporters would take the trouble to pick up a subscription and turn it in to their credit.

The race, of course, is just getting under way and the relative positions may all be changed when our next issue makes its appearance. The time, this week, has largely been occupied by bringing in coupon votes furnishing us pictures of the baby and securing a subscription book so they can give receipts and upon the cover of which you will be found a schedule of the votes and all necessary information. In the country, we can furnish lists of all our subscribers which should prove helpful Everyone who is going to take an active part in this attractive affair, should have one of these books. All around you are our subscribers, and any of them, among your friends and neighbors, will only be too glad to give you their renewal for that dear little sweetheart whom we all love to lavish affection upon.

NOTICE TO SCHOOL CHILDREN

No child should enter school unless he is six years of age on or before the first day of October. This is a State law. Every child is asked to take his birth certificate to school with him the first day so that the teacher may have his correct age for her records.

None of us have to be told that we are a part of a terrible war, a war which will determine whether the children of the world will stand as free men or go down as slaves. We are told over and over that the children of today are the men of tomorrow. The statement is true every time that we hear it. Our country is desperately in need of the 15 divisions of able bodied men who have been rejected for military service because they could not measure up to the 4th grade reading ability. These men were children a few years ago.

The people of London sent their children to school in bomb shelters under the ground when their schools had been destroyed. In some of the worse areas of China children are going to school in caves on the sides of hills and mountains.

The schools of this county will be opening during the next few weeks. Parents, teachers and citizens should make it their responsibility to see to it that the children of today have a chance to learn enough to become healthy, responsible citizens of tomorrow.

By planting crops even in such places as the grounds of Buckingham Palace, the British have doubled the amount of food they produced before the war.

Revival Services At First Baptist Church

The First Baptist Church of Clanton is happy to announce a series of special services, beginning Sunday, August 22, and continuing through the week—11:00 a.m. and 8:00 p.m.—in which Dr. John A Davison, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Selma will be the guest preacher, and Mr. L. G. Meadows, of Birmingham, will lead the song services.

Dr. Davison is one of the outstanding preachers of the South, and is now serving his second pastorate at the historic First Church of Selma. He is known as a strong Gospel preacher.

Mr. Meadows comes to us with the reputation of bei[illegible] an excellent lead[illegible], an effective worker among the children, and also a good soloist.

[illegible] all [illegible] We gr[illegible] shown in their cooperation, and we specially invite the working people to come to church.

You will not need to wear your coat, neither collar and tie. Come on just as you leave your work, and know that you will be as welcome as any could be. We believe you will receive a blessing as you listen to the preaching of God's Word [illegible] hearts in a prayer for God's blessing upon us.—Roswell E. Owens, Pastor.

PILOTS MEET WITH MRS. MARY LOU FOSHEE

The Pilots held their weekly meeting last Tuesday night at the home of Mary Lou Foshee, with Maude Nuss co-hostess.

A large attendance was enjoyed and much business was attended to.

Next meeting will be held at the home of Ada Bennett, with Mattie Jo Barber as co-hostess.

WAR FINANCE COMMITTEE TO MEET IN SELMA TUESDAY AUGUST 31.

Plans for the Third War Loan in Alabama will be discussed at a meeting of state officials and county chairmen of the Alabama War Finance Committee to be held in Selma the afternoon of Tuesday, August 31.

One of a series of 13 such meetings to be held throughout the state during August at the call of State War Finance Chairman Ed Leigh McMillan of Brewton, the meeting is the first step in the launching of the greatest financial campaign in the history of the state.

Mr. Samford, Mr. McMillan and Mr Clements will explain the Third War Loan Campaign and its objectives.

Mr J. C. Pattillo, Chilton County Chairman will attend this meeting.

EASTVIEW

The following services will be held this week end at Eastview:

Saturday

7:00—Women's Missionary Society meets at the church. Miss Marguerite Davison will address the women's group.

7:30—Play for Young People out of doors.

8:00—Thorsby Young People, under the direction of Miss Davison will present a dramatization about Young People's work. Everyone is urged to come.

Sunday

10:00—Sunday school. Superintendent, Mr. Tom Traywick.

11:00—Church service. Rev. Arnold Nelson will preach.

At the last church service a vote was taken to have services on Saturday night instead of Sunday night of the second and fourth Sundays.

Newspapers Rally Nation To Get Cut More Pulpwood

In an effort to overcome the 2,500,000 cord shortage of pulpwood which faces the U. S. this year and threatens production of vital war materials, newspapers all over the country are starting a drive to increase cutting of pulpwood on farms and in forests.

As they did last year when a concentrated three-week campaign got 6,000,000 tons of scrap metal from cellars and attics to keep mills turning out arms, the newspapers are joining the drive to get all farmers who own woodlots and pulpwood cutters to give three extra days to the production of th[illegible]

A. D. SMITH BUYS SOUTH CLANTON STORE

A. D. Smith who has been in the grocery and meat business for several years has bought the old stand formerly owned and operated by R. W. Lowe in South Clanton. He purchased the business from E. E. White.

Mr. Smith has many friends in and about Clanton and he wants to know that they have a standing invitation to visit his store and allow him to serve their needs in groceries and fresh meats.

MASONIC CONFERENCE

To the Officers and Members of the Chilton County Masonic Conference:

We, your committee on memorials, beg to make and submit the following resolutions in memory of our deceased brethren, Bros. T. N. Howard, M. F. Plier, Rev. E. L. Manning, all of Hiriam B. Oliver Lodge No. 754, of Verbena, Ala.; Bros. J. D. Griffin, Dr. P. T. Hinkle, W. A. Willis, all of Clanton Lodge No. 423; Bro. G. F. Harper, Thorsby Lodge No. 759; Bro. W. G. Atkinson, of Jemison Lodge No. 411, who have crossed the Great Divide since our last session of the conference:

Although our friends and brothers be dead, yet their influence lives on, of such are those who build monuments which never rust, corrode, nor time efface;

Therefore, be it resolved, that although we miss their genial presence, their sunny smiles, and their wise counsel. We can in humble submission, bow to the Will of God Who doeth all things well;

Be it further resolved, that we extend our heart-felt sympathy to all the bereaved and point them to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world;

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to each of the bereaved families and one each to the Chilton County News and The Union-Banner for publication, and one spread upon the minutes of the conference.

Respectfully submitted,
Committee,
HOWARD ROPER, LEROY B. MARTIN, C. N. EILAND.

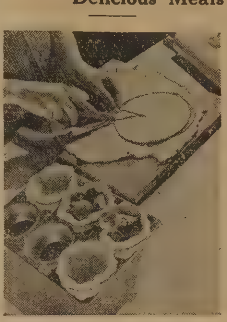
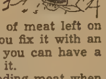
HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

You Can Stretch Meats and Have Delicious Meals



Leftovers need not recline on the refrigerator shelf when you can make them into delicious meat pies like this, simply and easily. Use leftovers from a roast with a few fresh vegetables and gravy to tuck inside the flaky piecrust.

Short on red points at the end of the week? There are several answers to the problem and I'm devoting the column to those suggestions today.



It's a good idea to be smart in your use of leftovers, and this is particularly true if you've splurged at the beginning of the week by purchasing a roast. After using the roast twice, you still have a bit of meat left on the bones, and if you fix it with an eye to camouflage, you can have a savory meal out of it.

Best way of extending meat when there's little enough of that is by using vegetables generously. Cut off what pieces of meat you can find on the bone and combine these with some lovely, fresh-cooked vegetables such as carrots, peas, onions, potatoes and perhaps a few strips of green pepper for flavor. Combine all together with some of your favorite seasonings and tuck the whole mixture into these individual meat pies. In this way, your leftovers won't languish in the refrigerator.

Making Meat Pies.

Sift together 2 cups all-purpose flour and ¾ teaspoon salt. Cut into this ⅔ cup lard with spatula and work until the particles are the size of a small pea. Sprinkle 4 tablespoons water over the mixture, working it lightly with a fork until all the particles are moistened and in small lumps. Press dough into a ball, handling as little as possible. Flour board lightly. Divide pastry in half, roll lightly to an eighth-inch thickness. Using a 3½-inch pie plate, cut circles from pastry.

Cut ½-inch wedge from circle to insure better fit into muffin tins. Press the pastry lightly to fit tins and lap over wedge. Fill with meat - vegetable mixture. Roll out remaining dough, cut in circles to fit over top of each muffin tin. Press edges of crust together. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) 35 minutes. Remove from tins and serve hot.

Here's a salad that's rich in proteins and can be used to pitch in for the main dish when points are on the slim side:

Green Lima and Bacon Salad.
(Serves 5 to 6)

2 cups cooked green lima beans
2 hard-cooked eggs
½ cup salted peanuts, chopped
2 teaspoons onion juice
4 strips crisp bacon
1 cup diced celery
¼ cup chopped pickle
½ teaspoon salt, if desired
Mayonnaise

Lynn Chambers' Point-Saving Menu

*Broiled Liver Sausage and Tomatoes
Potato Chips Green Salad
Rye Bread Iced Coffee
Chilled Cantaloupe
*Recipe Given

Combine ingredients, add salt and mayonnaise. Serve on crisp lettuce with bits of bacon.

Have you discovered that cold sausage and meat loaves are low in point value and that they go further than the same quantity of fresh meat? And, if you really like a hot dish for a meal, that the cold meats are equally delicious when served hot? You'll like these suggestions:

Bologna Spaghetti.
(Serves 4)

½ pound bologna
⅓ cup onion, sliced
1 tablespoon bacon drippings
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon allspice
⅛ teaspoon cloves
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1½ cups tomato juice
3 cups cooked spaghetti

Dice 2 slices of bologna in skillet and brown with onion and bacon drippings. Add to this seasonings and tomato juice and simmer until thickened. Add cooked spaghetti and heat thoroughly. Serve with several slices of pan-fried bologna.

*Broiled Liver Sausage and Tomatoes (Serves 4).

½ pound liver sausage, sliced
4 large tomatoes, cut in half
8 slices of onion

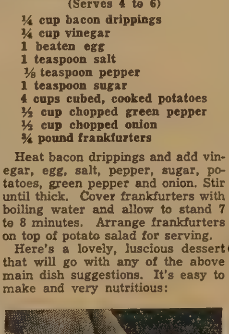
Cut liver sausage into slices about ¼ inch thick. Remove casing. Place the slice of liver sausage on the broiling pan with tomatoes that have been cut in half and brushed with butter, seasoned with salt and pepper. Broil for about 8 minutes. Liver sausage need not be turned. As soon as tomatoes have broiled for about 4 minutes, top them with onion slices, if desired.

Frankfurters With Potato Salad.
(Serves 4 to 6)

¼ cup bacon drippings
¼ cup vinegar
1 beaten egg
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon sugar
4 cups cubed, cooked potatoes
½ cup chopped green pepper
½ cup chopped onion
¾ pound frankfurters

Heat bacon drippings and add vinegar, egg, salt, pepper, sugar, potatoes, green pepper and onion. Stir until thick. Cover frankfurters with boiling water and allow to stand 7 to 8 minutes. Arrange frankfurters on top of potato salad for serving.

Here's a lovely, luscious dessert that will go with any of the above main dish suggestions. It's easy to make and very nutritious:



Here are the golden brown, rich, luscious pies being taken from the muffin tins all ready to serve. If you have a fresh fruit salad with the meat pie and a beverage, your whole meal's complete.

Apricot Whip.
(Serves 6 to 8)

1 No. 2½ can apricots
2 cups milk
2 eggs
¼ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Drain apricots. Mash with spoon. Chill. Scald milk. Beat eggs slightly, then add sugar and salt. Add milk slowly, mixing well. Cook in double boiler stirring constantly until mixture coats metal spoon. Take from fire, add vanilla and chill. When ready to serve, fold in chilled, mashed apricots.

Tips on Keeping Cool: Acting cool and thinking cool actually works a magic in making you cool. It's important to plan your day ahead so that it runs smoothly and so there will be a minimum of confusion—for that always makes weather hotter.

Dress cool, eat cool. Dress sensibly, keeping plenty of clean summer clothes on hand—things that can be done up with soap and water in a hurry and need little ironing. Crispy salads—even in the imagination—cool you off, and of course, frosty drinks.

Do your hot kitchen work in the cool morning hours. Make whatever preparations you can on the food front and store in the refrigerator, ready to pull out for dinner with a minimum of rush and hurry. Keep things simple, and you'll keep cool.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

GOD GIVES LAWS FOR HIS PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 23:1-9; Galatians 3:23-28; 5:13-14.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself.—Luke 10:27.

Our God is a God of order. To have order we must have law, hence God gave His people not only the fundamental law of humanity's moral sense of right and wrong, and the Ten Commandments which are the basis of all codes of law, but also those detailed regulations needed for the law's interpretation.

The law of God was not intended to establish a legalistic system of salvation by work, but, as revealed in the New Testament, it was to guide and bring us to Christ, in whom it finds its true fulfillment.

These are matters of fundamental importance and suggest the need of a careful study of our three Scripture portions.

I. The Law Established (Exod. 23:1-9).

At Sinai the Israelites were brought into the presence of God in a dramatic and solemn assembly to hear the words of God from the mountain. These were later written as the Ten Commandments on the tables of stone. Here they learned in a new way of the majesty, the righteousness, and the love of God.

The Ten Commandments are recognized as the foundation on which all legal codes, ancient and modern, are built. They cover man's relation to God and his relation to his fellow man. They are unsurpassed as a comprehensive and compact statement of the moral law.

The passage in Exodus 23 gives us some of the rules and regulations for daily life which are in a sense an interpretation of the law. This portion gives us an idea of the type of laws provided by God for His people and reveals "the moral flavor of the whole divine legislation."

The thing which impresses us as we read of the divine requirements of justice toward all, of love for one's enemies, of refraining from false witness, of refusing all bribery, is that God's standards are very high.

God's law is good, it is right, of divine quality and perfect purity. It has, however, an even higher purpose than providing direction for life. We learn of that as we hear

II. The Law Described (Gal. 3:23-28).

What was the purpose of the law? It was and is a servant of God to lead the needy sinner to Christ. The word "tutor" in verse 24 does not refer to one who teaches, but the servant who saw to it that the school boy, possibly a bit reluctant, arrived at his destination.

The law convicts of sin and makes it evident to the repentant one that he needs divine help if he is ever to meet its demands. The law really puts a man in prison (kept in ward," v. 23), and makes him look to Christ to set him free.

When one trusts Christ he comes into the place of a son. He enters upon a spiritual maturity which makes it no longer necessary to have a tutor directing and disciplining him. He has entered into a new relationship by faith, and is a child of God.

Does this mean that the law has been set aside or abrogated? Not at all. Jesus Himself said, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law . . . I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill" (Matt. 5:17). This is our third point.

III. The Law Fulfilled (Gal. 5:13, 14).

Paul had warned against the folly of legalism. In Christ men are free from a slavish bondage to the law. But men, desiring to substitute license for liberty, were using the grace of God as an excuse for self-indulgence and sin.

Christ has set aside all the ceremonial requirements of the law, for He became the perfect, once-for-all sacrifice for sin, which was infinitely superior to all the offerings of the Old Testament law. He thus fulfilled the type of the offerings.

The moral requirements of the law were gathered up in Him, and in Him we have only one law to fulfill, the law of love. Obedience to that law meets all the moral requirements of the Old Testament law.

Liberty to the Christian is not a freedom to do as he pleases, not "an occasion to the flesh" that it may live in selfishness and sin. We are free only to be bound by the blessed law of love.

The tablets of stone were (and still are) important. Their laws have never been set aside or withdrawn. But in Christ God has done what He spoke of through Jeremiah the prophet, He has put His law in the Christian's inner being, and has written it in his heart. (Jer. 31:33).

Definite Foreign Policy Essential to America

The Issue: Shall Nation Adopt Policy of Participation in World Affairs or Shall We Aim at Nationalistic Goal?

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

Today America faces its first real problem as a world power.

Italy lies before us. General Eisenhower, as commander of the Allied forces of invasion, suddenly becomes a statesman. He is a soldier. He can win battles. Now, he is the man ultimately responsible for directing American world policy. What is American world policy?

Eisenhower is firm in his decisions, certain in his own procedure, because he is responsible only to his Commander-in-Chief.

But who is his Commander-in-Chief? Roosevelt. A man who may suddenly leave the scene in the midst of battle, if the American public so decrees.

And then? Has America any firm foreign policy, unfettered by partisan political restriction, a clear-marked path that a fighting man or any other man can follow?

In a few short weeks from now, a group of busy, hard-pressed men are going to sit down on Mackinac island and try to write what American foreign policy they think ought to be sponsored by the Republican party.

These men have to face the question of committing the Republican party to a definite foreign policy. And paradoxically, by committing their party to a definite foreign policy, they may free both political parties of all commitment on foreign policy. For if the Democrats frame similar resolutions, they can save America from a vicious split—one which, if it is not avoided, will crash party lines and can destroy the two-party system, the rock of our democracy.

The issue which America faces is simple: shall we, as a nation, underwrite a policy which will implement our participation in world affairs or shall we retire unto ourselves and pursue the nationalistic policy which says in effect: let the rest of the world stew in its own juice?

Until we took the Philippines, America was able to leave the great and vital problems which should have no political tinge, outside partisan politics. We have had other problems which have remained essentially non-partisan.

The Problems

Take labor. A vital question. But has labor ever voted solidly for one ticket or the other? No. The AFL will cast its traditional Republican votes in the coming election as it always has. Some of the CIO members will vote to support the administration. Others will vote as they darn please.

Slavery—really a labor question. That did nearly wreck the republic because it was made a partisan issue when it was not an issue at all! Many of the influential southerners were just as ready to free their slaves as the rabid abolitionists, heated with emotional fervor, failing to grasp the economic significance, were to force them to.

Again, unless a cold, calm discussion and understanding of the question of foreign policy takes place, we may face another split which, although it need not mean civil war, may mean a horrid dislocation of our whole political system.

When we went into World War II after Pearl Harbor, the word "isolationism" was forgotten. Today it has come back into our vocabularies and is being batted about, like other political footballs, by people who really don't understand its implications and are woefully ignorant of what dissension it may cause.

Politicians want to overlook it.

They can't. This group of Republicans, headed by Deneen Watson, and a whole flying squadron of Democrats, too, are insistent that they be allowed to "let the people know." They are going to speak their pieces. And the only hope of lifting this discussion out of partisan politics is a "settlement out of court," an agreement by both parties on a single foreign policy.

Let's get back to that hot and perspiring day in Washington late last month when Deneen Watson and his colleagues from this self-appointed Republican organization, the Republican "foreign policy association," walked across quiet Lafayette park opposite the White House and presented themselves to Chairman Spangler of the Republican national committee.

Results of Session

It was some time before the results of this meeting between Watson and his colleagues and Chairman Spangler of the Republican national committee leaked out. Those with an anti-Republican slant, wove the words dropped into a threatened split in the Republican party, a drive to nominate Wendell Willkie for president.

To the person who tried to be objective, it was neither.

Mr. Spangler has one job—to keep the party together, to eschew any favoritism for any policy or any person. Naturally, these persistent persons who called upon him were presenting a problem. I believe it was that fact rather than what his critics said that indicated there was a leaning toward the "status quo" attitude, the desire to remain a purveyor of platitudes and follow the tide rather than to face it.

This issue—full participation in world affairs versus a return to nationalism or isolationism, if you will—is, according to our most earnest non-partisans, the most important issue which has faced the public and should not be a political football.

Briefly, what the men with their sleeves rolled up at Mackinac in September have to face is this: shall we, good Republicans, come out frankly for world-co-operation or dodge the issue?

What the Watson association demands is more than that and something the Republican national committee must face: will the party officially get behind a nation-wide campaign to "educate" the people on the international issue?

Unfortunately, personalities do get mixed up in these things and Wendell Willkie has become the symbol of the international view.

That is why it is essential, if the party is to take the issue out of partisan politics and disassociate it from any of the individuals aspiring for the Republican candidacy, that they must go on record.

The Monroe Doctrine

Walter Lippmann has written a book called "American Foreign Policy" and the point he makes is this: until 1900, politics did stop at the water's edge. We had a foreign policy (or thought we did) which was the Monroe Doctrine. According to Lippmann, we were living under a delusion. Namely, that we had under the Monroe Doctrine declared our whole policy—America for Americans (period) which implied, of course, that the rest of the world could do what it pleased so long as it kept off our grass.

We believed that we could enforce that policy ourselves. That was not correct. We were really depending on the British fleet to enforce it. It happened to be to British advantage to agree, so there was no trouble.

Then we mixed in world affairs, found we had to fight our own battles, and did it—took over Hawaii, the Philippines. But we didn't provide the means to hold them. And so, disagreeing on the various steps necessary to carry out our foreign policy, we failed to provide the means to do so—Britain was busy elsewhere, and one morning we lost the Philippines and came within an eyelash of losing Hawaii.

And so we now face the necessity of framing a new foreign policy which must include the willingness to provide security for our own shores and those other contiguous shores (South America and Canada) which might be used by an enemy against us. Or we have to take part in prophylactic measures—to stop the danger to our security in advance.

That issue once clarified by the two political parties will leave us free for a good, old-fashioned free-for-all political campaign, and if the best man wins, or the worst man wins, his policies can't affect the international welfare of the nation.

Failure of both parties to clearly set forth their views on foreign policy may well create a third party movement which could wreck the two-party system, the rock on which our Republic is founded.

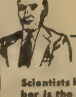
When armored knights met, it was customary for each knight to raise the visor of his helmet as a means of identification. This gesture has come down through all armies in the form of the salute. Traditional, too, is the Army man's preference for Camel cigarettes. With men in the Army, Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard, actual sales records in their service stores show that Camel is the favorite. It's one of the favorite gifts with service men. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER



Scientists have found that rubber is the only substance that can be stretched tremendously and resume approximately its original form. Too much stretching, such as in underinflated tires, causes "fatigue" —and deterioration.

The first manufacture of rubber footwear outside the United States took place in 1856 in Scotland.

If gasoline consumption is a gauge of tire wear, more miles are run in July and August than any other months. Of the gas used in 1941, 9.5% was consumed in August and 9.4% in July. February was the low month, with 6.4% of the year's total.

PATES CHAPEL

Well, as we have started a new week, we will try to join you again for a few words. Everybody seems to be working hard to try to save this hay crop and other crops. Also the school children are beginning to prepare for school. Cotton is opening a good bit, which is going to cause them to work harder to get to go to school.

We are sorry to report that we did not have any preaching Sunday morning, nor Sunday night, on the account of sickness.

Mrs. Nix was sick all last week and was carried to the hospital Sunday morning. Last reports from her are that she was some better. We hope she will soon be able to return home and able to be back in church with us, because we sure do miss her our religious work.

Mrs. Philip Franklin's foot is proving and L. H. Price's foot is improved.

We are glad to report that Mr. Mrs. Earl Hayes are the proud ents of a beautiful baby girl. Mo and baby are doing fine.

There are several cases of in this community, but we thin will soon be well.

There was Sunday school and P.U. Sunday and Sunday night, will be next Sunday and Sunday Everybody come and bring som with you. We were glad to have itors Sunday night and we invit back.

$300.00 IN PRIZES GIVEN IN NEWS BABY CAMPAIGN

NEWS, very likely they would be glad to do so for the same purpose. We think our paper is at least the equal of any of the various county weeklies and it surely will be a practical and useful addition to any family household, especially in this county.

It has rather astonished us at the intense interest shown in the babies by the people of this county, and by former residents of this community, now located in other sections of the country who are subscribers to our paper. Votes come piling in by mail as well as being handed in at our office by various persons interested in some particular baby. And all this without any solicitation by the parents who, in many cases, have taken no special interest in the campaign. This certainly should be a matter of much pride and satisfaction to the parents of the little ones thus favored and it should stir them into instant activity in their baby's behalf. Surely, you fathers and mothers are not going to sit idly by and let others send in votes for your baby without you, yourselves, putting your shoulders to the wheel and helping the good work along.

A few subscriptions would work wonders in the baby's position in the race if its supporters would pick them up from their friends; they are all around you and can be had for the asking. Remember, we are giving a bonus of 5,000 extra votes on each subscription turned in between now and next Wednesday evening, the 25th. This bonus would make a new 1 year subscription worth 8,000 votes and 7,000 votes in case it is a renewal. Just stop and figure a minute and see what a few subscriptions would amount to in votes, and then make up your mind you are going to get some of them during this very profitable period—it's the [illegible] bonus that will prevail during the whole course of the [illegible] so if you wish your baby to maintain its position in the [illegible] don't fail to take advantage of [illegible] opportunity.

The large list of candidates is rather confusing but it is very probable only a fraction of them will take an active part in the competition. In a great many cases, we are satisfied the parents themselves, are not going to [illegible] made known to us, the ones for whom no attempt is to be made, will be dropped from the list. If they don't even go to the trouble of sending in the votes carried in the paper, that's a sure sign they are not interested, then we will begin dropping them from the list. So don't let the large number of entries now shown, influence you to not enter your baby, or not to take an active interest in capturing a nice prize for your sweetheart who is already getting votes from its admirers. The number of entries will be reduced very soon. However, a large number of competitors should have no bearing on your baby's success—the more candidates in the race, the less number of votes any particular baby is going to get, so perhaps the larger the field of candidates, the easier it will be for you to be successful. One thing is sure, the sooner you become active in your community, the less likely it will be that you will have local competition, and that will be a big factor in your favor.

As you have already noticed, the pictures of the little ones start this week and they will be a regular feature from now on. We will have a bunch of them to show you may be sure of that, and they are just about the dearest and loveliest little sweethearts it will ever be your good fortune to gaze upon. There is no special hurry about getting the pictures to us, but the sooner we get them, the earlier they will make their appearance. We have to send the pictures to an Engraver in New Orleans and this takes a week or ten days before they are returned to us. Every person in the county is waiting anxiously for their publication, they either have kinfolks in the contest or are admirers of some little honeybunch within the ken of their acquaintance, whom they are pulling for with might and main—you parents will not let them down, we know.

Remember to take advantage of the big 5,000 extra vote bonus, also to send in the coupon votes cut from our paper before the date on them expires; it will be extended each week so you will have lots of time to collect them and send them in, before [illegible]

THIS COMMUNITY HAS A SPECIAL WAR JOB

THIS COMMUNITY is on the spot! We are in a pulpwood growing section and there is now a pulpwood shortage. The country needs vast quantities of pulpwood for explosives, rayon parachutes, gas mask filters, shipping containers and a thousand other uses — yet some of the mills that make these things are actually shutting down for lack of wood.

This is a desperate situation—a war emergency. Something must be done QUICKLY!

And only we who live in the pulpwood cutting areas can do anything about it.

This is OUR responsibility.

How the problem can be solved

Mr. Donald M. Nelson, Chairman of the War Production Board, gave the key to the solution in the following statement:

"If every one of the more than 3,800,000 farmers in the 27 pulpwood producing states were to devote 3 EXTRA days in 1943 to cutting pulpwood, we could overcome the threatened 2,500,000 cord shortage with wood to spare."

Will you enlist for 3 EXTRA days?

If you are now cutting pulpwood part time; if you have cut it in the past; or if you have never cut it but know how to use an axe and saw, will you pledge 3 EXTRA days (at regular pay) to meet Mr. Nelson's challenge?

Fill in the coupon. Mail it to this newspaper and you will receive the pledge badge which identifies you as a Victory Pulpwood Cutter.

This is a war emergency.

Your Place In Peace

By Rufus T. Strohm

Dean, International Correspondence Schools

Rufus T. Strohm

THE war has revolutionized industry. In the first place, the life-and-death urgency of war production has developed new methods and new products that will one day be turned to the uses of daily life in a new world of peace. In the second place, it has thrust countless men and women into new jobs.

This experience has taught thousands how to master new trades and new techniques, proved to them that they are never too old to learn and, most important of all, given them the study habit. They have turned a part of the scant spare time of war days to study that would help them do more and better work for victory —discovering incidentally that their own jobs are the best sort of laboratory for demonstration of principles set forth in the training courses they follow. And that habit is of more value to them than the dollars they have earned.

Education of this kind is the key to the door of opportunity in the post-war world. Many workers have been trained in some single process of war industry, but to make use of that training after the war they must have a broader and more thorough knowledge of their whole craft. Others, who were skilled before the war, will not be skilled after, unless they bring themselves abreast of the technical advances of these few years.

There is nothing new in the notion that successful men are those who, habitually, all their lives long, keep studying and planning for bigger jobs, more important ventures. What is new is that the war has taught the value of such study to great numbers who never gave it a thought before and that the peace will force it upon thousands more.

The study habit does not mean the mere satisfying of an idle curiosity about scientific progress. It means a down-to-earth, purposeful, realistic pursuit of a definite plan to develop knowledge and skill for practical use.

If you have already formed this study habit, you will find your place when peace comes. Men like you will be needed.

If you have not, then it's time to begin before you wake up to find yourself a man of yesterday in the world of tomorrow.

War Bonds should mean something more to you than just "a good sound investment." Figure it out yourself.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Southwest Pacific Campaigns Unfold With Decisive Victories Against Japs; Allied Chiefs Confer for Sixth Time; WPB: 'Essential Civilian Goods Only'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

From left to right, Maj. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes, Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery and Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton study a huge map of Sicily at the royal palace in Palermo, the island's No. 1 metropolis on the shore of the Tyrrhenian sea, which was captured by American doughboys.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:

'Victory Sure'

The Allies' Solomons and New Guinea campaign unfolded in a victorious pattern: Munda lay stormed. Allied troops beat their way through the thick jungle foliage toward Salamaua. The big guns of America's fleet battered at the enemy's faltering supply line. Ranging U. S. airmen gave heartened ground troops assistance by machine gunning and bombing the Nips in low level attacks.

Gen. MacArthur

From his headquarters in the Southwest Pacific, Gen. Douglas MacArthur declared:

"The margin was close, but it was conclusive.

"Although for many reasons our victories may have lacked in glamorous focus, they have been decisive in the final result in the Pacific.

"I make no predictions as to the time and detail, but Japan, on the Pacific fronts, has exhausted the fullest resources of the concentrated attack of which she was capable."

SICILY:

Few Left

After one month of fighting, three German divisions stood behind in Sicily for a suicidal rearguard action against the overwhelming air and ground superiority of the Allies. As the campaign neared its finale, the Rome radio announced that all Italian troops had been pulled out of the embattled island.

With the bulk of the Allies' 10 divisions bearing down through the sloping valley below Mt. Etna to encompass the last two important communication lines running north and south, and with fleets of bombers pulverizing important Axis concentration centers, the ring around the enemy was drawn tighter.

Hewn into the rugged country, German strongholds put up a bitter, last-ditch fight against the advancing Allies, machine-gunning and throwing mortar fire at Allied troops picking their way slowly up the open, craggy hills. Wherever they fell back, the Germans were dynamiting the hill or mountain sides to block off the roads.

DADS' DRAFT:

Congress May Act

Congressional action to settle the controversial question of the induction of fathers loomed with the announcement of Representative Andrew J. May that he would introduce a bill prohibiting the drafting of dads when the legislators reconvene September 14.

Importance of the development lay in the fact that May is chairman of the military affairs committee, on which the house relies for judgment in army matters. May said that with 10 million men already under arms and with 80,000 18-year-olds being inducted each month, the army is of sufficient size.

HOME FRONT:

Essential Goods Only

Limited supplies of carbon and alloy steel, copper and aluminum preclude the possibility of an increase in less essential civilian goods, the War Production board announced.

To keep production schedules geared to available supplies, WPB said, it was necessary to reduce requests of the military, civilian, lend-lease and other claimant agencies by 13 per cent for the third quarter. The services' demands for carbon steel were pared by 9 per cent, and all others' requests by 17 per cent. Because of manpower shortages, the situation in copper is particularly tight, it was reported.

At the present time, the government is conducting a survey to determine the inventory of civilian goods, and it is expected that any future requests for critical material for such goods would be considered on the basis of available supplies.

ALLIED CHIEFS:

Important Meet

Winston Churchill

With world events moving in a swift and momentous current, stoop-shouldered, twinkle-eyed Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Great Britain bridged the Atlantic to arrive on the North American continent for his sixth meeting with President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

As the two leaders sat down at the same table for the most important of their conferences to date, Sicily lay beaten, Mussolini had given way to a military government in Italy, rumors were rife that the army was assuming direction in Germany, and Japan was making an effort to bring Russia and the Nazis together in Europe, with a sacrifice of some of her own territory in Manchuria or Siberia.

The urgency of opening another front in Europe, of extending operations in the Pacific where General MacArthur's army was pushing the Japs from their island strongholds, were among the military questions under intense consideration.

RUSSIA:

Drive on Kharkov

With Orel and Belgorod at their backs, Russia's surging armies closed in on the once-great industrial metropolis of Kharkov. All along the southern front, German troops fell back before the long, powerful arms of Red pincers could firmly entrap and destroy them.

Once known as the "Pittsburgh" of Russia, Kharkov, like Stalingrad, lay in ruins, a gaunt ghost of the once-busy industrial center which turned out steel and armament for the Red armies. Occupied by the Germans early in the war, it was recaptured by Russia, only to be lost this spring.

After the capture of Orel, the Reds secured use of a rail line running south from Moscow through Belgorod to a point about 30 miles west of Kharkov. This gives them better communication in their rear.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

RUSSIAN OIL: Pay rates of Russian oil field and refinery workers have been raised to stimulate production, says a dispatch from Moscow. Basic wages will now be rated on nine levels, two new ones for specialists having been added. Commentators believe that the new oil industry scale is the first step toward greater recognition of experienced, valuable workers.

COFFEE PLASTIC: Thousands of articles, from radio cabinets to airplane wings, can be made of a new plastic derived from coffee, says Dr. Argeu Guimaraes, new consul from Brazil. The new substance, still in the experimental stage, is called "cafelite." The consul believes that a great new market will be opened for coffee, one of Brazil's principal crops.

SOMEBODY ELSE PAYS!

This is one time the woman doesn't pay and pay!

An unemployed 39-year-old Texan wrote the war department's office of dependency benefits, asking if he could apply for a family allowance on the basis of his wife's service as a WAC.

From the looks of things, the gent will have to get a job after all, for the army's answer left no room for doubt or argument: it was a very positive "NO!"

Beginning September 1, when the WACs officially become a part of the army, they may apply for family allowances for dependent children, mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters and other specified relatives—but not for husbands!

NORMANDIE:

Right Side Up

With high tide in, the great hull of the former French luxury liner, Normandie, heaved gently and came to rest at a 49 degree angle in the New York dock, where she had capsized 18 months ago after a disastrous fire.

Within the huge hull, 50,000 gallons of water still remained, half of the 100,000 gallons which had filled the hold when 95 pumps first began emptying the stricken vessel. To President Roosevelt, Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York gave major credit for the salvage job, declaring that the President as an amateur seaman offered a suggestion for the most efficient concentration of the pumps for drawing the water.

At the time the Normandie, renamed the USS Lafayette, fell over on her side to come to rest at a 79 degree angle, the navy was completing work on her reconstruction as a troopship, with the cost estimated at $20,000,000. Salvage operations already have exceeded $3,000,000 and an additional $750,000 will be required for refitting the hull. When originally built, the Normandie cost $59,000,000.

MEAT:

Sees More Supplies

Beef production will rise 20 per cent in the last half of 1943 and pork output will increase 10 per cent, Wesley Hardenbergh, president of the American Meat institute, estimated. As a whole, there should be a 17 per cent boost in meat supply.

During the fiscal year which began last July 1, meat consumption should total 14 billion, 700 million pounds, Hardenbergh said. Two out of every three pounds will be available to civilians.

During the first seven months of 1943, the department of agriculture announced that 35,324,248 hogs had been slaughtered against 30,812,661 in the same period last year; 5,827,659 cattle had been butchered against 6,805,660; and 11,379,504 sheep and lambs had been killed against 10,917,738.

AGRICULTURE:

Income Soars

Farm income for the first half of 1943 totaled $8,202,000,000 against $6,215,000,000 last year, the department of agriculture reported. Marketing of a large part of the record crops of last year contributed to the big upturn, the department said.

Cash receipts from crops during the first half of 1943 topped last year's receipts by 45 per cent, while income from livestock and livestock products showed a 31 per cent increase.

Of the total income in the first half, government payments accounted for $400,000,000. This compared with last year's payments of $431,000,000.

Farmers on Own

Marvin Jones

Declaring "This country is too broad, too far flung, too varied in its production to have the work done by directives in Washington," War Food Administrator Marvin Jones called upon the farmers and stockmen of America for a voluntary effort to reach the nation's food goals.

Previously, Jones had announced that the government plans no 1944 crop controls, except on tobacco, no acreage allotments, no marketing quotas and no benefit payments for compliance with control. In the hands of state, county and community organizations will lie the development of the production program, Jones said.

"While we may not have as great a choice of foods as we have been accustomed to heretofore," Jones said, "I have no doubt that the civilian population of this country will have a sufficient amount of good wholesome food."

TAX REPORTS:

In an effort to simplify federal tax reports, the treasury has undertaken a special study of tax laws. Officials stated that reports may not be required of some classes of taxpayers, if the burden of paper work can be reduced without loss of revenue.

No matter what results from the investigation, however, there will be no immediate change in regulations, officials pointed out. Approximately 15 million income tax payers will have to file an estimate of 1943 income on September 15.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

A NOVEL contribution to Hollywood's and radio's war efforts is the "Sew and Sew" club, headed by Penny Singleton, who's "Blondie" of the air and the screen. Penny organized the club to perform emergency sewing jobs on servicemen's uniforms, ranging from simple repairs to alterations. She has enlisted some of Hollywood's outstanding movie and radio luminaries as members of her unique organization. And anyone who encounters thousands of servicemen on leave in a strange city will realize how valuable it is.

Joe Howard, perhaps the oldest performer in radio, is still one of the most successful, judging by a deal that he recently completed. Joe, singing troubador of the "Gay Nineties Revue," over CBS Monday nights, sold Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer the film rights to "The Time, the Place and the Girl," a hit musical which he wrote and produced several decades ago.

On July 18 Dick Haymes made his debut on the air's "Here's to Romance." July 19 he made screen tests. At one o'clock on the 26th, 20th Century-Fox executives looked at the tests—and at 4:30 Haymes signed a contract to make two films a year for the next seven years. Three months ago he was singing with Tommy Dorsey's band.

Hollywood's oddest summer school is composed of four students—Bonita Granville, Anne Shirley, Kent Smith and Rita Corday. They study Chinese. Their teacher is Edward Dmytryk; he's the director who, following his success with "Hitler's Children," was signed to direct RKO's "Behind the Rising Sun." He began studying Chinese some years ago.

Lou Crosby, radio announcer, will make his film debut as a Nazi soldier captured by Russian guerrillas in "One Hour of Glory," Casey Robinson production for RKO. Announcer for the Lum 'n Abner program, Crosby has one of radio's best speaking voices.

Most radio executives think that summer radio fare should be light and frothy to succeed, but the latest survey figures indicate that the public doesn't agree. "Screen Guild Players," Monday night CBS dramatic series that stars Hollywood's top names, leads all the others in listener popularity, according to Hooper and Crossley survey figures. This is the program on which none of the actors and actresses are paid; the money they would ordinarily receive goes to the Screen Actors guild, to aid indigent movie people.

Betty Rhodes has begun making her second Personal Album for OWI. These albums contain recordings of songs and informal talks and are sent to Alaska, Ireland, Africa—wherever American troops are stationed at a great distance from home. The singing star recently finished the feminine lead in a musical comedy called "Salute for Three."

Kate Smith, in her 13th year as a radio star, has signed a new three-year contract. Her contracts are unique in that they're always for three years, and the options fall due at the end of each season, when the old one still has two years to run.

Cecil Brown has no crystal ball—but on May 20 the news broadcaster said "The Italians might pop up with a chastened Count Ciano, or Dino Grande . . . or a Marshal Badoglio with new-found courage." Just two months and five days early!

ODDS AND ENDS—Ella Mae Morse, singer on the Johnny Mercer program, was dickering with two film companies while a third dickered for the use of Ella Mae's four-months-old baby in a movie . . . Feodor Chaliapin, son of the famous Russian singer, will play a Russian soldier in United Artists' "The Girl From Leningrad" . . . Neil Hamilton, old-timer of the movies, is staging a comeback; the first step will be the role of the husband in "Since You Went Away" . . . Photography Time

Theoretically perfect daylight for photography, according to professionals, is the light received from a uniform north sky at 45 degrees north latitude, one thousand feet above sea level, after a heavy rainfall at midday on June 21.

Army of Photographers

There are 24,000 officers and men in the army and 2,800 in the navy assigned exclusively to photographic duty. They not only take still and motion pictures on reconnaissance and observation trips, but also film bombings and battles.

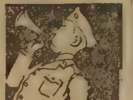
See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

W.N.U. SERVICE

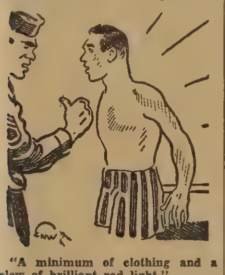


THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former feature editor of a North Carolina newspaper, has been inducted into the army and is spending his training period at Fort Bragg. If you're going into the army, Hargrove advises a pre-induction period of "painting the town red." Once you wear the khaki "keep an open mind," he says, "for the first three weeks are the hardest." Having failed to master some of the fundamentals of army life, Hargrove has spent considerable time on KP duty. He has been classified as a cook. Thus he is fully familiar with the Company kitchen. Also a period of field maneuvers have made him familiar with sunburn. He is now undergoing treatment for this.

CHAPTER VIII

For once I have gone on sick call for purposes other than goldbricking. This time it was for sympathy, tenderness, and sunburn lotion. I got the sunburn lotion. Since then I have been confined to quarters—a pathetic, lorn creature wandering about the squadroom in a minimum of clothing and a glow of brilliant red light.

Things are getting fairly comfortable for a while. The poet Droschniop and the happy warrior Menza applied the ointment with tender care. Private Sher was asked to snaffle a sandwich from the mess hall and returned with a laden tray, replete with iced tea and a double portion of dessert. By sitting on the floor on my heels, I was even able to start reading the novel that has been taking up space in my foot locker for weeks.



"A minimum of clothing and a glow of brilliant red light."

But night must fall. In a case like this, where you're packed in grease like a boxed rifle, it's best to place one layer of newspaper between sheet and blanket. After lying there for a while, listening to the newspapers crackle exactly like burnt flesh every time you twist in agony, you feel the urge to sit up and look at some real stars.

They're drafting honest, respectable, hard-working soldiers back into civilian life now, as you probably read in the papers. Has-beens at twenty-eight, these good boys are turned into the pasture under a selective retirement system. It's interesting to watch the way they take it.

Our big loss in Battery A came Tuesday when Joe Gantt went back to Liberty, South Carolina, after five months in the citizen army. Joe is the nice corporal who looked like the soldier pictures in the magazines, used an instinctive psychology in handling his men, and knew every man in the battery as a friend.

He was on furlough last week when he was ordered to return at once to the battery. He came back, started through the discharge routine and went about hugging everybody with what looked like unbounded joy.

Then he started getting quieter and less demonstrative. He had been relieved from active duty for the remainder of his stay here—a matter of four or five days—and when the men fell out for calisthenics or drill, Corporal Gantt didn't have to go out with them. Every time the whistle blew, you could see a lonesome look creeping into his eyes.

The last time I saw him was Monday at noon, when we fell out for chow. Military procedure was over—thrown in a spontaneous revolution and Joe was drafted to march us to the mess hall. It was his last detail. Halfway to the mess hall, he gave us "To the rear—march! To the right flank—march! To the right flank—march!" and all of the marching commands he had taught us.

He's returning to Liberty now, where he'll fall back easily into the life he left five months ago. But you could have seen from a casual glance that he was going to miss the Army.

I'm a student cook in the Army. Cooks are supposed to have the easiest work and the most comfortable positions the Army affords. Compared to the boys in the gun batteries, the signal corps, the anti-tank units, we're almost white-collar men.

We student cooks — the future "happiness" boys of the Army—have to get up for reveille at the usual hour, beating the sun to the rise every morning. We get an hour of calisthenics, directed by a noncom who's in good physical shape and expects us to be the same way. Then we drill for an hour, and hell hath no fury like that unleashed on the recreant who doesn't come up to standard in drill. We attend class for two hours and there's no foolishness there.

After lunch, we report to our kitchens, where we work until seven o'clock, taking our trade practically, taking part in the preparation of food for over two hundred hungry and fastidious soldiers. The next morning finds us in our kitchen at three or four o'clock and we stay there until one. We're supposed to have the afternoon off — unless there's something that has to be done in the line of battery duty.

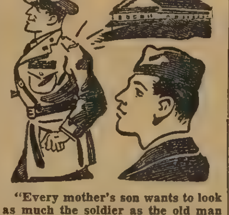
When we leave those kitchens for the afternoon, we go back to our barracks for rest and sleep, which we need badly after the twenty-four-hour shift at huge coal-burning stoves. Reading is a popular diversion during the time, unless you pick up a magazine which tells you what slackers you are because you aren't like the author was in the Real war.

There's a different type of article that is equally nauseating. It tells of the poor little soldier boys, who give up everything to go into training thousands of miles from mother's lap and who will have to spend their time leaning against urban lampposts—because nothing is being done for their morale.

You're talking about entertainment, Gertrude—not morale. In the matter of entertainment, there's plenty of that to be found, even if it isn't like being back home toasting marshmallows with Her. There's so much being done here for entertainment that you can't get halfway to the Service Club without being drafted for a battery show or a volleyball game.

Morale is the spirit that gets you when you're out on the regimental parade ground with the whole battalion for retreat parade. Every mother's son there wants to look as much the soldier as the Old Man does. Not another sound can be heard before or after the one-gun salute to the colors or when the band crosses the field to a stirring march in the Display of the Colors. And when your battery passes in review before the colonel, you're firmly convinced that there isn't another battery on the field that makes as good a showing as your battery.

It's the enormous feeling you know when you sit in pitch dark before a pup tent in the field and watch the Fort's searchlight cut the sky. It's the feeling you know when you can look across a great space and see long lines of Army trucks moving along every road you can see.



"Every mother's son wants to look as much the soldier as the old man does."

That's morale. Just a matter of pride.

The good earth on which Fort Bragg is situated is laden with tradition, ghosts of the glorious past, the old culture — and little else. Beautiful as it may be for purposes of military training, it has little interest in helping the little green things to grow. Grass and flowers, planted with loving care in the Sandhills dust, fade but too soon if left to shift for themselves. To nourish such vegetation, the cavalry units furnish the more aesthetic batteries with certain surplus commodities.

Private McGlauflin, Roff, and I had spent the better part of the morning with Corporal Cleveland James Farmer, heaving and hauling coal in preparation for the long hard winter, when the top sergeant decided that the borders around the barracks should be given their autumn tonic. We piled back into our truck and sped away to the haunts of the hoss cavalry.

We knew, after a few miles of riding, that we were nearing the cavalry territory. There was a certain unmistakable quality about the atmosphere. Something New Had Been Added.

The hoss cavalry, it must be said, takes great pains with the care and distribution of its vitamin deposits. As far as the eye can see the eye can see orderly, cubical mounds covered with straw and earth. None but the most deserving criminal offenders—men who have earned their letter ("P" for "prisoner") are permitted to serve in the maintenance division of this essential agricultural enterprise.

We three—McGlauflin, Roff, and I—stood high on the crest of a hill, loading the truck with its precious cargo, commenting on the invigorating quality of the air, and pausing ever and anon to lean on our pitchforks and listen to the conversation of other workers about us.

Some there were who could not see the importance of the service they were rendering; others spoke disparagingly of the place and bitterly cursed man's best friend, the horse. Two soldiers who shared a single pitchfork at the next truck spent all their time discussing the comparative beauties of the music of Liszt and Tchaikovsky, proving that art endureth forever even in an alien atmosphere.

As for myself, I gloried in the honor of the tradition I was helping to carry out. My mind drew pictures of the philosopher Ward Beecher Threatt, who boasts that he carried a pitchfork through the heat of the fiercest battles throughout the last war.

We made three trips to the cavalry barnyard before we had finished enriching the earth about the orderly room, the mess hall, and the four barracks of Battery A. We bathed vigorously and dressed for early dinner.

The mess sergeant met us at the door. He sniffed the air delicately and quietly closed the door in our faces. Then he made the rounds, closing the windows nearest us. "Git!" he said.

We went back to the barracks, where we found our comrades returned from the classroom. We sat down on our foot lockers and strove to remain as inconspicuous as possible. Private Sher was the first to speak.

"Do you smell something?" Private Sher asked with unaccustomed rudeness. Everyone, it seemed, smelled something. It was not, they decided, Chanel Number Five. It was not My Sin or Evening in Paris. One of the citizen-soldiers, who had once worked in the stockyards, knew what it was.

When the hunt came nearer, Privates McGlauflin, Roff, and I arose and quietly left the squadroom and quietly sat by the newly invigorated grass borders outside.

Maybe I spoke too soon when I denied the sissiness charges by magazine writers. It must be admitted, after yesterday's horrible disclosure, that some termite is boring from within us. Some force is sapping the rugged manliness of Battery A.

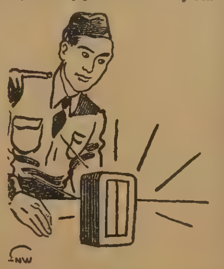
Here's what happened at supper yesterday evening. First of all, when we neared the end of the chow line, we found one of the cooks there, scooping ice cream out of a can. We are meat-and-potato men in Battery A and generally we do not take to such frilly fanciness as ice cream, although we occasionally humor the mess sergeant by letting him buy it in ready-cut blocks.

This time, we found, he had gone too far. Our leniency and intolerance in letting him buy ice cream had gone to his head. Now he was making it at home—in the respectable kitchen of Battery A! Homemade pineapple ice cream!

I didn't say anything about it. I thought that perhaps he was merely going through his second childhood, and second childhood is something that every mess sergeant must be permitted to go through once. Realizing this, we boys hadn't said anything when our mess sergeant had air-conditioning fans put in the kitchen windows to make namby-pambies of the cooks and kaypees. We hadn't said anything when he started keeping jam on the table at all meals.

We're going to have to say something now. The man is going absolutely mad. Not content with springing homemade ice cream on us, he had to heap more coals on the fire of our impatience at the same meal.

There on each table in our mess hall, brazenly placed in the very center, was a shiny container filled with paper napkins!



There on each table in the mess hall was a shiny container filled with paper napkins.

Until something is done about the thing, this mess sergeant will go hog-wild. At his present rate, we'll find toothpicks on the table next week, salad forks the week after that, finger bowls before November.

This will go on indefinitely until his brain is completely destroyed by this madness. Then he'll start planning to surprise us with waitresses dressed in field-artillery red.

When this happens, I shall try to volunteer for the parachute troops.

No matter how homey they make the Service Clubs, no matter how carefully they plan the movie programs, no matter how hard they work on athletic schedules, they'll never be able to compete with a soldier's favorite evening recreation—sitting on the back steps, shooting the breeze.

PATCH TEST FOR TUBERCULOSIS

Parents do not like the idea of any test that means puncturing the child's skin with a hypodermic needle. Needless to say, the child dislikes the idea even more. However, the parents realize that it is important to learn if their youngster is of the type likely to develop tuberculosis, so that methods to prevent this may be immediately used.

For years what is known as the patch test on the skin was used, which meant that tuberculin was placed on the skin and a patch of adhesive tape placed over it. This was considered a reliable test but what is called the Mantoux test, where hypodermic needle injects tuberculin under the skin, is now in more general use.

In an effort to test the value of the patch test, Dr. Henry A. Reisman, Jamaica, N. Y., and Maurice Grozin, Flushing, New York, used it in 1,000 patients attending a hospital clinic. All were given both the patch and the Mantoux tests. The results were recorded in the American Journal of Diseases of Children.

The patch test consists of moistening a piece of paper toweling with tuberculin, allowing it to dry. This piece of paper is placed on a small square of adhesive tape and then applied to the skin with paper moistened with tuberculin next to the skin. This is allowed to remain for one or two days. If the test is positive (child more likely to develop tuberculosis) the skin is red, with little raised blisters which may break down. In the Mantoux test the skin will likewise be greatly reddened if child is positive.

Drs. Reisman and Grozin state that the patch test has the following advantages. 1. It is painless and does not frighten the child. 2. It requires no boring, puncturing, scratching or rubbing of skin. 3. It requires no needles or syringes. 4. There are no instruments to sterilize. 5. There is no danger of infection. 6. There is less risk of damaging the tissues. 7. There is no fear of a reaction where patch is applied or any shock to the system. 8. Technic of the method is simple. 9. The size of the reaction will be no larger than surface of skin covered by adhesive tape.

Fever May Indicate Infection Is Present

The cause of any rise in temperature may be due to some functional disturbance, some natural or harmless condition such as a stomach upset—or to some infection in the body.

How can the physician tell if the rise in temperature is due to some natural or harmless disturbance or to infection?

In the Wisconsin Medical Journal, Dr. Max J. Fox, Milwaukee, states that persistent low grade fever or rise in temperature occasionally follows some infection for some time. If this rise in temperature is prolonged for two or more weeks after the infection has passed, what is called the pyrexia (high temperature) test should first be tried to find out the causes.

The temperature in children seems to go up and down readily without apparent cause, and children in whom the rise in temperature is due to some functional or natural condition, not to infection, should be allowed to be on their feet.

The pyrexia test is as follows: The patient is given a series of four 3-5 grain doses of one of the coal tar products—acetyl salicylic acid, antipyrin, acetanilid or others—at four-hour intervals and the temperature is recorded every two hours. The usual effect is a fall in temperature in two hours after each dose and a rise by the end of four hours. The patient is then given no drug for 24 hours, to allow the drug to get out of system, and is then given a sleeping or quieting drug. The temperature is recorded every two hours for the following 24 hours. If the temperature is normal or below normal for 10 to 18 hours, it is assumed that the fever is not due to infection and the patient is allowed to go about his usual work or activities.

This is a simple method of finding out whether or not any infection is present. If present, child remains in bed and does not spread infection. If no infection is present, the child can return to school safely.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What would cause lumps to appear in back of the ear?

A.—Little lumps behind ear may be enlarged glands due to a scratch or sore higher up on the head.

Q.—What causes nervous indigestion?

A.—Most cases of nervous indigestion are due to nervousness and emotional disturbances. Your physician can arrange for an X-ray examination and learn if any organic condition is present.

High Scholarship And Grim Warfare Divide Smut's Life

NEW YORK.—Officials counting the ballots in the South African general election flash the word that Prime Minister Jan Christian Smuts and his pro-war regime have gained a clear majority, and there is rejoicing in all the Allied capitals. Back at the turn of the century no Boer military leader fought the British more bitterly than did this now bald and grizzled warrior of 73. Often hungry, often shoeless, he waged guerrilla warfare of the toughest sort then. Since that fighting ended, however, he has battled steadfastly on the side of the Empire.

It was he who crushed a Boer uprising at the start of World War I and went on to conquer the Germans in East Africa and become a British general. He saved South Africa for the United Nations, too, in 1939, routing the pro-Nazi forces of the late Gen. J. B. M. Hertzog at the polls to become prime minister for the second time after a 15 year lapse. His latest victory keeps South Africa firmly in the war.

Son of a poor and tough Dutch farmer, who trekked across the veldt with a Bible in one hand and a gun in the other, Smuts had reached his teens before he could read. Later he won high honors as a student at Cambridge university. Today with his pointed beard whitened by age he is still a paradox, a hard and cunning and skillful fighter and a philosopher who dares dream of a peaceful world. What's more he plans and works for that world even as he fights.

She's the Old Man Of the Waves, This Feminine Gal of 43

PENNANTS have been flown for the WAVES' first anniversary and Navy Secretary Frank Knox buttonholed congressmen to win for the organization's lieutenant commander a full captaincy. This, he argues, is the least Miss Mildred McAfee deserves, particularly if the force is to be raised from 27,000 to 91,000.

Commander McAfee's name of record is Mildred Helen; but usually it is plain Mildred, the "Helen" being silent, as in Troy these last 3,300 years. To Wellesley undergraduates she was Miss Mac. The WAVES, pertly aping the real navy, call her the Old Man, a title that skirts the reefs of libel, since the commander is a mere 43 and not mannish. Trim, yes! Perhaps even a trifle prim. But her hair is black, short-cut and crinkly; her cheeks pass inspection easily with only a powder-puff's help—and her eyes! Her smile is lively, when it comes. And from any compass point she is not bad, not bad at all.

On the day she was sworn in, her smile seemed a little ironic while beaming Secretary Knox administered the oath. Maybe, however, it was only held in check by her usual reserve.

The commander is a preacher's daughter and was born in Missouri. She studied at Vassar and Chicago and taught through French, English, economics and sociology before she reached the presidency of Wellesley. In spite of the powder puff which is her limit, she wants her WAVES "to look human."

Presenting to You Delmar G. Roos, Proud Dad of Jeep

WORD comes out of Sicily that the jeep, that mechanical jackrabbit of the American army, is now herding stampeded Axis armies from Palermo to Messina, and Delmar G. ("Barney") Roos must be saying, "that's my baby."

More than one man in the automotive industry can claim a good mark for the blue prints from which was designed the low-slung combat car of Col. Robert Howie's dream, but if anyone deserves to be called the jeep's daddy it is probably Barney. He was working on it as early as the spring of 1940.

Roos is a past president of the Society of Automotive Engineers and has had an adoring eye for engines of some sort ever since he cut classes to visit a roundhouse in the Bronx. He was born in New York 56 years ago, studied engineering at Cornell and won a hatful of fencing titles.

His professional career has taken him into General Electric, Locomobile, Pierce Arrow, Marmon, Durant, Studebaker and Willys-Overland to say nothing of a tie-in with various English automobile plants. In the First World war he designed special staff cars for Pershing and worked on the Liberty motor.

He is powerfully built, able to go fast at tennis and badminton. Married, he has three daughters and a 19-year-old son. He still cannot resist a roundhouse, and climbs into the cab of any locomotive on any invitation.

Foshee as County Solicitor of Chilton County, Alabama, vs. one 1936 Model Dodge Sedan, motor No. D2-255995 being exhibited to me, and it appearing therefrom that on the 5th day of August, 1943, one Sam Jones did transport, in said automobile, certain prohibited liquors or beverages from one point to another in the State of Alabama, and that said automobile was on said day seized by the Sheriff of Chilton County, Alabama, and said Bill of Complaint prays that said automobile be declared Forfeited to the State of Alabama, and for an Order of condemnation and sale thereof.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED AND DECREED that notice of the filing of said Bill of Complaint be given for three successive weeks in the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the Town of Clanton, Alabama, and that all persons claiming or asserting any right, title, or interest in said automobile be required to appear and assert such claim by the 20th day of September, 1943, and that failing to do so, their said right, title, or interest will be forever barred.

Given under my hand, this the 14th day of August 1943.

AUTHUR GLOVER,
Judge of the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Battle of the Atlantic

A sinking smokestack, a great air bubble, an empty lifeboat, all that is visible of a torpedoed tanker, all that is evident of the hard work, the savings we put into War Bonds to build this tanker, to load it with 50,000 gallons of high octane gas.

Our [illegible] is [illegible] safe but the [illegible] forever. Another and [illegible] must be built to take its place.

The men who sail the seas are giving their lives to win the Battle of the Atlantic. We are asked only to lend our money.

Chilton County Abstract Co.

M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furished. A few dollars spent for an Abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

EVERY MISSION URGENT
STANDARD OIL COMPANY

ALMOST overnight the familiar tank-truck became a vital part of the nation's war machine—essential to the very life of the nation.

Every railroad tank-car is needed to haul petroleum products to the eastern seaboard. Therefore, the oil industry's own transportation system—the tank-truck—has taken over the short trips which were formerly made by many railroad tank-cars.

When you see the Standard Oil Company tank-truck on the road today, you will know that it is running against time to get needed stocks of petroleum products to military camps and fields, to war industries, to other trucks engaged in the transportation of a thousand war necessities, to farmers for their tractors used in food production, and to countless other places where petroleum is indispensable.

'Round the clock faithful drivers operate these hard-pressed tank-trucks. Without the tank-truck war effort would lag—or stop! Every mission is urgent—many are vital.

Turning to the late count of votes our Great Baby Competition (and course that's the first place you look) you will notice that a num- of new contenders have suddenly sted themselves up into the prized le, and are vying with the others leadership in this great populari- race.. This article was written aday, and as the 5,000 extra vote us is good until the present Wed- day evening, many other little eybunches are sure to enter the med field of leaders. when the ng next appears; many have just ted a day or two ago, but they are going to let any grass grow under little 'tootsies". in the meantime. ow that the very interesting lit- baby campaign is fairly on its way, in order to give the late starters same opportunity as the early , had of accumulating votes un- the 5,000 bonus offer, we are an- cing a new offer that we know all will appreciate.

eginning immediately, and effec- until Wednesday evening, Sept. e will give a bonus of 25,000 extra s (in addition to the regular vote) ll clubs of $7.50 worth of sub- ptions turned in at our office dur- this period. These clubs may be up of either new or old sub- ptions or a combination of both— hing in a subscription way just totals the amount of $7.50. It not be necessary to hold your criptions until you have accumu- the amount of the club. You turn them in as you get them if wish. A careful count will be in our office and as soon as their amount has reached $7.50 we give you the votes due on the criptions themselves and in ad- , the bonus of 25,000 votes.

is gives you two weeks in which ick up enough subscriptions to plete your club, and any one who all interested in seeing their lit- weetheart successful at the end e campaign, will have no trouble aking a club. Don't, however, be fied with just making one club; two or three of them, if possible. ou make one or two more clubs the others, you will be just that farther along on the road to y; these 25,000 extra votes, are of the first water, and they can be the deciding influence, when first grand prize is awarded, so our best while this big bonus is fect—at least, and above all, don't o make your club so the baby get those 25,000 extra votes.

n't forget to see that the coupon, for 25 votes reaches our office e the date on it expires; the cou- must be sent in to be credited e baby in the paper before it nes void. However, when sub- tions are turned in we are going e you the votes due on them in orm of a certificate. These cer- e votes are good any time, or ould hold them until the last day r so desired, but please under- that while they are in your pos- n, no credit will be given the m the vote published in our pa- rom week to week. This is so an conduct your baby's campaign u see fit. It will give no one dvantage of knowing what you ping or how many votes the ba- ay have. We think this is the fair way of conducting a feature s kind and it will eliminate the ect of any speculation during the tages of the race. Your personality and the affection for your baby among your friends and neighbors, together with the amount of effort you put into the campaign, are the only mediums by which final victory can be achieved—this, dear friends, is the way it should be and the way it will be, right up to the closing minute. At any rate, the winners will experience much more prideful satisfaction, knowing that their success and the victory of their baby was brought about by the personal popularity of the family, and steady, and well-applied effort on the part of daddy and mother.

We want to reiterate, the campaign is just now getting into its stride, so if you were a little late in getting active in your baby's behalf, or are just now starting, you need not feel that you are at a disadvantage. This clubbing offer, whereby you can secure 25,000 extra votes on a club of $7.50 worth of subscriptions, provides the opportunity for you to immediately place your own little one in a prominent position in the competition. Step out and make one of these $7.50 clubs, bring them to our office and have the personal satisfaction of seeing your little honeybunch right up in the front rank—that's where it belongs.

Some of the little ones for whom it was evident no effort was to be made have been dropped form the list. Next week a number of others will be eliminated. It must be evident to every one, at this stage of the campaign, that the mere collecting of coupons ut from our paper, will not be sufficient to win any of the prizes. If no effort along subscription lines is to be made for the baby, it has no chance of success so it's name will be dropped from the list. We will regret this very much, they are all so very dear and sweet and it could so easily be boosted into a prominent position if the parents would make a little effort. However, we want to find out just which babies are going to be the r eal contenders and the sooner the inactive ones are eliminated, the more it will be appreciated by all the ones taking part.

Subscriptions are easy to get; they can be had for the asking. Why not step out and make a club during this bonus period—it's for the baby, you know, so no effort is too great to make in their behalf when their success and prestige are hanging in the balance.

Clanton Laundry Celebrates 17th Birthday Sept. 1st

It has been seventeen years since Leo Thompson and his father, the late J. W. Thompson, installed equipment and started the Clanton Laundry & Cleaning Co. According to Leo, much water has passed over the dam since that time. Some clean, some dirty, some smoothe and a lot of it rough. But with all Clanton Laundry has been of real service to the people of Chilton County, and the News joins with their many friends in wishing them many more years of service.

NOTICE TO HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

The principal of the Chilton County High School will be in his office August 30th, through September 3rd, to confer with any student who plans to enroll in this school this year. If a student were enrolled in Clanton Grammar School, ninth grade of Baker, Mt. Pleasant, or Thomas Junior High Schools last year it will not be necessary to see the principal about enrolling, as he already has the necessary information.

It is very important that all students from the Junior One through Senior high school who have moved into Chilton County during the Summer see about their enrollment next week.

LIME SPRINGS REVIVAL

The revival starts at the Lime Springs Methodist Church Sunday at 11 a.m. Dinner will be served on the ground, and preaching again in the afternoon. Services will be held daily through Friday. Everybody come out Sunday morning.

The revival is being held this week at Cedar Grove and people have been receiving a great blessing under our guest preacher, the Rev. W. G. Barnes of Deatsville. — Rev. Reese Farnell

CHILTON COUNTY GETS $62,000 CREDIT ON THIRD WAR LOAN DRIVE

Every county in Alabama will be credited on its quota in the Third War Loan drive, which starts September , with its share, figured on a population basis, of the $6,250,000 which the State of Alabama is investing in war bonds and savings notes. Since the money to buy these bonds belongs to the people of Alabama, State authorities asked and received Federal approval for this procedure. Chilton County will be given credit of $62,000 on its quota through this arrangement.

The money which the State is using to help provide Uncle Sam with sinews of war, and also to bring into the State Treasury interest on money hitherto lying idle, is surplus income tax revenue.

NEWS FROM MAPLESVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Davis of Mobile is the guests of his sister, Miss Estelle Davis.

The many friends of Mrs. J. C. Davis were glad to welcome him home after three months stay at the Veterans Hospital in Montgomery. He is able to go on crutches, which gives the Veteran Hospital a fine recommendation.

Mrs. Ed Clapp is visiting her sister, Mrs. Morgan, in Montgomery.

During the past week the Baptist revival was conducted here. Our pastor, Rev. J. D. Hopper, was assisted by Rev. Carey Cox of Prattville, who delivered beautiful, enlightening sermons that were a great blessing to the entire community. Mrs. Annie Laurie Potts was pianist.

Misses Carolyn and Ramons Bryant, former residents of Maplesville, visited here this week. They are now living in Fairfield.

Miss Evelyn Owen of Isabella is visiting her sister, Mrs. Charlie Haggard.

Mrs. Ruth Judson P. Henry returned home last Tuesday with her little daughter, Margaret Ann, who had been convalescing in an army hosptial in Virginia from a serious burn. Mrs. Henry will teach at Maplesville this year.

Mrs. W. H. Abney was the week end guest of her sister, Mrs. E. M. Cothran, of Selma.

Mrs. Olivia Apperson of Plantersville, Ala., was the guest of Mrs. H. S. Wadkins Tuesday.

Pvt. Henry Clay Nix of Miami, Fla., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Nix.

Wednesday night prayer service was conducted by Mrs. Louis Mitchell, with good attendance.

A Letter From Judge L. H. Reynolds

The Chilton County News,
Clanton, Alabama.

Dear Editor:

As you doubtless know I have not een able to do any kind of work for the last three months. However, I am some better at this time and hope to be able to help some in the Bond Drive in the near future.

I never held any position that I regreted having to resign more than that of Executive Chairman of the sale of War Stamps and Bonds in this County, but I was just not able to do the work.

We still have a big job ahead of us and if we sell our quota we must all do our part and help Mr. Pattillo, our Executive Chairman, in every way that we can. No one person can do this job without the help of all of the people. If there ever was a time when the people of this County should do thir full patriotic duty, it is now. The Allies are winning every battle and he American soldiers are doing their full duty and in the successful campaign that has just closed in Sicily, the American boys were the first to apture the last stand of the German and Italian soldiers.

I notice from a report that 2,000 of our brave boys from Alabama were killed in this battle. Many more were wounded.

Sometimes we think that we have made a sacrifice because of this war. If we will for one moment consider what our boys are going through with we will feel that we have made no acrifice whatever.

Our boys in the South Pacific are aving a horrible experience with the Japs. Sometimes they go whole weeks wading through mud and slush and climbing mountains to get the Japs out of their fox holes, without taking off their clothes and without having a place to sleep.

What sacrifice have you and I made?

You will find the good women of our county on the streets and in the public places trying to sell stamps and bonds. Always treat them courteously. Buy all the stamps and bonds from them that you can. If you are not able to buy a stamp or bond, you can speak a word of encouragement to them.

We have over three million dollars idle money in the banks of this county, and it is my sincere hope that we will do our full duty and get our full quota.

Respectfully,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

TO PREACH AT LIBERTY HILL

Rev. Floyd Smith will be at this church bringing the message on the fifth Sunday in August—morning and evening services. Everybody is invited to come.

Miss Jane Shanks returned home Thursday from a visit to Pensacola, Fla., where she was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Fred Burges.

The Rev. G. B. Golden filled his regular appointment and conducted a revival at the Methodist Church. The attendance attested to his wonderful messages.

Coxwain Joe Latham is home on leave from the South Pacific combat.

Pvt. Van Potts, stationed at Fort McPherson, Ga., his wife and her brother, Jack Graham, paid a brief visit Saturday to Mrs. Annie Laurie Potts, Pvt. Potts's mother.

Miss Paralee Henson of Jemison, former teacher of Maplesville High School, is the guest of Mrs. H. L. Smith and family this week. Miss Henson will teach at Opp this term.

Miss Louise Foshee is visiting her parents this week. She is preparing to teach at Vernon this year.

The younger set of Maplesville were entertained last Wednesday by a swimming party given at the lake in honor of Marvin Nix, Jr., of Birmingham, who is the guest of Dr. Harvey N. Nix and family.

Our town is much grieved by the critical illness of Mrs Louis Smith, woh is now at the Baptist Hospital, Selma.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

American Bombers Hit Axis War Plants As Allied Chiefs Ponder Italy's Fate; Reds Push Nazis Back on Two Fronts; Trap Jap Forces in Central Solomons

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Sicily's fall came only after stiff fighting such as this, in which British Tommies from the Eighth army advanced through a railroad siding under heavy fire.

SICILY:

Happy Ending

Thirty-eight days after the first Allied troops set foot on Sicily's southeastern shore, the island fell, with 140,000 Axis prisoners reported captured. As Gen. George S. Patton's Doughboys from the Seventh American army swept into Messina to take over the enemy's last stronghold, the Italian mainland loomed two miles away.

Gen. George S. Patton

The fall of Sicily was preceded by the Axis' evacuation of the island behind the rugged action of their rearguards, fighting fiercely from natural defenses in the mountainous terrain. According to Berlin, about 35,000 German troops with all of heavy equipment were hauled to the Italian mainland on small vessels.

The Sicilian campaign was marked by bitter action. In the early landings, American troops withstood strong German counterattacks to establish a beachhead at Gela; Gen. Bernard Montgomery's British columns encountered stiff opposition before Catania, where the Axis machine gunners could hide to advantage in the grain fields; and finally, German units planted in the mountains slowed Allied advances to a steady crawl up the open, craggy slopes before Messina.

Discuss Open City

As President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill came together for their sixth conference in the historic citadel of Quebec, Marshal Pietro Badoglio's Italian military government pressed efforts for the recognition of Rome as an open city. Acting as intermediary, the Vatican was reported to have presented Badoglio's proposals for such recognition to Allied representatives.

Before recognizng Rome as an open city, the Allies insisted that the metropolis be stripped of all military activity. In their bombings of Rome, the Allies concentrated on the San Lorenzo railroad yards.

As Roosevelt and Churchill discussed Italy's fate, British and American bombers loosed a rain of explosives on the Italian industrial centers of Milan and Turin. Waves of four-engined bombers blasted at the famous Caproni aircraft works, chemical plants and the royal arsenal.

RUSSIA:

Nazis Fall Back

Hitler's armies fell back along the central and southern Russian fronts as the Reds' masses of tanks and troops ground forward in bitter action. The Germans put up stiff resistance, slowing the Russians' advance with local counterattacks, and making them pay for every yard gained.

But the sheer weight of the Reds' drive told in the eventual German retreats. In the central sector, the Russians bore down on the important Nazi base of Bryansk, as they moved westward from recently fallen Orel. Farther to the south, Kharkov lay encircled from three sides, and Soviet troops stood at the gates of the once great Pittsburgh of Russia, now a blackened ruin.

OPA:

Changes Made

As a result of Office of Price Administration policies, the cost of living dropped fractionally during the last two months and should register a further decline in August, Chester Bowles, new OPA general manager, declared. Aim of the government is to bring prices to the September, 1942, levels, and keep them in line with the stabilization of wages at 15 per cent over the early 1941 figures.

SOUTH PACIFIC:

Slip on Noose

By occupying Vella Lavella island. American troops slipped a tight noose around remaining Japanese forces in the central Solomons. Vella Lavella lies to the north of Kolombangara island, where 8,000 Nipponese stood entrenched. To the south of Kolombangara is New Georgia island, which U. S. doughboys dominated.

As General MacArthur's offensive developed, with the central Solomons in the Americans' grip, the Japanese were left with outposts only in the northeastern area of the islands.

As MacArthur's Solomons' forces wound up for the knockout punch, waves of Allied bombers staged a surprise attack on the Japanese airbase at Weewak, New Guinea, destroying 120 planes and killing 1,500 personnel. Caught unawares, Jap planes were packed solidly on the field when the Allied airmen flew over, proving easy targets. The enemy craft represented reinforcements that had been sent to bolster Jap ground troops at Salamaua to the south, where Allied units had pressed within 15 miles of the big base.

WAGES:

Go Up

Average pay of workers in all manufacturing industries was 95.9 cents an hour in June, the department of labor figures disclose. This is 13 per cent higher than in June, 1942. Weekly earnings averaged $43.35 in June, compared with $43.22 for May. In durable goods factories (makers of tractors, furniture, planes, etc.) the average was $49.37, and in non-durable (canned vegetables, paper products, etc.) the average pay was $34.41 a week. Because of expanding activity, man-hours increased some five million over May.

Employment figures show that there are now 17,100,000 women working, an increase of three million over last year. In the same period number of men employed declined by 2,700,000, from 39,900,000 to 37,200,000. Nearly two million more women are wanted by industry.

HOME FRONT:

Roads Long, Bloody

Tempering increased optimism on the home front, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes told the nation "the roads to Berlin and Tokyo are still long, hard and bloody." We have met less than 7 per cent of the enemies' armed forces in Europe, he said, and in the Pacific, the Japanese not only control most of the productive resources of China, but also the great wealth of Malaya and the Indies.

James F. Byrnes

Looking at home, Byrnes promised prices of actual necessities will be scaled down under the stabilization program. Increased taxes or "forced savings" must be adopted to drain off 20 billion dollars of excess purchasing power, he said. And revisions in the government's procurement program will make possible production of some essential civilian goods, he reported.

POST OFFICE

Postal deficit was set at $3,543,122 for the fiscal year ending June 30, when the post office department closed its books. This loss is the lowest since 1919. Last year the deficiency was $11,825,185.

Revenues totaled $961,059,690, an increase of $101,242,199 over last year. The increase almost equalled the entire income for the year 1900. Expenditures amounted to $964,602,812, an increase of $92,960,135. Salaries of employees accounted for 77 per cent of the costs.

DRAFT:

Deferment Grounds

In an effort to provide industry with necessary labor, the War Manpower commission headed by Paul V. McNutt laid down new regulations for Selective Service, making occupation rather than dependency the basis for deferment.

Paul V. McNutt

At the same time, the WMC broadened the list of jobs which are non-deferrable, and placed certain positions requiring high skills at the bottom of the draft rolls.

In effect, the new regulation puts teeth into the order to draft fathers after October 1, since dads holding non-essential jobs will be called ahead of others employed in essential industry. Provision has been made, however, for fathers to switch to essential occupations.

BEER:

Drought for Duration

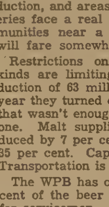
Beer is scarce, and will probably be scarcer soon, War Production board officials indicate. Demand is running some 50 per cent above production, and areas away from breweries face a real "drought." Communities near a source of supply will fare somewhat better.

Restrictions on material of all kinds are limiting brewers to production of 63 million barrels. Last year they turned out 68 million, and that wasn't enough to satisfy everyone. Malt supplies have been reduced by 7 per cent, and bottles by 35 per cent. Caps are hard to get. Transportation is irregular.

The WPB has ordered that 13 per cent of the beer must be set aside for servicemen. It contains 3.2 per cent alcohol or less, lower than most commercial beers.

Air Hero at 16

Tired of working on the farm, and doing odd jobs around Elmwood, Ill., 14-year-old Clifford R. Wherley took a last look at the old home early one morning and started down the road toward an adventure which saw him a hero in the air force at 16.



CLIFFORD WHERLEY

Later that morning, Wherley gave his age as 18 and was inducted into the army. Because he liked to shoot rabbits, squirrels and foxes, he decided to become an aerial gunner.

Wherley's craving for action was soon satisfied. As staff sergeant and turret gunner on a Martin bomber, he participated in 21 missions over North Africa. But when his real age was discovered, the army gave him an honorable discharge, and now he must await his 18th birthday before he can get back into the service.

In the meantime, Wherley will work in the Glenn L. Martin plane factory, helping turn out the bombers in which he rode to such early glory.

RATION BOOKS:

Brown Stamps

Purchase of meat, fats, oils and dairy products will be made through use of brown stamps in ration book No. 3 beginning September 12. However, the last red stamps, X, Y and Z, will remain valid to October 2.

Because the blue stamps, U, V and W for the purchase of processed foods will be good to October 20, ration book No. 2 will not be immediately discarded.

One series of stamps in ration book No. 3 will be used for canned and processed foods when the blue stamps of book No. 2 are exhausted. Book No. 1 will remain valid for shoe rationing. In an effort to ensnarl black market operators, new gas coupons will be issued. It is planned to distribute an "F" series to check the use of old coupons which might have been turned in for eventual utilization at the full ration rate after the deadline for the 25 per cent cut.

MINERS:

48-Hour Week

Miners working 42 hours a week were permitted to work an additional six hours at time-and-a-half pay under an order issued by the War Labor board and approved by President Roosevelt. With the $9 obtained for the extra six hours, miners will receive $51 for their 48-hour week.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, government operator of the mines, had asked the WLB for the 48-hour week to stimulate production of coal and avert a possible fuel shortage. The 48-hour week formed one of John L. Lewis' proposals for a new contract, along with pay for underground travel of $1.25 a day, which the WLB has been considering.

NORWAY:

Underground Stirring

Apparently moving to suppress "underground" activities, lately sparked by hopes of Allied invasion, Nazi authorities have placed Norway under virtual martial law. According to Swedish radio reports, a state of siege has been declared for the entire nation. Imprisonment and executions are being employed to suppress all organizations that might be able to assist the Allies in the event of invasion.

NEW YORK.—One ancestor of General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson led the Light Brigade at Balaclava. One rode at Waterloo, another sailed his fleet, though unwillingly, in to New York in 1776. But here is Sir Henry with the Russians, French and Americans all on his side, and he is cheerfully on theirs.

Queer Bedfellows, Good Commanders Coms Out of Wars

Wars make strange bedfellows. They have also made a good commander out of General Wilson. He holds honors won in three wars, and when he surmises that Hitler cannot keep the Balkans without Italy other good Allied commanders do not disagree with so sound a tactician. Sir Henry will feel a four-square satisfaction when the fuehrer lets go. It was Nazis, pouring down the Valley of the Vardar, who wrecked his bold attempt to hold Greece two years ago, and this English soldier must want to close the door.

The general is 62, with a wife waiting, and once the Germans are down he probably will be willing to close the military section of his own book. There aren't many laurels left for the general to win. He has the Queen's, the King's medals, with clasps, from the Boer war; a DSO from 1914-1918, and already this conflict has seen him made a Commander of the Bath, Knight of the Grand Cross of the British Empire, and a full general. He left Eton for the South African campaign. Now he is back in Africa again, at Cairo, commander in chief of the Middle East.

ONCE upon a time Ray Atherton was a young romantic studying architecture in Paris with a particular eye to the several attractions of the Left Bank. But all that is behind him now and he is at least a light-heavyweight diplomat sturdily taking on his 60-year-old shoulders three commissions, any one of which would be a full time job if we were back, as someone used to say, to normalcy.

Our Minister to Canada Holds 2 Other Ministries

Before the invasion of Denmark he was our minister there and the title still holds, although he has no duties. Similarly, he is minister to the exiled Luxemburg government. Finally, he is just settling down into the busy office of minister to Canada.

This is the sizeable post to which he has risen in 27 years as a career diplomat. After Harvard and Paris and a spell at banking, he entered the diplomatic service at 33. It was a late start, but he moved at a fair gait around Tokyo, Peking, Manila, Athens, London, Stockholm and finally Copenhagen. Before going to Ottawa he served as our state department's chief of the division of European affairs. In spite of much work and so long a career, his cheek is smooth, his mustache a la Hemingway, only grizzled, and if his air of easy assurance isn't youthful it certainly is no more than middle-aged.

REPORTING on Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk when he was a naval attache a London pressman called him personable, discreet and leanly academic. Kirk is the man whose amphibious force, Atlantic fleet, blasted away under a cloudy moon for the Sicilian invasion. This was about as discreet and academic as Wild Bill Hickok's rootin' tootin' shootin' in the old West.

Adm. Kirk Lean, a Bit Academic, but Discreet? Hardly!

Home to tell about it all, Kirk is unmistakably lean and maybe even a mite academic. But he belongs to the Ends of the Earth club and that suggests a romantic strain more in keeping with the hell-bent job he cleaned up on Mussolini's murky, storm-tossed lake.

Thirty-two years in the navy, Kirk has got to some of the earth's ends, reckoning from Annapolis; to China, and a fair bit of Europe, at least. He has spent 19 years at sea, and he won for the vessels on which he served trophies galore for battle efficiency, gunnery, engineering and communications.

Much of his best work, however, has been done in this country. He is an authority on gunnery and ballistics and even back in the last World war was kept on this side doing experimental work. Before he was chosen to top off the amphibious force operating out of North Africa he was director of naval intelligence.

He is 55 years old and, in spite of duty assignments, found time to take correspondence lessons in strategy and tactics and besides this he finished the Naval War college senior course.

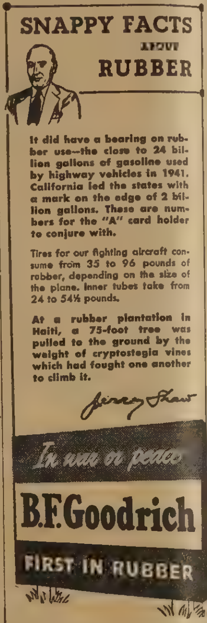
Transcribing Battle Noises

Real battle noises will soon be transcribed by American radio stations through a new sound recorder about to be used on many fronts, says Collier's. Operating on batteries and recording magnetically on a thin wire that runs for four hours without a reload, the machine registers the sounds of battle and a running description made on the spot by the news commentator who carries the device on his back.

When the word went out that soldiers overseas wanted packages from home—the response was so overwhelming that Uncle Sam reluctantly had to call a halt. Today, due to shipping space, there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men—but you can still send packages to soldiers in the U. S., and to Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen wherever they are. When you do, remember—one of their favorite gifts is cigarettes, and the favorite brand is Camel. Sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens show that Camel is first choice with men in all the services. So send him that carton of Camels today.—Adv.



SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

It did have a bearing on rubber use—the close to 24 billion gallons of gasoline used by highway vehicles in 1941. California led the states with a mark on the edge of 2 billion gallons. These are numbers for the "A" card holder to conjure with.

Tires for our fighting aircraft consume from 35 to 96 pounds of rubber, depending on the size of the plane. Inner tubes take from 24 to 54½ pounds.

At a rubber plantation in Haiti, a 75-foot tree was pulled to the ground by the weight of cryptostegia vines which had fought one another to climb it.

HULMAN AND COMPANY, TERRE HAUTE, INDIAN

See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former editorial employee of a North Carolina newspaper, has been inducted into the army and is receiving his basic training at Fort Bragg. He has been classified as a cook. This classification together with a more than usual amount of KP duty have caused him to become pretty well acquainted with the Company kitchen. Private Hargrove has become rather well versed in the many angles of "goldbricking" and other army pastimes. He claims, however, that "shooting the breeze" or the "bull session" is the soldier's favorite recreation. At this stage of training some of the boys are experts in the art. As we pick up the story he is discussing this.

CHAPTER IX

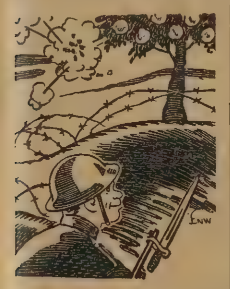
By this time, the evening bull sessions have worn themselves into a very definite routine. If Corporal Ussery is there, he lectures on how he'd run the Army; if it's Private Terrence Clarkin, he tells how he used to direct the intricate traffic affairs of Radio City Music Hall when he was assistant chief doorman there. Unless Private Henri Gelders is stopped, he'll start a violent argument among the butchers over how to cut a steak.

McGlauflin will talk for hours about the beauties of the lakes in Minnesota. Grafenstein will deliver discourses on how he would run the Wisconsin football team; Pappas, about Alabama's Crimson Tide. Maciejewski will sermonize on the utter baseness and treachery of womanhood.

Lately, however, the sessions have come more and more under the sway of Private Merton Hulce, a mad Irish lad from Muskegon, Michigan. Private Hulce apparently didn't stop at kissing the Blarney Stone. He must have stolen half of it to carry with him.

Hulce's chief topic of conversation is his mother's fabulous family, the Smiths, all of whom seem to get enmeshed in every war that comes along. His grandfather, who was a captain in the Coast Guard at the outbreak of the last war, was transferred to duty at guarding munitions dumps and such for the duration of the war.

According to Hulce, one of the munitions guards with his grandfather's detail was approached late one night by an officer of the guard. "Halt!" shouted the sentry, and the officer halted. "Advance to be recognized!" said the sentry, and the officer advanced. The sentry forgot to order "halt" again and the officer came within a foot of him. Suddenly the officer reached out and snatched the rifle from the guard's hand.



In the midst of this fiery hell he saw a peach tree with peaches growing on it.

This was an exceedingly uncomfortable position for the guard, especially in that time of war. He might even have been sentenced to death. The officer stood there just looking at the guard for fully a minute. "What would you have done," he asked in a terrible voice, "if an enemy had got your gun like that?"

The guard trembled for a moment and recovered. "I would have snatched it back, sir," he said, "like THAT!" And the officer stood there, empty-handed.

Hulce's grandfather, who told that story, is now about sixty-five, his grandson says. He was asked to come back into the Navy three months ago as a captain. Being a Smith, he's back. With him in the armed forces today are two of his sons and two of his grandsons.

Merton had two uncles in the last war, both of whom fared exceedingly well when you take a practical view of it. Neither tired himself out. The first crossed the ocean nine times playing the clarinet in a troop ship's band. The Germans torpedoed the boat once and the holes in the side were stuffed with mattresses. Hulce's uncle rode back into port, still playing his clarinet. That was the goldbricking uncle.

The other uncle served as a kaypee on the trip across. Carrying a tray around the deck, he was heckled several times by a person he soon grew to loathe. Eventually the Irish wrath of the Smiths rose to boiling point. Uncle Smith lifted the tray high overhead and wrapped it around the heckler's neck. He spent the rest of the war in confinement.

Then there was the cousin, grandma's sister's boy. Serving in the front-line trenches, he grew suddenly hungry one morning. Looking out of the trench, he saw a peach tree growing there in the midst of the fiery hell, and there were still peaches on it. He tried to sneak into the tree, but the enemy's bullets found him. He was carried behind the lines. Just as the stretcher bearers laid him down, an enemy shell exploded in the center of their little group and none of them were ever seen again.

This happened at exactly ten o'clock on the morning of November 11, 1918—one hour before the Armistice was signed.

Next to the Bugler, I suppose the battery clerk has the goldbrickin'est job in the battery. You could cut his pay to ten dollars a month and he'd still be defrauding the government.

Just watch the battery clerk for a while and you start wondering why he's in the Army, when he's so evidently cut out to fit the leaning end of a WPA shovel. While the rest of the battery is earning its daily bread with sweat, the battery clerk sits in the orderly room hob-nobbing with the powers that be, typing the daily worklist with original spellings for all the names and wondering how long it is until lunchtime.

Our battery clerk is a beardless youth named Howard Miller. I tripped over him yesterday evening on my way back from a hard day's work and stopped to chew the conversational fat.

"Junior," I asked him, "how does your conscience feel about this six-day goldbricking schedule every week? Don't you feel a twinge on payday?"

Corporal Miller made a move to draw himself up indignantly, but decided it wasn't worth the effort. "If you're insinuating that I don't have to work you're off your bean, sonny. I do two or three times as much work as you happiness boys."

I yawned and sat down. "After listening to Ussery shooting off his mouth fifteen hours a day, I can take yours. Go on with your fantastic story."

"Boy," said Miller, "the responsibility is enough to kill an ordinary man. I'm a one-man information bureau for the whole battery. I have to know who everybody is, where everybody is, where everybody's going and how long he's going to be there.

"I have to know the answer to every dumb question you guys come popping up with. Where's my mail? When do I get my furlough? Where are we going to be sent when we get shipped out of here? Why didn't I get a weekend pass? Why was I on KP again today? Every sort of question you could imagine!"

"Quit popping your guns, laddie," I told him. "That's no grind for you. You use the same answer on all the questions: 'How the hell would I know?' "

He was quiet for a while and I thought he had gone to sleep again. I was all primed to hum "Chow Call", to wake him up, when he stirred and sighed heavily.

"All right," I prompted him, "so you're the one-man information bureau. So what do you do in the line of actual work?"

"Work!" he shouted. "That's what I do—work! Why, I have to write all the letters and keep all the files and keep duty rosters up to date! I have to make thousands of rosters of the battery every month—"

"That," I suggested, "should take at least two or three hours every day. What do you do to while away the other tedious hours of the day?"

He was quiet again for about a minute. Then he arose. "I've got a pretty hard day ahead of me tomorrow, Hargrove," he said. "I hope you won't mind if you excuse myself. You have to get plenty of sleep when you have a job like mine."

"When you have a job like yours," I growled, "you can sleep night and day."

The top sergeant stuck his head out of the supply room and beckoned with his arm. "Come 'ere, you!"

I dropped my stable broom in the battery street and hastened toward him, as one always does when summoned by the top kick.

"Well, Private Hargrove," he said, "this is a red-letter day for you."

"You mean you're going to let me go out and drill like the other fellows?"

"Noooo, Private Hargrove," he said. "I mean I'm going to let you turn in all your equipment. You are no longer to be a rookie, Private Hargrove. You are going to be an important working cog in the great wheel of national defense. You are leaving us."

"What's the deal?" I asked. "Where do I go and what do I do?"

The sergeant chuckled and leaned back in his chair. He sighed ecstatically twice. "Would you really like to know, son, or would you rather put it off as long as you can?"

"Well," I said thankfully, "you can't be sending me out as a cook, because I don't know anything about cooking."

The sergeant sat back and drummed happily on the table.

"Great gods!" I shouted. "I'm not going to be a cannoneer, am I?"

"No, Private Hargrove," he said after another long pause, "you're not going to be a cannoneer. We're going to give you a job where you can use your natural talents."

There was a distinctly sadistic tone in his voice. I waited.

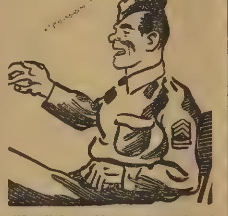
"You're going to be a first cook, Hargrove," he said fondly. "Not just a plain cook. A head cook! A king in your own kitchen, a man of responsibility. Ain't that lovely?"

"You can't do this to me!" I roared, when my breath returned. "It's against every decent human law! I don't know anything about cooking! I want to be a cannoneer!"

Sergeant Goldsmith's eyes wandered guiltlessly to the ceiling. "You don't know anything about cooking, huh? That's bad, boy, that's bad! Why, you're supposed to be on shift right now."

"Sergeant," I said, "I couldn't fry an egg right now if it had directions on the package."

"You're in the cooks' battery, ain't you? You've been going to cooking school and you've been sent to a kitchen for all these weeks. You're supposed to be graduated any day now. What have you been doing in the kitchen I put you in?"



"Son," he said, "you're going to make a perfectly breathtaking Horrible Example." I had nothing more to say.

"Making jerk-ade," I explained, "chopping celery, peeling onions. They say I get in their way. They say I keep spirits too high and production too low."

"I feel for you," the sergeant said. "I deeply sympathize. You're going to be a mighty unpopular little boy in your new home. If that supper tonight don't melt in them boys' mouths and send them clamoring for more, they'll either massacre you or run you over the hill. That's one thing the boys won't allow—bum cooking!"

"Sergeant Goldsmith, sir," I implored him. "Can't somebody else go in my stead? Somebody who can cook? Look at me—a digger of ditches, a mopper of floors, a scrubber of kitchens, a ministering angel to undernourished grass plots, but a cook never! You don't know what you're doing to me!"

"Son," he said, "you're going to make a perfectly breath-taking Horrible Example!"

Then he rose and walked back into the supply room. "Thomas," he said, "check in this yardbird's equipment."

Sergeant Israel looked up from his Form Thirty-Two records. "Don't he like his equipment?"

"Check in everything but his clothing," the top kick said. "Get a truck to take him to Headquarters Battery, FARC."

Sergeant Thomas W. Israel looked up in faint amazement. I looked in sheer bewilderment.

"They had to figure some way to stop his cooking career and save the morale of some battery as would get him as a cook," said Sergeant Goldsmith. "So he's being palmed off to Center Headquarters as a public relations man."

The word "buddy" hasn't come into popularity yet in the new army. I suppose that if there were such things, Maury Sher would be mine. Sher and I occupied adjoining bunks when I was in Battery A.

Private Sher is a smart and likable Jewish boy from Columbus, Ohio. He went to school at Southern California, until he learned that all the world's knowledge doesn't come from the intellectual invalids who usually teach the 8:30 class. Then he went back to Columbus, had an idea patented, and built himself a restaurant shaped like a champagne glass.

Came the fateful Sixteenth of October and Sher enrolled for the Selective Service System. His application was accepted last July and, since he had been the successful proprietor of a restaurant, he was classified as a promising student for the Army cooking course.

The two of us got together when he was sent to the Replacement Center here. We started an acquaintance when I topped all his Jewish jokes and began teaching him how to speak Yiddish. I was attracted by his native intelligence, his pleasant personality, his sense of humor, the similarity of his likes and dislikes to mine, his subscription to PM, his well-stocked supply of cigarettes (my brand), and the cookies he constantly received from home.

So we became more or less constant companions. We made the rounds here together, went to Charlotte together, made goo-goo eyes at the same waitress in Fayetteville, and swapped valuable trade secrets in goldbricking.

ISRAEL'S SIN AND RESTORATION

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 32:7-10; 34:4-9, 27, 28.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is long-suffering and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression.—Numbers 14:18.

God is righteous, and cannot look with approval or in forgiveness upon sin until His mercy has been stirred and set free to act by repentance. Then He whose wrath is hotly kindled against man's transgression shows Himself as the tender and gracious God, "keeping loving-kindness for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin."

This grace of God is fully revealed in Christ and the redemption which He brought to man, but is prefigured in the experiences of Israel under the law.

I. God's Wrath Kindled (Exod. 32:7-10).

There are those who would have us think of God as a benevolent old gentleman who is easily hoodwinked by clever sinners who can talk fast to cover their iniquity. Even if He does see it, He is supposed to be so tenderhearted that He overlooks their sin.

Such folk had better read these words, "That my wrath may wax hot." The wrath of God is a real and awful affection of the divine nature and it is revealed against man who sins against His holy law.

The special sin of Israel on this occasion was idolatry, which is the setting up of some material symbol to represent the invisible God. Moses had been with God in the mount for 40 days. He had been the Lord's representative in their midst. His presence had evidently been the chief stabilizing influence.

Having their eyes set on a man, or a material object to take His place, they had lost sight of the invisible God. So they proceeded to establish this idol which would provide a center of worship. At first it was evidently intended to remind them of God, but soon it led them out into heathen revelry (Exod. 32:6, 17, 18).

Whatever a man puts between himself and God, even though he may at first intend it to be but a reminder of God, will lead him away from God. Ritual, symbols, theology, scholarship, all good in their places, may become the idols which separate present-day man from God.

II. God's Mercy Invited (Exod. 34:4-9).

Aaron had only a weak "alibi" to offer. The golden calf had practically made itself (see Exod. 32:24). How quick man is to justify himself instead of admitting his guilt. No doubt our excuses sound just as silly as Aaron's in the ears of God.

Moses knew better. The sin was dealt with in drastic fashion. When one deals with a wild ravenous beast, there is only remedy—"shoot to kill." Not only were the leaders of the wickedness slain, but the ground gold of the calf image was put into water, which all Israel drank. Thus were they all marked as sharing the guilt of this idolatry.

There is a lesson here for us. America is far from God. We need to seek His face in repentance. But let us remember that we (that is, Christian men and women) are a part of America. It is our guilt, and we ought to be on our faces before God, pleading for God's mercy upon our land.

Moses was now ready to seek the Lord's mercy for his wayward people. He is the intercessor, the intermediary. God had a man who had compassion and love in his heart, and the Lord heard him. Loving-kindness and tender mercy flowed forth in place of flaming anger.

Note that God has not changed. He is the unchangeable One. His wrath is still hot against man's sin, but man has repented, and moved out of God's wrath into His love and grace. That too is always being shown to His obedient children.

III. God's Covenant Renewed (Exod. 34:27, 28).

Moses had broken the first tablets of commandments. The people had sinned and were not then ready to listen to any word from Jehovah. But now they were prepared to receive it, and God renewed the covenant as He again gave Moses the law.

There is no need for despair in the heart of the one who deals with God. The missed opportunity for obedience and blessing may be gone forever, but God is still on the giving hand ready to meet the returning prodigal, ready to give beauty for ashes (Isa. 61:3) and to restore the years that the locust has destroyed (Joel 2:25). Amazing grace!

In the keeping of these commandments, Israel was assured of the blessing of God. As we pointed out last week, the real fulfillment of the law came in Jesus Christ, who did not set aside its requirements, but met them all, for all who believe in His name.

★ IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT ★

★ FROM YOUR PULPWOOD COMMITTEE

THIS Committee is starting a drive to cut more pulpwood trees. The shortage is serious . . . and pulpwood is urgently needed for everything from blood plasma containers to parachutes . . . from shell cases to airplane parts . . . from gas mask filters to explosives.

Our Government is asking every able-bodied woodcutter and farmer to pledge 3 extra work days this year (at regular pay) to cut pulpwood . . . 2,500,000 extra cords are needed quickly.

This is a challenge to everyone of us in this community. We must not let our boys down. 3 EXTRA days' work are little to ask when our boys are out there giving their lives for their country.

Enlist today in this drive. Wear the button that shows you are in this fight. This is one way this community can help win this war.

Come to Committee headquarters or get in touch with any of these men. And do it quickly.

This pulpwood shortage is a national war emergency.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

REMEMBER US

We are the nameless, the impotent ghosts,
That once were sinew and blood and bone;
We are the chosen that drank a toast
From a leaden cup, who lie alone in
The tangled depths of a jungle maze.
Only remember. . .do not praise.

Remember us whose blood and sweat
Has stained the sands on a desert floor;
We are the missing who paid the debt
That countless numbers have paid before
That lamps of freedom should brightly burn.
Remember us. . . .we shall not return.

Remember us who have rimmed the skies
In our silver ships in the dark of night.
We are the phantoms with empty eyes
Who rode with death on a final flight
To oblivion in a sea of flame.
Remember us. . . .who bear no name.

Remember us who have fought and died
On a distant shore or an alien sea,
Who now so quietly sleep beside the
Million martyrs of liberty.
Remember us whose blood will be red
Wine in the cup of victory,
Remember us. . . .

—BERT HENDERSON.

He didn't know where he was going, but he was on his way—Tuesday morning we were at the Bus Station enjoying our morning cup A young fellow came in and asked Mrs. Williams if she minded reading the names of the towns between here and Birmingham; he wanted to buy a bus ticket Mrs. Williams started reading and when she got to Calera, the young fellow said, "Wait a minute, that's it. I knew where I wanted to go, but I couldn't remember the name of the town."

Jack Lawrence was home last week with some interesting tales of the "High Seas." Jack has been just about everywhere and tells of it interestingly. He was on the shores of Sicily when the invasion started. He has a string of service ribbons about a half a foot long. He's never been injured in battle yet, but he came home on a furlough and the night before he left, he and the car he was driving made close connections with a telephone pole somewhere this side of Sylacauga, Jack wasn't seriously injured in that accident either. He's a lucky boy.

Mr. McNamarra, the fine gentleman who is working with us on the Baby Campaign, must have been a bad boy last Friday. Saturday morning he awoke at his Hotel, (He stays at the Exchange), got dressed and prepared to come down, only to find that he had been locked in his room. After pounding on the door several minutes, another early ariser, heard and stopped to release him. Mr. Mac claims that some one mistaking his room for theirs, discovered it occupied and locked the door. We still think that Mr. Mac has been a bad boy.

Clanton has at last received recognition in the State and in the horse world, as a place posing one fine horse anyway. Of course about the time that this Horse Show is over there will probably be several of them. But any, todate, Lloyd Popwell is the first to bring home the bacon, or ribbon, as it were. Lloyd's fine horse won First Place at the Horse Show at Camden last week. Frank Parrish was the rider.

Dollie Belle Harris, whom we always did think was "cute as a pig" is back from California She isn't a Harris though, now, she's a Mrs. E. E. Mitchell She's just back from California and is quite confused — she doesn't know which is the most wonderful—married life or California.

Help Take The Blitz To Berlin

During the first year of our toughest war, we—

Trained a lot of men—made a lot of fighting tools—built a lot of shipping.

And to help pay for it all, we bought War Bonds. Altogether, 50 millions of us bought War Bonds. And nearly 30 millions of us started putting, on the average, 10 percent of our pay into War Bonds every payday through the Payroll Savings Plan.

That was a good start. But, it was only a start. What we did in '42 is not enough for '43!

We've got to do more fighting this year. We've got to do more building, more training, more shipping—and more saving.

We've got to buy more War Bonds.

Is that too much to ask? Many of us are making more money than we have made for years. The things we'd like to buy with that money have either disappeared or are as "scarce as hen's teeth." So, why not put that money into War Bonds at good interest—$4 for every $3 when the Bonds mature? Money to help pay for the war—keep prices down—provide peacetime jobs and peacetime goods and a generally decent world for all of us when the war is won.

Chances are, you're already in the Payroll Savings Plan—buying War Bonds—doing your bit. But don't stop there. See if you can't boost your amount!

Do your best!

Many Tax Laws Suggested To Get 'Nervous Dollars'

Compulsory Savings, Personal Excess Income Tax, Spending Levy Found Unpopular or Unwieldy; Orthodox Bill Seen.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

As far back as biblical days, the tax collector was an unpopular person.

Today you don't see the tax collector but you know who writes the tax laws and the folks who do (congress) lead a most unhappy life, especially in an election year such as we are approaching.

The complicated problem they face can be simply stated—think it over and figure out what you would do if you had to write a tax law. The problem is this: how to collect the most dollars and lose the least votes.

Soak the rich? Well, they have the money and it hurts them the least, but unfortunately there are not enough of them to soak. It is too bad because they are so few in number that their votes don't matter so much. (Only 46,949 people or approximately one eight-hundredth of those with incomes earn over $10,000 a year.)

Tax the rest? That will bring in the biggest total but they are the ones with the votes.

The President says we need 106 billion dollars to run the war this year. The treasury says that out of every dollar collected, 90 cents goes to pay the war bills.

So there have been a number of schemes concocted which are aimed at getting the nervous dollars, the ones most likely to create inflation. Presumably they are the dollars that belong to the people who are now getting a lot more money than they did before the war. It would be just to take the "excess profits" to pay for the war especially because the people who are getting a lot more than they are used to are the ones who spend most freely.

So compulsory savings has been suggested. That is, making Uncle Sam collect a part of everybody's income, which would be returned after the war. Then there is a scheme to tax spending. In other words, tax the dollars which are spent on extras, dollars that get back into circulation and push up the inflation spiral. Not the dollars that go into homes or life insurance or paying old debts, but the dollars that romp off for more clothes than you need to wear, more food and more gadgets than you ought to get along with in wartime.

Then there is another tax—the personal excess income tax.

That is a tax on the amount of money that you are receiving now that you weren't receiving before the war.

Lacking Popularity

None of these methods is popular. There is a sentimental objection to compulsory savings. It smacks, according to its opponents, too much of totalitarianism, of an interference with the individual's personal habits. The President is opposed to it—and his wife agrees with him—the treasury is opposed to it.

The spending tax is said to be too complicated and likewise appears to be unpopular with the treasury.

Then there is this personal excess income tax of which you will soon be hearing more. The chief objection to that tax seems to be that it is too hard to work out; that it is too hard to make it just and fair. Even the Nazis who tried it gave it up after about a year's trial.

When the personal excess income tax comes up, you will hear many arguments against it. Like many of these other "unorthodox" methods, it requires the establishment of what is called a "base period" to establish a comparison. That is, some period of time during which the amount earned by the individual is taken as a base. Then what he is making now is compared with that "base" and the difference taxed. But that is a pretty hard thing to work out because so many adjustments would have to be made for special cases that the government would never be able to examine each case and pass on it fairly.

Take the young doctor. The year before the war, he may have been graduated from medical school. Probably he had little or no income then. Then he begins to practice and in wartime, doctors are in demand. He may have made a fair income this year. Would it be fair to tax the "excess" if it were the difference between this year's earnings and the "base period" when he was earning nothing at all?

Too Many Inequities

Then there are many men who are getting more money now because they work longer hours or have received just and deserved promotions—all these things immediately come into the picture when you begin to straighten out the inequities, when you really try to tax a just percentage of a man's income.

And so the predictions which are being made in Washington now are that the next tax bill will be a pretty "orthodox" affair, it will simply have about the same kind of exemptions, a little higher percentage tax, and will be rushed through at the last minute after as many members of congress have objected to the clauses which they think will be unpopular with their constituents. The government needs the money and needs it quickly. The people don't want to be taxed any more than can be helped and the congressmen will lean over backwards trying to please the people.

Meanwhile, the treasury tells us that most of the money which is being earned due to the great increase in production caused by the war is going to people whose incomes are less than $5,000 a year—seven-eighths of it. So at least seven-eighths of the taxes ought to come from that group.

An honorable discharge from the army during the present war will be signified by a lapel button, the war department has announced.

The British radio in a French-language youth hour broadcast to the continent declared: "Young men, gain time. If you avoid going to Germany today, perhaps you will never have to go."

The Nazi ministry of propaganda has ordered all literature about Benito Mussolini withdrawn from German libraries and bookshops especially those drawing a parallel between him and Adolf Hitler, the Russian Tass news agency said in quoting a report from Berlin reaching Geneva. The parallel did exceedingly little to help the cause of Hitler in his countrymen's eyes.

Use Waste Space For a Linen Closet

EVERY homemaker knows how many steps could be saved if table linens could have a special closet in the kitchen or pantry. In one home that we know of space for such a closet was going to waste all because cupboard doors or drawers would interfere with the door shown here in the small sketch. At the right you see how that space became an efficient linen closet complete even to a smart laundry bag.

JERSEY BULL SALE LATE IN OCTOBER

A large number of registered Jersey bulls are to be offered for sale in Dadeville, Alabama late in Oct., according to information received by the County Agent's office from Mr. F. W. Burns, State Dairy Specialist.

All registered Jersey breeders in Chilton and several other central Alabama counties will have an opportunity to enter animals in this sale A number of Star Bulls will be offered in this sale.

This sale offers Chilton County farmers a very timely opportunity to purchase sires that will greatly improve the quality of Chilton County's dairy animals. With the whole milk market nearing completion, bulls that will sire higher producing heifers will be immense value to Chilton County farmers. We want to encourage farmers now keeping [illegible] bulls to dispose of them now while the beef market is high and use this money to purchase production bred animal

Any Chilton County farmer that has a registered Jersey bull ranging in age from six months to two years to offer for sale or any farmer interested in purchasing a good quality purebred Jersey bull contact your Assistant County Agent for detail of this sale.

PUREBRED HOG SHOW C. C. H. S. BAL PARK SATURDAY AUG. 28th 8:00 A. M

By M. R. Glasscock
Assistant County Agent

Chilton County 4-H Club members will hold a Purebred Hog show at the Chilton County High School Ball Park on Saturday, August 28, at 8 a. m.

This show is sponsored by the Montgomery Sears Roebuck and Company store and only club members in Sears Chain are eligible to compete. This being the first year that this chain has been in operation only ten animals will be entered, but in future years every 4-H Club member purchasing breeding stork from chain members and the ten club members that take up the next link in the chain will be eligible for this annual show.

The Club members have done an excellent job of feeding and caring for their animals. They will display Duroc breeding stock that any hog breeder would be proud to own. If you are in Clanton Saturday morning don't fail to go by the County High School and see the products of these industrious 4-H Club members' labor.

The following prizes will be donated by the sponsor at this show:

First Prize	1 Reg. Jersey Heifer

CARING FOR SWEET POTATOES IMPORTANT SAYS COUNTY AGENT P H. SMITH

Chilton County farmers were urged today to provide adequate curing and storage facilities for their sweet potatoes to prevent losses from shrinkage, spoilage, an dflooded market conditions.

Emphasizing the need for the proper handling of this year's bumper crop, Alabama farm leaders say that sweet potatoes should not be marketed until they have been cured. With the Nation's sweet potato crop about one-third larger that last year's production. normal trade' channels will be unable to use up the large crop as fast as it is harvested. If farmers crowd the market with green potatoes the result will be a great loss of food since uncured sweet potatoes perish rapidly.

Sweet potatoes are a nourishing food and are needed to take the place of some of the foods which will be scarce this year. Farmers can render a patriotic duty by properly curing their potatoes for market so that they can be handled without the danger of spoilage and the subsequent loss of food.

Through approved curing practices potatoes grown this season may be stored an doffered for sale later in the year when supplies are not so pletniful and consumer and processing trades are more able to use the available crop. In this way, farmers will help bring about the orderly marketing of the 1943 sweet potato crop and at the same time be assured of better prices.

The War Food Administration is supporting the prices of U. S. No. 1 grade sweet potatoes at $1.15 per bushel from August through November and the support levels increase for sweet potatoes marketed later in the year.

WFA officials have stated that the effectiveness of the price support program depends largely upon the cooperation given by farmers in the harvesting and marketing of their crops. If large quantities of sweet potatoes are "dumped" on the market at one time, particularly those that have not been properly harvested and cured, consumers and processors will not be able to absorb the surplus; and due to the shortage of transportation and storage facilities, it will be difficult to support prices. Farmers can prevent this situation by providing now for adequate curing and storage for their sweet potato crop, and marketing it sensibly, P. H. Smith, County Agent said.

Not much time is left to increase facilities for either curing or storage inasmuch as sweet potato harvesting will get into full swing in October. To meet this emergency, Alabama farm leaders recommend that all unused warehouses and other available storage space be converted into temporary curing and storage buildings. Any building tight enough to hold heat an deprm it ehrtge tau nloi heat and permit the regulation of ventilation may be adapted for curing sweet potatoes.

Complete plans on how to convert existing farm structures into suitable sweet potato curing houses and approved practices in harvesting, curing and storing sweet potatoes may be obtained from the Chilton County Agent's Office in Clanton.

Information on container supplies also may be obtained there.

LABOR

By its fruits ye should judge it . . .

The L&N, "The Old Reliable," is about 90 years old. Originally it was to run from Louisville, a town of 40,000 to the Tennessee state line . . . a distance of 140 miles. Now the L&N, covering almost five thousand road miles, connects the great cities of St. Louis and Cincinnati with Atlanta and New Orleans, as well as with Gulf Coast towns and many other intermediate cities in the South.

The L&N has grown from a 3 million dollar capitalization to an investment of 519 million dollars. It has been a major factor in the commercial development of the cities it serves and in the industrial and agricultural growth of its territory. The great coal fields of Kentucky, Tennessee, and Alabama speak eloquently of its constructive efforts.

● Long before the nation's present program for agriculture, the L&N successfully fostered and promoted such a program. Tremendous industrial development followed this railroad's solicitation and sympathetic aid.

As one of the South's largest taxpayers, the L&N helps substantially in the maintenance of government and schools. The purchasing power and stable citizenship of its employees plus the company's purchases, make it first rank among Southern business enterprises.

The L&N does not boastfully tell this story . . . it is only informative. While its management has been by men of Southern sympathies, business purposes alone were sufficient to prompt their efforts.

Now what has been the L&N stockholder's reward for his investment . . . for the surplus earnings he plowed back into the property . . . for the risk he takes in providing an essential service that develops that territory, raises wages and living standards and for other great accomplishments? Read the surprising answer!

Since the beginning of this railroad, all the cash dividends paid to the stockholders have amounted to an average of less than five per cent per year.

Here is the record for the past 30 years:

Paid for labor	$1,499,769,616
Paid for taxes	218,263,609
Paid for cash dividends	171,568,733

The stockholders received less than the public (in taxes) and about one-eighth of what Labor received.

If the misinformed refer to the railroad company, or its investors of capital, as exploiters of the community or as oppressors of Labor, should not the facts and accomplishments of the L&N put these men to shame? By its fruits ye should judge it.

When the big job of transportation for this ghastly war has been finished, "The Old Reliable" wants to step right in with modern, friendly service for its patrons, its prime purpose being the further development of the South.

Frosty Drinks Will Cool You!
(See Receipes Below)

Frost Yourself!

When the thermometer rises to the hundred mark, homemakers look for cool ideas, and thirst-chasers are first on the list. Cooling drinks literally give you a frost and insulate you from the warm rays of Old Man Sun.

In today's column I'm attempting to give you a parade of cool drinks to fit every pocket book, every occasion. They use fruit juices, prepared beverages, prepared drink powders, milk, citrus fruit and of course, plenty of ice. After you've prepared them, find the coolest spot on the porch, sink into the most comfortable chair, and start sipping!

Chilling fruit, juices, milk or beverages is of first importance in preparing your cool drink, but then you've probably already done this. If a survey were made during these summer months, I'm sure it would reveal that a larger percentage of the refrigerator is used for cool drink preparations than any other item.

One of the best bases for a good, cool drink is a citrus fruit. Doesn't it honestly cool you already to think of orange or lemon juice cool and frosty in a glass with tinkling ice? Indeed, it does. There's a scientific fact behind this, for scientists tell us that in hot weather the tissues of the body require more vitamin C than when temperatures are moderate. That's one reason why oranges and lemons are ideal for summer drinks.

If you want something to serve company on a summer evening, here's a drink that will fill any order:

Hollywood Parade.
(Serves 15)

1 pint orange juice
1 pint orange sherbet
1 pint vanilla ice cream
1 pint chilled ginger ale

Beat orange juice, sherbet and ice cream with a whirl type beater until well mixed. Add ginger ale. Stir and serve at once.

Another kind of orange drink which is nice to fix individually for yourself in the afternoon when you're feeling a lag is this:

Orange Cream.
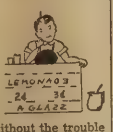
(Serves 1)

1 egg yolk
¾ cup orange juice
¼ cup thin cream or evaporated milk
Sugar, if desired

Beat egg yolk until light, add orange juice and blend thoroughly. Pour into glass and stir in cream. Sweeten to taste. Serve at once.

There are several delightful flavors obtainable in fruit powders that are simply delicious when made into frosty, cooling drinks. Use the directions on the package for mixing, garnish with a cherry and sprig of mint and you have a drink without the trouble of extracting fruit juice. Use the fruit powders also for making light sherbets that solve the dessert problem nicely.



Lynn Chambers' Point-Saving Menu

Tomato Juice
*Ham Supper Salad
Green Lima Beans Carrot Strips
Corn Sticks
*Orange Cream Cookies
*Recipe Given

Sherbet.
(Makes over 1 quart)

1 package flavored fruit powder
1 cup heavy cream, well chilled
1 cup sugar
2 cups milk

Dissolve fruit powder and sugar in milk. Turn into freezing tray and freeze ¾ to 1 hour or until slushy. Whip cream until stiff. Add to first mixture and beat through until blended, keeping as cold as possible. Return quickly to freezing tray and freeze at coldest point. When frozen, set cold control back to normal.

The hotter the weather, the more wilted you become. Nothing quite picks you up as a nice salad, and even the thought of cool, crisp greens brings back the starch to your spirits. Here are some suggestions which are perfect for summer:

Ham Supper Salad.
(Serves 4)

2 cups diced cooked ham
1 cup diced celery
2 hard-cooked eggs, diced
¼ cup mayonnaise
1½ teaspoons sweet pickle relish
1½ teaspoons chili sauce
Salad greens

Combine first three ingredients. Then stir in next three ingredients which have been combined together. Mix thoroughly and chill until ready to serve. Serve on any desired salad greens.

Summer Dream Salad.
Watermelon balls
Grapefruit sections
Fresh whole raspberries
Pineapple segments
Orange sections
Honeydew slices
Blueberries
Mint
Salad dressing

Arrange fruit on a bed of salad greens according to a pattern. Serve with salad dressing and garnish with mint sprigs.

Salad Dressing.

2 tablespoons currant jelly
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ cup salad oil
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon paprika
2 tablespoons granulated sugar or honey
2 teaspoons chili sauce

Crush jelly with fork and beat smooth. Add remaining ingredients and beat with hand beater until blended. Serve over fruit salad or mixed greens.

Sandwich Hints

In making sandwiches, soften butter or margarine before using. Avoid melting butter or margarine as it seeps into bread and makes a greasy filling.

A good way is to mix ½ cup peanut butter, apple butter, or jelly with ¼ cup of butter to extend the butter supply. This makes enough spread for 16 slices of enriched bread.

Varieties of fruit-nut bread, orange bread or cheese bread make a combination that really is a victory special. Wise use of enriched flour saves needed ration points.

If you have a canning problem, write to Miss Lynn Chambers, Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Please enclose a self-addressed envelope for your reply.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Good news is in sight with the word that coffee supplies in the country are coming back to normal and present prospects point to an end of coffee rationing by the middle of August. Even the current period for rationing provides more coffee per stamp than has been allowed since rationing came into effect.

Those of you who are canning can get additional supplies of sugar with your stamps to make putting up fruit at home easier.

Fruits and vegetables are scarce this year because of lack of help to pick them, and therefore prices run high. If you possibly can, get in touch with anyone who has crops and offer to help with the picking and packing of them—and also to get your own fruits and vegetables for home canning in much better condition than would be possible if you waited for someone else to do the picking.

NO SUGAR NEEDED IN EASY-TO-MAKE ALL-BRAN MUFFINS

Here's an already favored recipe that's gaining new wartime fame . . . ALL-BRAN Muffins without sugar! See for yourself how the flavorsome crispness of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN gives these delicious muffins a texture and taste all their own!

Kellogg's All-Bran Muffins

2 tablespoons shortening
⅓ cup corn syrup
1 egg
1 cup Kellogg's All-Bran
¾ cup milk
1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2½ teaspoons baking powder

Cream shortening and corn syrup thoroughly; add egg and beat well. Stir in All-Bran and milk, let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Sift flour with salt and baking powder; add to first mixture and stir only until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in moderately hot oven (400° F.) about 30 minutes. Yield: 8 large muffins, 3 inches in diameter, or 12 small muffins, 2¼ inches in diameter.

THORSBY INSTITUTE NEWS

Thorsby Institute will reopen September 15 at ten o'clock with a special program. The rest of the day will be given to registering any pupils who did not register before school opened and to the purchasing or in the case of those in the ninth grade renting books if they desire. The school has the ninth through the 12th grades. It is one of the few high schools in the state offering Spanish—it also offers Latin

Aside from the regular high school subjects, it offers Public Speaking to those in ninth through 10th and 11th grades. This proved a popular subject under the direction f Miss Annie Campbell. Miss Campbell is a graduate of Rollins College, Fla., and is equipped to teach such courses. She will also teach Senior English and Bible.

Shorthand and typing are also offered. They are opened to Junior and Seniors. No extra charges are made for shorthand, but there is for typing. The extra charge for typing, however, includes tuition in the other subjects. The regular tuition if paid in advance by the semester (half a year) is $12 or $24 for the year, plus registration fees of $1.00 each semester. The fees cover Literary Society dues. Subscription to, "Out Times," for ninth, tenth and eleventh grades and to the 'Scholastice" for Seniors.

The typing tuition is $16 a semester and $32 per year or $6.00 per term or $36 per year.

Voice and piano lessons will be taught again by Mrs. H. S. Peterson of Birmingham. She has had excellent training in both subjects. This Summer she studied music at Alabama College, Montevallo. The musical recitals given by her pupils the past year were very much enjoyed. There is an extra charge for music. She directs the Glee Club and Boys Chorus. There is no extra charges for these.

MARTIN - FULLER

Sunday afternoon, August 8th, the wedding of Miss Evelyn Brown Martin to Mr. James Tazwell Fuller was solomized at the home of the bride's parents, Calera, Ala.

The ceremony was said by the Rev. L. G. Alverson on the lawn, where a beautifully decorated alter of white lattice work was erected, decorated with English Ivy.

The bridesmaids were Miss Irene Haynes and Miss Lonnis Ellison; maid of honor was Miss Francis Fuller, all dressed in white net over pink and blue taffeta. They wore corsages of asters with ferns.

The bride was lovely in white silk organdie, with slight train, finger-tip veil, with coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a white Bible, with orchid and a ribbon shower.

After the ceremony a reception was held, assisting in the dining room were: Misses Leacy Newell, Marie Martin, Vivian Martin, Mildred Caldwell, Mrs. Wm. Capps, while Mrs. Marshall Bergue served punch.

Miss Evelyn Cooper played for the reception; Mrs. Adrian Busby played the wedding march; Miss Louise Jornson sang, "Always."

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Martin, a graduate of Montevallo College. The groom is a graduate of Auburn, and is a well-known planter and merchant of Perryville, where, after a two weeks honeymoon, they go to make their home.

Let's Help Carry The Blitz To Berlin

When the Third War Loan Drive opens at high noon, Sept. 9, Alabama will be asked to "Back The Attack" by "Carrying The Blitz To Berlin." This will mean that Alabama will be asked to buy enough war bonds to buy a war fleet of its own to get into the Flight to Victory. Above, State War Finance Chairman Ed Leigh McMillian, (right), of Brewton, and State War Finance Vice-Chairman, Frank Sanford, (left) of Birmingham, look to the slogans and date for the Third War Loan.

One hundred and eight million dollars worth of war planes, fighters, escorts and bombers—is Alabama's part in the Third War Loan which "takes off" at high noon, September 9.

Each County in the State will be asked to buy a quota of fighters, escort, or bomber planes.

When these planes are bought, the state will have its own air fleet to back "The Attack" by Carrying the Blitz to Berlin.

State War Finance Chairman Ed Leigh McMillian, of Brewton, and State War Finance Vice-Chairman Frank Samford, of Birmingham, today are calling on every county in the state to get ready for the greatest bond drive in the history of the nation.

In a joint statement, they urge every Alabama citizen to be prepared to buy their share in American victory by furnishing this great air fleet to carry the blitz to the very heart of the Axis empire—Berlin.

"This is one of the greatest jobs Alabamians have ever been called upon to do," they stated, "and it will be necessary for every man, woman and child to have a part if we are [illegible] to put over Alabama's share in Victory.

Chilton County Abstract Co.

M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furished. A few dollars spent for an Abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Chilton County's quota for the 3rd War Loan campaign has been set at $554,000, according to the announcement of Ed Leigh McMillan, chairman of the War Finance Committee for Alabama. Converted into fighting material, this will mean 1 heavy bomber, and 3 fighters plus $29,000 for the purchase of high octane gasoline and bombs to 'Carry the Blitz to Berlin.'

Alabama's quota of $108,000,000 for the Third War Loan will supply a fleet of 225 heavy bombers, 61 medium bombers, an escort of 372 fighters and $1,925,000 for the purchase of gasoline to take the planes on the round-trip bombing mission and bombs to obliterate the objective.

SACRED HARP SINGING NEW HARMONY (LOMAX)

The Chilton County Sacred Harp Singing Convention will hold it's fall session at New Harmony Church, Lomax, the Third Sunday in this month September 19th.

Everyone has a special invitation to attend this singing. Singers thruout this county and all adjoining counties bear in mind this singing and let's make it a real singing, one to be long remembered by us all. It seems that people have lost all interest in these good old time singings. Please wake up one and all and help to make this a real singing. We have had wonderful singings at New Harmony let's have another one.

Come one and all. Bring your Sacred Harp Song Books. Bring your lunch and spend the day.—Myrtle Jackson.

Gaze in admiration at this quartette of youngsters campaigning for gold and glory in our Great Baby Competition—two handsome little men and two beautiful little ladies—the last word in lovely babyhood.

Little Sonny is the son of Mr and Mrs L. A. Windham, this City, incidentally, grandad thinks he is pretty wonderful, too. Joyce Marie Cobb, is the daughter of Mr and Mrs J. O. Cobb, Jemison. Garry Mims is the son of Mr and Mrs J. C. Mims, who reside on rural route 2, Clanton. Patricia Ann Traywick, is the daughter of Mr and Mrs C. C. Traywick, Clanton.

There is a vigorous campaign being conducted for all these delightful sweethearts and you may be sure every effort will be made to land them in the winning column when this great race is brought to a close.

25,000 Extra Vote Bonus On $7.50 Clubs Good Until Next Wednesday

This is an important offer and all workers should be sure to make it

THE PRIZES

FIRST PRIZE	$125.00
SECOND PRZE	75.00
THIRD PRIZE	50.00
FOURTH PRIZE	25.00
FIFTH PRIZE	15.00
SIXTH PRIZE	10.00

There has been a decided reduction in the number of candidates who are competing for profit and prominence in the Great Baby Competition which the NEWS has been conducting, and which has now passed the halfway mark in its sparkling journey to the end of the road, October 2, where fame and fortune await the winners of this stirring campaign.

All the little ones for whom no active effort has been made, have been dropped from the competition and the list, as it now stands, is very liable to hold intact until the closing day of the race. Although here and there it is possible that a few others, who begin to think the going is a little to fast for them, may withdraw. However, the fact of the matter is, every little sweetheart remaining has a splendid chance of capturing one of our better prizes if their supporters do not become discouraged and imagine they are not securing votes in the same proportions as the others.

No little one, at this stage of the campaign, has any decided advantage over any of the others. It is quite true that some of the candidates are behind some of the leading ones, but their advantage is so slight that it can easily be overcome if the baby's parents put forth a little extra effort during the time this big 25,000 bonus vote is effective. This extra vote bonus is good until next Wednesday evening, and on every club of $7.50 worth of subscriptions turned in, you will be given that valuable bonus of 25,000 extra votes. So in trying to determine, in your own mind, which ones of the lovely little babies re-

GRAMMA RSCHOOL P.-T. A. NEXT WEDNESDAY

Parent Teachers of the Clanton Grammar School will hold their first meeting of the new school year, Wednesday afternoon at the school. As many as can are urged to come out for this meeting. We want to start with the school. We must have a few P.-T. A. honors this year,—Mrs Mark Tucker, President.

All County Schools To Open Tuesday 9 a. m.

All Chilton County Schools will open their doors next Tuesday morning. For the first day, the schedule will run from 9 until 12 noon. For the remainder of the first two weeks, all schools will open at 8 o'clock and close at 1:30. These hours were adopted by the Board of Education to aid farmers during the cotton picking season.

In order to conform to ODT regulations, children will not be transported to a school where their grades are being taught, unless crowded conditions develop. A child living within one and one-half miles of a school where his grade is being taught is classed as living within that school district and will not be eligible to ride a bus to another school.

Teacher's Institute will be held at the Chilton County High School on Monday, September 6. beginning at 9:30. On Saturday, September 4, meetings will be held at the County High School for bus drivers and for beginning Elementary Teachers. These meetings begin at 9:30 war time.

TEACHERS NAMED FOR 1943-44 TERM

Plans for the opening of all county schools on Tuesday, September 7, are complete. A conference for all bus drivers will be held at the Chilton County High School on Saturday, September 4th, beginning at 9:30 in the morning. Teachers Institute will be held at the high school on Monday, September 6th, beginning at 9:30.

Children entering school for the first time must be six years old on or before October 1, 1943. Birth certificates for all first grade children hould be submitted to teachers on the first day of school. Children will not be transported by schools where their grades are being taught.

Teaching personnel for the county s virtually complete. Below is a list of white teachers for the county:

Special Meeting Of W. M. U. Here September 14th.

It is with pleasure that we are able to announce that plans have been completed for a special missionary meeting to be held September 14, beginning at 10 a. m. at the First Baptist Church of Clanton with the WMU of both Chilton and Unity Associations participating.

Dr W. H. Carson, recently returned Southern Baptist Missionary from Algeria, West Africa, will be the main speaker both morning and afternoon. It is with unusual interest that we anticipate his timely message. All members of the Woman's Missionary Societies are urged to read and study in their local churches the Mission study book of our work in Nigeria, "Day Dawn in Yoruba Land," by Dr Charles E. Maddry, in preparation for this meeting.

Mrs J. H. Hudgins of Birmingham, W. M. U. President of the 9th District, will lead the morning devotional period. This message will be greatly appreciated by our people.

It is also hoped that Mr Hidie, formerly of Holland and now residing at Thorsby, will give a bird's eye view of conditions inside Europe under the Nazi regime.

All members of the Women's Missionary Societies of bobth Associations and pastors of the churches represented, are urged to attend this special meeting of unusual interest remembering that the words of Christ apply in a particular way to us in this day of strain and stress as we realize our need of His blessing now more than ever before: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." We are praying that our people from all our churches will demonstrate their love and devotion to the work of Christ's Kingdom by their cooperation and attendance at this meeting.

It is reqested that each one bring her own individual lunch as was done at our July meeting. We feel that this is a patriotic and sensible practice to follow for the duration of the war as we seek to help our cuntry conserve food and labor. The Clanton church will prepare the basement for lunch and will serve an ice drink to everyone.

Mrs S. J. M. Webb and Mrs H. G Heflin will call for meetings of the Executive Boards of both Chilton and Unity Associations immediately following the afternoon program.

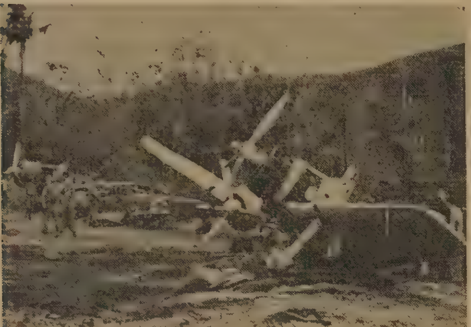
Essential Work Only Deferment Basis; Allied Fliers Pour More Block Busters On Berlin and Italian Defense Targets; Nation Ponders Possible Labor Draft

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



When American troops captured Munda airfield on New Georgia island in the central Solomons after a bitter struggle, they found these Japanese fighter and bomber planes wrecked by the Yanks' heavy aerial bombardment.

EUROPE:

'Scarred and Burned'

Prime Minister Churchill's vow to "sear, scar and burn" Hitler's European fortress was drawn in sharp focus with the RAF's 700 plane raid on Berlin and the bombardment of Italian communication and industrial centers.

Poised at three different points, Allied armies awaited the command to spill over into Europe. One million men stood in the Near East; another million were concentrated in Sicily and North Africa, and approximately 2½ million were ready for action in England.

But as they waited, Allied bombers poured block-busters on the Axis industries turning out armaments for the enemy forces. Assaults continued on the railroads over which the Axis could rush reinforcements to meet the Allied invasion. And airfields from which Axis planes could rise to challenge the Allies' air cover for the oncoming troops were ripped up.

Hitler First

Concentration on the defeat of Hitler, but consideration of means of speeding up the war in the Pacific, were the principal milita topics of the Quebec conference between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

In the political field, plans were laid to return friendly reconquered countries over to the provisional governments in exile. Enemy countries would remain subject to military government.

Declaring that unification was needed to co-ordinate the services of the combined Allied armies, navies and air forces, the conferees said that additional meetings would be necessary, and probably would be called at shorter intervals. A tri-partite conference with Russia concerning the future disposition of Europe will be sought, it was stated.

PACIFIC:

At Japs' Back Door

Vice-Admiral Thomas Kinkaid

While the little "sons of heaven" fell back before the advancing Allied armies in the Southwest Pacific, American forces under Vice-Adm. Thomas C. Kinkaid stole through the misty, swirling Aleutian fog to retake Kiska island and plant their battle standards within 600 miles of the northern point of the Japanese empire.

On this northern point at Paramushiro stands the great military base guarding the back door to Tokyo. Already, American heavy bombers have made two raids on Paramushiro, but since the fogs which shroud the north Pacific assemble here and then move eastward toward the Aleutians, the Japs still possess an advantage in weather.

In the Southwest, Allied troops bore down on Salamaua, New Guinea, as the Japs fell back for a last stand before the town. In the central Solomons, the enemy were penned in their last holding on Kolombangara island.

MANPOWER:

446,000 Dads to Go

Lewis B. Hershey

To meet the armed services' call for 1,873,000 men during the last half of 1943, it will be necessary to induct about 446,000 fathers, Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey declared. Out of every 100 dads, 7 will be drafted, and perhaps 13 rejected.

According to Hershey, 738,000 of the 1,566,000 1-A men of record July 1, will be called to the colors before the end of the year. Another 644,000 will be obtained from re-examination of the physically unfit in 4-F and those hitherto deferred because of essential occupation. Exhaustion of this pool will result in the induction of fathers to meet the armed services' goals.

Fathers employed in essential war work may obtain deferment, Hershey said, particularly if they are employed in areas with labor shortages. Of the 1,449,000 exempt because of agricultural activities, none are expected to be called, to prevent interference with food output.

Labor Draft?

Director Hershey's statement followed reports that the government was shaping a national labor draft to meet a need for 2,600,000 new workers for essential industry.

War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt declared that the WMC would continue to resort to voluntary efforts to obtain the necessary help. Recently, the WMC made essential occupation the sole basis for draft deferment, even for fathers after October 1.

With most of the 18-year-olds scheduled for the services; with many workers loath to switch to war work from non-essential occupations, and with the supply of working women about drained, attention was focused on a labor draft for solution of the manpower problem.

INCOME TAX:

Estimate Returns

Fifteen million taxpayers will be required to file estimates of their 1943 income taxes September 15, but the nation's farmers will have the choice of making their declarations on that date or December 15.

All married men with gross incomes of $3,500 or more, and single persons earning $2,700 or over, must file figures showing how much they owe the government in excess of the 20 per cent being deducted from the wages through the current withholding tax. At the same time, a 50 per cent payment of the estimated excess liability must be made.

If farmers file a return of their estimated tax September 15, they also must make a 50 per cent payment. If they choose to file December 15, they must make full payment.

In the case of the average taxpayer, he will be allowed a 20 per cent error in margin. Farmers are granted a 33 per cent margin. All taxpayers will have to file a final return on their tax liability next March 15, at which time any balances will be settled.

RUSSIA:

Seeks Iron

The coal and iron of the Donetz basin lay before the massed might of the Russian armies as they surged forward on the southern front. In one sector, where the Nazis claimed more than 150,000 Reds were concentrated, their lines were slowly pushed back under the heavy Russian artillery and tank fire, and rolling waves of infantry.

Farther to the north, the Reds pressed westward after retaking the blackened ruin of Kharkov, the great industrial city whose foundries and mills shaped the Donetz' iron into steel. Here, the Russians threw out a column that bore down on the big railroad line running into the far southeastern corner of the Donetz basin, where the Nazis were fighting the latest Red break.

As fighting mounted in the south, it was reported that a Finnish labor leader had met a British union representative in Sweden and given him proposals for settling the Russo-Finnish war. These called for respect for traditional Finnish territory and Allied economic assistance.

TIRES:

To Release 17,000,000

Seventeen million automobile tires will be released for essential civilian use in 1943, and plans are being made for the distribution of 30 million more next year, Rubber Director William Jeffers reported.

Distribution of 30 million tires next year, however, will depend upon the War Production board's approval of an expansion in the synthetic rubber manufacturing facilities. Since most of the tires would be synthetic and more time is required for their fabrication, additional equipment will be needed to meet the distribution goal.

Declaring that only holders of "B" and "C" gas ration cards could be expected to obtain new tires, Jeffers said that the rubber on the wheels of America's automobiles remained the greatest assurance for future driving. Every effort should be made to retain these tires in use by recapping, Jeffers declared.

World's Steel Center

Two giant battleships and more than 1,000 four-motored bombers can be built every 24 hours with the daily output of the American steel mills.

Annual capacity of the industry now totals 90,881,000 tons, about 10,000,000 more tons than in 1940. By 1944, capacity is expected to reach 96,000,000 tons.

Record ore shipments and scrap supplies have enabled the mills to operate at close to 100 per cent of capacity. Blast furnaces which melt the ore into metallic iron from which steel then is made, have been increased to handle 64,500,000 tons of raw material annually.

U. S. World's Steel Center

Because it has been previously refined, scrap can be mixed with the molten iron from the blast furnaces for production of steel, thus conserving the need for additional ore and speeding the manufacturing process.

FOOD PRICES:

Blames Middlemen

Charging the existence of an ever-widening gap between prices received by farmers and those paid by consumers, Rep. Hampton P. Fulmer (S. C.) declared "money-mad middlemen making war profits up to 500 per cent" are responsible for shortages and price increases of foodstuffs. Fulmer is leader of the house's farm bloc.

Office of Price Administration figures show that a majority of large wholesalers made at least 100 per cent greater profits in 1942 than in 1939, Fulmer said, while one-fifth of all wholesalers received profits of 500 per cent.

To remedy the alleged profiteering, Fulmer said he would press for establishment of set prices for basic farm commodities, with percentage markups allowed for distributors and retailers.

PAY CHECKS

Longer hours, authorized wage increases, and "upgrading" of workers into higher-paid classifications, have combined to keep the pay checks of millions of urban workers climbing faster than living costs so far in 1943; these three factors are having a greater effect in raising the average wage level than most persons realize, and they operate without breaking existing wage-freeze regulations, according to the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co. of Minneapolis.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

PRIVATE DEBT: People owe much less than they did two years ago, according to a report by United Business service. At the end of 1941 total consumer debt outstanding, mostly on installment sales, amounted to $9,800,000,000. Now it is about five billion dollars. Higher incomes and restricted opportunities to buy goods have acted to pare down the outstanding debt.

WAR FRAUDS: War frauds are much bigger than in 1917 and '18 in this much bigger war, U. S. Attorney General Francis Biddle commented, in announcing that 123 federal indictments have been obtained, and that 1,279 cases are being investigated. Seventy-one cases have been disposed of, and some kind of penalty has been levied in 90 per cent of these cases, he said.

Wants Same Break For Girls as Men Get After the War

NEW YORK.—Fresh from an inspection of the WACs, Dr. Minnie Maffett harps once more upon the tune she was singing even before the National Federation of Business and Professional Women elected her their president and spokesman. When this war is over, she says, women must be treated as individuals, not as a separate sex. Employers must give them in particular the same break they have promised men. Must return them to their pre-war jobs.

This country, particularly Texas, either has voluntarily treated Dr. Maffett as an individual, or has had to ever since she set out to make her own way. That was, roughly, 40 years ago. She is 61 now, born of a family which settled in Texas more than a hundred years back. She started out as a school teacher, but decided on medicine and hung out her shingle in Dallas when she was 33.

About that time Southern Methodist university needed a physician for women and Dr. Maffett took the job. She still has it but she carries on a general practice, too, is on the staff of a couple of Dallas hospitals, and has her dynamic oar in a dozen other activities.

Dr. Maffett is pink-cheeked, blue-eyed, silvery-haired, a pleasant sight for any patient, especially one of those males she says sometimes discriminate against her sex. A persuasive orator, she is careful to emphasize that women do not seek to supplant men. But a woman's brains, she argues, are good and men should be less reluctant to use them. Dr. Maffett sometimes shakes a finger at women, too. A while back she dressed them down for failing to vote at every opportunity.

H. Ford 2nd Slips Off Uniform; Puts On Heavy Harness

NINE years ago a parcel of New York newspaper men trekked west to see the sights of Chicago's Century of Progress and one afternoon they spotted a couple of teen-age boys. The boys were pleasant-faced, their clothes quiet; both were stocky; hardly overweight, certainly not fat, but stocky. An oldster, thin, contemplative, seventyish, walked with them. Henry Ford and his grandsons were visiting their dynamic exhibit at the fair. The newspaper men were politely casual, but at least one blinked at the sight of a billion dollars on, so to speak, the hoof.

Outwardly casual, probably, but blinking must be the shoals of Ford workers as the elder of the two boys now takes off a navy uniform to take on major authority in the family company. Henry Ford II is just 25, shoved so early into heavy-duty harness by the death of his father.

The long boat ride that any smart fortune teller would have promised the young fellow yesterday is out from here on. Maybe a quick, short one into Lake St. Clair and back, but hardly anything more. Of course, if tank and bomber production do not lag, he may find time to ride a horse. He has won cups for his horsemanship, some extra-shiny ones up at Bar Harbor in Maine.

Well Qualified for The Navy Job He Reluctantly Leaves

It is dollars to doughnuts that he takes his uniform off reluctantly. He was doing well in it. Yale, plus sound machineshop instruction from a master, had helped him to his original commission as an ensign and appointment as an instructor at the Great Lakes Training station. And he had already had one promotion. He is still solidly built, with a full mouth, a heavy nose and a smooth left-side part in his hair. In build and the cut of his job he suggests Elliott, of the politically opposite Roosevelts, a trifle.

Three years ago Henry Ford II married. His wife was the little, more than pretty, Anne McDonnell. They have two daughters, offspring of the kind of romance for which a magazine editor sighs.

The two met seven years ago on the then glistening Normandie, now rising to a second life out of Hudson river mud, and they had a long week of moonlight on the Atlantic.

Back at Yale, young Henry found that his girl's cousin and chum was being sparked by a pal and crew member. There were foursomes at Lake Placid. When Miss Anne needed an operation there was a long-distance call that ran on and on and on until one of the watchful sisters at old St. Vincent's hospital put her sensible foot down.

All the while both families were helping things along at a great rate. Grandfather Ford and Father McDonnell had been friends for years. The wedding that culminated was out of Hans Christian Andersen.

When you see news photos of soldiers "off duty" in camp or behind the battle-lines—notice how often you'll see them smoking a cigarette. There's a good reason for that. Army officials say that cigarettes are an appreciable factor in maintaining morale—and the soldiers themselves add that a carton of cigarettes from home is always welcome. What brand? Well, sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens show that Camels are the favorite cigarette with men in all the services. Though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen wherever they are.—Adv.

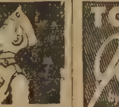
See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove



W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former newspaper employee of a North Carolina paper, has been inducted into the army and is receiving his basic training at Fort Bragg. He has become well acquainted with many phases of army life but because of his classification as a cook and his too-often KP assignments he knows more about the Company kitchen than most rookies. He has acquired a good understanding of "goldbricking," "shooting the breeze" and all the other extra-curricular soldier activities. As we pick up the story he is discussing some of the interesting traits of his close friend, Private Sher. It is with Sher that Hargrove has shared many of his adventures.

CHAPTER X

There was one Sunday evening when Sher started a letter to his family and found, after a couple of paragraphs, that there was nothing for him to write about. "Here, Junior," he said. "Write a letter for your old daddy. Give them the old Hargrovian schmaltz."

Since Junior was in a devilish mood, he sat down and wrote a long and inspired letter to the Shers of Columbus, Ohio—telling them how their little Maurice was falling behind in his class by goldbricking and hanging out late at the Service Club, entreating them to return him to his true career, the Army. I finished by saying, "You see who's writing the letters; you should know where to send the cookies. Forget that bum Maury."

Several days later—after I had swapped in skillet for a typewriter and had moved to Headquarters Battery—I came by Battery A to see if I had any mail from my nonwriting friends in Charlotte. There weren't any letters, but there was a package which looked about the size of a steamer trunk. There were enough cookies inside to feed a small regiment for three days.

The card inside read: "Dear Hargrove—We think your idea about the cookies is superb. Give Maury one or two; he's a good boy when he wants to be. Why don't you come up to Columbus on your furlough?"

It seemed that this beautiful friendship—with all its fragrant memories, its happy hours and hell-raising, its beautiful cigarettes, cookies, and Samaritan relatives—was destined to end with the closing of the basic training cycle here.

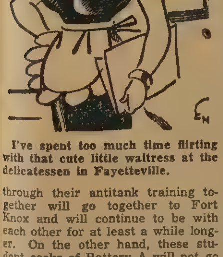
The old gang, which has lived and worked and played together for over three months and has grown into a close and sympathetic brotherhood, is dissolving now. The training cycle is being finished and already the old ties are loosing.

The student cooks whom I grew to know and feel a fondness for during those months are not so fortunate as some of the other soldiers. The Charlotte boys who were inducted with me and who went through their antitank training together will go together to Fort Knox and will continue to be with each other for at least a while longer. On the other hand, these student cooks of Battery A will not go out together. No Fort is going to be sent a whole battery of cooks. One cook will be needed here, another there, and the old third platoon will be scattered from hell to breakfast.



I've spent too much time flirting with that cute little waitress at the delicatessen in Fayetteville.

An old thirty-year man, with five or six hash marks on his sleeve, will tell you that no matter how long you stay in the Army, you'll never find a battery that quite stacks up to the first battery in which you served, no group of buddies quite like the old gang you knew first.

There's a reason for it. In your first organization, you learn for the first time all the regulations and the customs and the traditions of the Army. When you first face them, they're tough or they're uninteresting, and when you finally get to understand and agree with them, they're identified in your memory with the battery where you learned them.

With the men who serve with you there, you grow closer through hardship and privation than you can possibly grow to any other group. After you get out into a line organization—a real tactical unit, such as these boys are entering—any hardship or misery is just a part of the routine. The sufferers are men rather than boys.

But in this first training cycle, this rookie stage, you haven't been hardened. You and the new soldiers about you are sensitive, delicate boys, newly yanked from home or school, accustomed to an easy-going and usually painless life. You share each other's illness, fatigue, despair. When Happy Menza grows homesick for Buffalo and McGlauflin starts a wistful reminiscing about the lakes and forests of Minnesota, you are homesick for them rather than for yourself. You are companions tested in misery.

Friday night was probably the last evening the boys of my old crowd would be together. At least, it was the last evening they were sure of being together. The following day they were to go home for a week's furlough. On their return, next Monday, they will be assigned to their permanent stations to enter the field as soldiers. So they arranged to hold a party Friday night on the river beyond Fayetteville.

When we rode to the river in our chartered bus, we rang the welkin with the old songs—the faintly fragrant songs you pick up through the years and the "Caisson Song" and "Old King Cole" that you learn in the Army. They were boisterous, those songs, but a melancholy strain ran under all of them.

At the party we ate barbecue and we drank beer and we recalled the best anecdotes of the training cycle. We sang and we shouted. Two or three of the boys dipped a little too deep into the keg and became slightly sentimental. And although the food and the beer were the best, the songs were the songs we loved and the anecdotes were the cream of the season, it was empty joy. It had a dull undercurrent of sorrow.

It was the sort of feeling that you know in the last hour before the New Year's bells, the feeling that reaches its fullest when "Auld Lang Syne" is heard.

Since we left our homes last July we've learned a lot. Drills and rifles, pup tents and gas masks, all of that.

This, though—the scattering of our first fraternity—is another thing we have learned, now and for the first time. It is our first lesson in a new kind of homesickness, bred only in the Army.

"Private Hargrove," I said to myself, "you have been doing quite too much gallivanting lately. There have been too many movies, too many bull sessions, too many hours spent at the Service Club and too much time spent flirting with that cute little waitress at the delicatessen in Fayetteville. Tonight, Private Hargrove, you will take this interesting and improving book, read it until Lights Out and go to bed promptly at nine o'clock."

There was a little back talk, a little argument, a little entreaty. However, the forces of Truth and Progress prevailed. Immediately after supper I adjourned to the squadroom, arranged myself comfortably on my bunk and dug into the interesting book. Peace and quiet held sway about me.

Private Wesley Sager, late of Amsterdam, New York, grew weary of the quiet. Yawning widely, he rolled over in bed and with a sudden swoop yanked the pillow from beneath the head of Private Melvin Hart. "Yippee," screamed Private Sager, tossing the pillow across the squadroom to a willing accomplice. "Yippee," screamed the willing accomplice, tossing the pillow back to Private Sager.

Private Hart rose and retrieved his pillow with dignity and formality. He placed it on his bunk, smoothed it and laid his head upon it. Three privates sighed in resignation. The incorrigibles were at it again.

Private Sager lay quiet for a while. Then he broke into a loud, regular, but unconvincing snore. The three sighing privates did not return to their occupations, but lay in philosophic expectation. Once the boys in that corner got started, nothing but physical exhaustion could stop them.

Private Sager turned as if tossing in his sleep. Private Hart noted the move and held his book ready to strike if a hand came toward his pillow. Private Sager turned again, facing away from Private Hart, and Private Hart relaxed his vigil. When he did, the hand shot out once more and the pillow sailed across the room and into waiting arms.

Again Private Hart retrieved the pillow and again he lay down. "Why," he asked, "must you behave like a two-year-old infant? Can't you act like a normal adult?"

"Sure I can," Private Sager replied. "Kindly step outside with me and put up your fists."

Private Hart gave vent to a quiet and gentlemanly oath. "Please do me the honor to shut your mouth," he requests. "I should like to read without the clamor of your big yap roaring in my ears."

This is but the opening gun. Almost daily it marks the beginning of a half-hour session of blusters, threats, extravagantly insulting remarks, and repeated invitations from each side for the other to step outside and settle it. Nothing ever comes of it and soon the contending parties tire of the play.

Silence reigns again, but its throne is shaky. Private Hart tires of his book and turns to Private Sager. "Were you at the dance last night when the redhead got started telling what she thought of Jim Carney's dancing?"

Private Carney picks up the bait. "Anything Hart says about me or about what anybody else says about me is entirely fictitious, and any resemblance to persons living or dead is coincidental and not intended."

Private Sager sits up suddenly in bed. "Don't talk like that about Hart," he says in a quiet, serious, and menacing voice. "Anything you say about Hart is a personal insult to me. If you're inclined to insult me, kindly take off your stripe and step outside with me."

"Don't you go talking like that to the ranking first-class private of this section," rasps Private Hart. "I don't like your manner at all. Kindly step outside with me while I beat your brains out."

If you want peace and quiet on these stay-at-home nights, the best solution is to go to the second barracks down the line. There's nobody down there except fifty-eight members of the band, who are always rehearsing at this time of night.

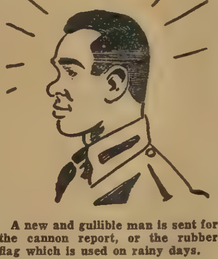
Slang runs wild in the Army. It's like a disease or the liquor habit. Among the boys who sit around on the back steps after Lights Out and bat the breeze far into the night, no simple and understandable English word is used where a weird and outlandish concoction can be substituted.



A new and gullible man is sent for the cannon report, or the rubber flag which is used on rainy days.

Water is GI lemonade. Salt is sand or Lot's wife; pepper is specks; sugar is sweetening compound. Milk is cat beer; butter, dogfat. Ketchup is blood. In the untiring imagination of the soldier, green peas become China berries; hominy grits are glamorized into Georgia ice cream; rice is swamp seed. Potatoes become Irish grapes; prunes change to strawberries; hot cakes become blankets. Bread is punk and creamed beef on toast is punk and salve. Meat loaf and hash are kennel rations.

It is strictly against the code of the Army to say a complimentary word about the food or the cook, no matter how good the food is or how hard the cook labors to make it so. Oscar of the Waldorf in the Army, would still be either a slum-burner or a belly-robber.

Back at the News, the boys in the composing room and the mailing department used to send greenhorns searching all over the building for erasing ink, striped or dotted ink, paper stretchers, and other non existent items. Here, a new and gullible man is sent for the cannon report, or for the biscuit gun, the flagpole key, or the rubber flag which is used on rainy days.

Here are some of the most popular figures of speech:

Army Bible—the Articles of War; regulations.
Barrage—a party, especially where the Demon Rum rears its ugly head.

BLOOD DONORS

One of the ways of serving one's country these days is by giving some blood to be stored until such time as it is needed by our wounded soldiers. The transfusion of the blood itself or concentrations of the blood bring many a shocked soldier back from the brink.

There are what are called professional donors, or givers of blood who are "on call" from various hospitals, and the giving of a pint of blood every couple of months causes no faintness or weakness at the time or afterward.

Such, however, is the demand for blood and so willing are men and women to help in the war that many are volunteering for this service at the Red Cross or other blood depots.

As some of these "new" donors are high-strung or nervous individuals who have conscientiously felt that they should give blood, a few of them may faint during the giving of the blood or even after they return to their work. It can readily be seen that a man or woman who faints after he or she returns to work is not likely to encourage other workers to give their blood.

It is agreed that those who faint from other sights or events in life are likely to faint when they give up some blood, but fainting should not ordinarily occur in others who are not in the habit of fainting.

An article in the British Lancet states that factors which do seem to contribute to fainting are fatigue and hunger; persons who hurry to their appointment to give blood are likely to faint, as are those who have not eaten for three hours or more.

"It is stated that the temperature and moisture of the room are not important, but it should be airy and light, with beds rather than couches, and no screens used, as there is comfort in the knowledge that others are going through the same ordeal."

In general blood donors should remain lying down for 15 minutes, and after refreshment should sit on a chair for another 15 minutes, leaving the hospital not sooner than 30 minutes after giving their blood.

These points should be kept in mind by those giving blood for others. First, do not hurry to the appointment; second, go within one to two hours after eating; third, lie down for 15 minutes after giving blood; fourth, sit down for another 15 minutes before returning to work.

Pain in Shoulders, Arms and Neck

During the last war, among soldiers and civilians there were many cases where the patients suffered with pains back of neck, in shoulder and down the arms to the hand. It was thought to be a form of rheumatism or arthritis, and teeth, tonsils, gums, gall bladder and other parts were carefully examined but often no cause could be found. Finally an X-ray of the neck, chest and shoulder showed in some cases a "short" or extra rib which was causing pressure on the nerve which accompanies one of the muscles running from the top of the first rib to spinal bones in back of neck. The removal of this spur, or short rib, gave instant relief in these cases.

In Archives of Physical Therapy, Dr. K. G. Hanson states that this group of symptoms called cervicobrachial syndrome (name of the nerves involved) may be due to: (1) high first ribs which do not give the muscle and nerve room between the bones of the shoulder, (2) extra rib or a rib or spur on the neck spinal bone where there should be no rib or spur, (3) pressure on the muscle running from first rib to spinal bones in neck, (4) poor posture, standing or sitting which makes a pull on the bones where this muscle is fastened at back of neck. It is this pull that causes the pain in practically all cases because the patient lets himself sag.

The treatment, naturally, would be to remove this pressure and this is obtained by rest and support during the acute or severe stage. Then exercises are given to hold the shoulders high—arms in line and above the shoulders, rolling of shoulders—arms at full length in line with shoulders; standing and sitting erect, shoulders high and back, chest out, chin in. Heat is applied before and after exercise. This will help 85 per cent of the cases.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Will you please tell me something about arthritis?

A.—Arthritis is the new name for rheumatism. Can be caused by infection, wrong food, injury, exposure to cold and dampness.

Q.—Is there any help that can be given for eyes affected by diabetes after the disease has been brought under control?

A.—Would depend upon what damage had been done—cataract, inflammation of the retina, etc

ISRAEL CALLED TO BE A HOLY PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Leviticus 19:1-4, 11-18, 32-34.

GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye holy; for I am holy.—I Peter 1:16.

Labor Day, 1943, with a war-torn world, finds us facing a social order deeply divided regarding the rights and wrongs of the relationship between man and man, especially capital and labor.

For these many years we have talked of a planned economy where kindness and justice shall control all dealings of man with his fellow man. But to accomplish such a result apart from the hand of God to guide and restrain, has proved to be impossible.

Selfishness and sin control too much of the thought and action of our world. We need to be reminded, as was Israel in our lesson, that God has called us to be a holy people. His holiness is not just something of which one sings in a hymn or talks in a sermon. It means among other things, real social justice.

God has always stood for social righteousness. The underlying moral law of the universe demands it, and the law of God as revealed to His people developed and implemented it for successful functioning, were we only wise enough to see and follow it.

It is time that all God's people emphasize God's moral principles in the life of society. Never forgetting that its first business is to preach the redeeming gospel of Christ, the church ought also to make its influence felt for social righteousness.

Our lesson speaks first of the foundational matter in all social justice, namely:

I. Holiness of Heart Before God (Lev. 19:1-4).

Because God is holy, His people were to be holy. It was not a matter of choice or impulse. They belonged to a holy God, they were to be a holy people.

There is an idea current in the church today which has served Satan well, namely, that holiness of life is something which is not required; that it is expected only of a few folk who are spiritually minded, and that the other professed followers of Christ may go on living a worldly, careless, powerless life. It is the devil's own lie. God expects every Christian to be holy.

Such rightness with God shows itself in a rightness with others, which we note as our second point:

II. Holiness of Life Before Men (Lev. 19:11-18, 32-34).

How intensely practical and workable in daily experience were the laws here given to Israel. They are just as apropos to our present day.

1. Honesty (vv. 11-13). No stealing, no perjury, no lying, no oppression, no withholding of wages, none of these could be tolerated, for they dishonored God's name. Think what the elimination of dishonesty in dealing between men would accomplish. Most of our social problems would be solved overnight. Merchants would do well to read verses 35 and 36 in this connection.

2. Kindness (v. 14). The deaf cannot hear what we say about them, nor can the blind see what we do. But the eternal God hears and sees, and He expects us to be kind to them.

3. Fairness (vv. 15, 16). Some assume that a man must be right because he is rich. Others are equally sure that the poor are always worthy of special consideration.

Note the condemnation of the talebearer. Every gossip who reads these words knows that God condemns that evil practice. Nor does He countenance indifference to the welfare of others. Their blood cries out to Him for deliverance (v. 16).

4. Love (vv. 17, 18). "Love thy neighbor as thyself." That is the standard. How much have we done to meet it?

A rebuke may be necessary, but love will not permit grudges, or the seeking of vengeance, even when we have been wronged.

5. Respect (vv. 3, 32). God's Word always stresses the need of a right attitude toward parents. Children need to learn anew the lesson of verse 3.

Then there are the aged (v. 32). Old age pensions doubtless have their place in our complex social order, but perhaps they would not be needed if men and women honored the hoary head and the face of an old man.

A pension does not take the place of honor and love for the aged, even though it may pay the bills. God has high standards.

6. Consideration (vv. 33, 34). The man who knows God will not be party to taking advantage of a stranger. He remembers that he too has been a stranger. To meet with loving kindness and tender care when one is in a strange place should inspire one to go and do likewise.

Kidneys Must Work Well-
For You To Feel Well
24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.
If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.
Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

25,000 EXTRA FREE VOTES GIVEN ALL CLUBS OF $7.50

maining in the race are going to be declared prize-winners on the last day, don't let your partisanship for your little favorite sway you in making your selections. Just remember, every little sweetheart remaining in the list must be considered as a potential first prize-winner. Whether they are or not, depends upon the efforts their parents put forth for them during the balance of the campaign.

The voting this week, has not been very heavy, although a few of the little ones who apparantly had been laying dormant, have suddenly blossomed out into real activity and as a result have placed themselves right up in the front rank and are threatening to assume leadership in the very near future.

All the workers are making every effort possible during the time of this 25,000 extra vote opportunity and have not wasted time bringing votes to the office, however, some splendid results are sure to result from effort during this period, and a great many votes are sure to be harvested by next Wednesday evening. so some decided gains are sure to be in evidence when the voting list next makes its appearance, watch for it and see if we are not right.

In talking about the coupon ballot good for 25 votes, several of our work ers have suggested that we discontinue publishing it. They claim that it takes too much of their time in collecting them for the number of votes secured; time, that if used in the direction of securing a subscription, would profit the baby immeasurably more. There is a lot of logic in this contention, and it's probably true, and in order to cooperate in every way possible, we gladly bow to their wishes in the matter and have withdrawn it from publication. So exit, coupon ballots. they will appear no more. Now you can use whatever effort you have time to give to this affair, in the direction where it will get you the greatest number of votes, and that is, of course, in the way of securing subscriptions—one subscription will get you more votes than you could collect in coupons in a month.

Remember, these $7.50 clubs are the gold-plated mediums by which you will scure the all-important votes which will spell victory on the last day of this great race, so do your very level best this bonus period and have the satisfaction of carrying off such a large bundle of votes that your future success will be almost assured.

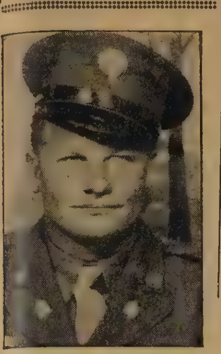
NEWS OF OUR BOYS

IN THE SERVICE



DOYLE WRIGHT

Mr. Rube Wright living in the Maplesville section, called at our office a few days ago and showed us a very interesting letter from his son, Doyle T., who has been in service somewhere in the Pacific.

We would like to have printed the letter in full but it was a lengthy one and our space is limited. He gave details of several clashes with the Japs all of which he evidently came out top hand otherwise he would not be in a position to do any writing.

The letter contained several souvenirs—a package of cigarettes (which smelled worse than the Japs themselves), some Jap money and 2 chevrons he cut from the uniforms of dead Japs. He reported as hale and hearty and wishes to be remembered to all his friends hereabouts; also he asked to have the NEWS sent to him and it will go to him this week.

The Wrights have two boys in service.

Mr and Mrs Martin Peterson of Jemison, formerly of Thorsby, have their 4th grandson, Ralph John Mikesell in the Armed Forces. Pvt Mikesell left Cedar Rapids for service. July 26th for March Field, Calif., where he had inlisted in the Aviation Force of Engineers. He writes that Army life is swell. He is the son of Martin Peterson's daughter, Helma Mikesell. Mr and Mrs Martin Peterson have 4 sons in the Service. They are: Capt. Walter Peterson at Maxwell Field. Lt. Richard Peterson at Quantico, Va. Sea. 1st Class USNR Leroy Peterson. and Willie Peterson, who is in the Navy. Grandsons are: Sgt. Charles Orton Wheeler, Camp Ga. Sgt Arthur Thrasher, Morgantown, Va. Ted Thrasher who was reported missing the last of Feb., was on the sub Grampus that was reported sunk.

V … —

Sgt Dallas Schultz and Cpl Michael Hyder who are stationed at Camp Rucker, were the guests of Misses Frances Bean and Lila Sides last week-end.

V … —

FLOYD WILLIAMS

Floyd Williams, who is now stationed in South Carolina is home on a 10 day furlough. This is his first time home in five years and he is just back from active duty in Africa. He has been in all six continents since he was home last. He is the son of Mr and Mrs Spurgeon Williams of South Clanton.

Homer A. Baisden, stationed in Balboa, Canal Zone, has been promoted to Corp. Cpl Baisden is the son of Mr and Mrs Annie Potts of Maplesville.

V … —

Irma V. Thrailkill, who's home is Verbena, Ala., was recently graduated from the Naval Training School for Yoeman in Cedar Falls, Iowa. Since she is now a qualified specialist in the Navy she has been assigned to active duty at some Naval shore station.

V … —

Maj. John D. Eiland, with the experienced gained in 50 combat missions against the Axis fliers, will soon begin his new job as instructor at the AAF at Randolph Field, Texas. While flying a P-38 Lightning, Maj. Eiland shot down three Nazi fighter planes and won the Dstinguished Service Cross and Air Medal, with seven clusters. He attributes his success and luck to a little wooden charm which was presented to him by friends before he departed from the West Coast to begin his trail of 50 combat missions. He called the little wooden pickaninnie "Shorty" because it was a facsimile of a little negro boy who used to accompany him on his fishing trips back home, and whos kinky thatch was always rubbebd for luck. He kept the charm hanging by his compass on all of his fghting trips.

Maj. Eiland is to be congratulated and his friends wish him God speed in his new line of duty.

V … —

Pvt Calvin Davis Jones, son of Mr and Mrs J. B. Jones of Verbena, Ala has arrived at Gulfport Field in Miss, where he will get a 2 months training course after which he will be classified as an aviation Cadet.

V … —

Chas E. Thomas son of Mr and Mrs John S. Thomas of Clanton has been promoted to Sgt and received his wings and unless he is held as an instructor, will leave immediately to join a combat crew aboard a U. S. bomber.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

"Sleepy" Miller, chief machanic for Clanton Motors, Inc., these many years is in the Navy now. He was sent to Pensacola. "Sleepy" who is a first-rate mechanic, didn't especially want in the Navy, we understand, but his uncle knew best, so there he is. Believe me he is sorely missed at Clanton Motors.

The most foolish trip we ever took to a grocer store, was last Saturday afternoon when the wife sent us after two dozen eggs and a sack of Laying Mash.

Speaking of the wife—When we were in the Magic City a few days ago we had just finished dinner at the Redmont Dining Room and started for the door when the wife missed her gloves. She went back to the table and was looking on the floor; in the chair; raised the tablecloth and looked under it. Finally a waiter came over to her and said, "Pardon me. Mis, but if you is looking for your husband, he is standing over there by the door."

A group of soldiers were visiting the Birmingham YMCA recently. Upon leaving they stopped at the desk and thanked the lady there for the hospitality shown them. They also remarked on how badly they had been treated in Atlanta when there. Remarked one, "Why over in Atlanta, they treated us like a bunch of damn yankees." The lady at the desk was astonished and told the boys that she was sorry. She then ask the young fellow who was acting as spokesman just who they were. To which he answered, "Damn Yankees."

Wednesday afternoon closing ended with the month of August and things are back to normal again. To the Newspapers and the Banks, things never did change anyway. The Newspapers couldn't close and the Banks closed but continued work just the same. There is only this difference: now we have company in town on Wednesday afternoons.

Congressman Pete Jarman was a visitor to this office Saturday. Until now, Pete has no announced opposition in the election next spring and we hope it remains that way. He is doing a fine job and we will all gain more by his having that extra time to devote to his duties.

In my business you have a fine opportunity to observe people. All kinds of people--rich and poor, educated and some not so educated, but most of them have one thing in common and that is, when they know the facts about something they are reasonable.

I was talking with one of our customers a few days ago and he said, "It looks like you'd tell everybody what you're telling me. There must be many persons who had the same idea that I've had". I got to thinking about that and concluded that, from time to time, I'd write out some of the thoughts suggested by discussions with users of electricity and print them in the newspaper.

This customer said to one of our service men, "A company as big as yours certainly has enough automobiles so that you could have made a special trip to fix my refrigerator. Did you ever think of the fact that every minute my refrigerator isn't operating your company is losing money?" Of course, what this customer hadn't thought of was that we're rationed on gas and tires, too; that in accordance with the Government's wishes that automobile mileage be reduced we have placed some of our cars in storage and curtailed the use of the others; that many of our men capable of doing electrical repair work are now in the Army and the Navy; and that, therefore, we can't make special trips except in the case of real emergency. Most people understand this and their patience is a fine tribute to their willingness to suffer inconvenience brought about by the war.

It traces the gains Japan has made, and shows how she is converting her newly won wealth into armaments and weapons; other scenes show the people, at home, in night clubs, and at work. It's a valuable background for current history.

Background

By BARBARA BENEDICT

Associated Newspapers—WNU Features.

THE day that Loraine Bigelow and Rance Strickland decided they were in love with each other enough to get married, Rance insisted that she come home with him to meet his mother. Loraine looked at him in alarm.

"Now? Today? Oh, Rance, suppose she doesn't like me?"

"She'll like you, all right," he grinned. "You're a Bigelow. That's enough for mother. She's a hound for family background." Then he added quickly. "Not that I'd love you any less, no matter who you were."

Loraine's fears that Mrs. Strickland would disapprove of her vanished five minutes after she had met the kindly old lady. "You're lovely, my dear," she told the girl frankly. "And I know you'll forgive me for being glad Rance is marrying someone with background. He's all I have, and I do so want him to be happy."

"No more than I, Mrs. Strickland. I love him too and I'll do my best to make him a good wife."

"I know you will. You come from a fine family. The Bigelows date back as far as the Mayflower."

Loraine could hardly wait to get home to tell her own mother the wonderful news.

"Good heavens, child, what's happened?" Mrs. Bigelow exclaimed when Loraine came bursting through the door.

"Oh, mother, I'm so happy! Rance and I are going to be married!"

"Married?" Mrs. Bigelow stared at her daughter in horror. "You marry a Strickland. Oh, my dear, that's ridiculous. The Stricklands are wealthy and have family background."

"So have we. Background, I mean. Oh, mother, money doesn't matter. Nothing matters when two people love each other as deeply as Rance and I."

Mrs. Bigelow stared at her daughter a moment and there was despair in her eyes. "My child, I should have told you this before. Both your father, before he died, and I thought you would be happier not knowing. But how could we foretell that you would fall in love with a Strickland?" The older lady dabbed at her eyes with a handkerchief. "Lorie, you—you're not our own daughter. Edward and I had no children. You were adopted."

"Mother!" Loraine stared at her mother in dumb horror. "Oh, mother, it isn't the truth! It can't be! Tell me it isn't, mother!"

"I'm sorry, child. It is the truth."

Alice Bradley, Loraine's closest friend and recently married, had been urging her to visit them in the small upstate town of Braebury for months, and it was toward this refuge that she headed.

Alice, unwarned of Loraine's coming, was not only astonished, but delighted.

"I haven't been feeling too good," Loraine admitted. "It's going to be fine spending a few days with you, if you'll let me."

"Let you? Now that you're here try and get away at least for a fortnight." She searched the other girl's eyes. "Say, what's this I hear about you and the Strickland millions?"

"Whatever you've heard, darling, it's wrong." Loraine smiled, blinking back tears. "Anyway, let's skip it. Shall we?"

Two days of fresh air, glorious sunshine and excellent food did nothing toward erasing the pale and wan look on Loraine's cheeks. Alice, watching her like a mother, became troubled. Secretly she talked the matter over with Ted, her husband, and they decided that something should be done. But what, neither of them at the moment knew. However, Ted was driving into the city the next day, and he promised to call on Mrs. Bigelow.

As it turned out, however, it wasn't necessary for Alice and Ted to put any possible plan into execution. A half hour before Ted was due to leave for the city on the following day, a smart looking limousine drove into the yard. Loraine, watching from the porch, emitted a gasp when Mrs. Strickland alighted.

Escape was impossible. Neither Ted nor Alice was in sight. Mrs. Strickland came up onto the porch. "My dear, you shouldn't have run away. I've been to see your mother."

"My mother! Oh, Mrs. Strickland, did she—did she—"

"Tell me that you were adopted? Yes." The older woman picked up Loraine's hand. "Being a foundling is certainly nothing to be ashamed of, my child. There's all the more credit due you."

"But—but you wouldn't want Rance to marry anyone without family background."

Mrs. Strickland smiled a wise little smile. "My dear, look at me. Haven't you guessed? Didn't it occur to you that the reason I was so eager to have Rance marry someone with background was because I myself was an adopted child?"

Loraine's mouth fell open. She tried to speak and couldn't. And just then Ted came from the house, carrying a bag. Impulsively Loraine turned and flew to him.

"Hurry!" she cried. "I'm going with you! Oh, for goodness' sake, Ted, move! Can't you see I—I'm in love all over again?'

Stuffed Eggplant Will Keep Your Points Down!
(See Recipes Below)

Harvest Foods

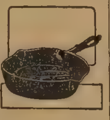
Late summer is the truck gardener's paradise, and this summer we might well say the Victory gardener's paradise, for there are many gay and attractive foods ripening now which may make a truly appetizing appearance on your table. For example, the season's choicest tomatoes in their fullest, ripest red make merry at the table now.

There's also golden-eared, tender sweet corn, at its best when picked not more than half an hour before eating. And one of the most dramatic vegetables to do justice to fall dinners is the eggplant—smooth, deep purple and shiny in appearance.

Most of you are undoubtedly familiar with eggplant served sliced and fried—and there's no doubt it's good that way. But for a change, try it baked with a savory stuffing and make it a main dish feature of your dinner. The total cooking time for preparing it in this new way is only 35 minutes—10 minutes for boiling the eggplant in rapidly boiling water, and then 25 minutes baking in a moderate oven.

*Stuffed Eggplant.
(Serves 6 to 8)

1 eggplant
1 cup bread croutons
4 strips bacon, cut in squares
1 tablespoon onion, minced
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 egg



Cook whole eggplant in boiling water for 10 minutes. Cut lengthwise slice from top of eggplant. Remove pulp with a spoon, leaving a substantial shell. Chop pulp. Add croutons. Fry bacon. Brown onion in bacon fat. Add to eggplant pulp. Add the egg and season with salt and pepper. Fill eggplant shell with the mixture and top with the following:

Corn Flake Crumb Topping.

2 cups corn flakes
1 egg yolk
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
Paprika
Butter

Roll corn flakes to fine crumbs, combine with egg yolk, mustard, lemon juice and salt. Cover stuffed eggplant with crumb mixture, dot with butter and sprinkle with paprika. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 25 minutes. Serve on a platter with corn on the cob and fresh, sliced tomatoes.

English Baked Squash.
(Serves 6)

1 quart peeled, thinly sliced Hubbard squash
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons sugar
½ cup rich cream
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Place squash in well-greased baking dish. Sprinkle with salt and sugar. Add cream and sprinkle with cinnamon. Bake covered in a slow (325-degree) oven for about 50 minutes.

Another vegetable comes in for honors—and very different but delicious is this dish, too!

Sour Cream Cabbage.
(Serves 5 to 6)

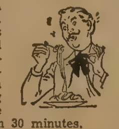
1 head of cabbage
2 tablespoons butter
1 clove garlic
½ cup sour cream
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg

Shred the head of cabbage medium fine. Heat the butter in skillet and cook in it slowly the clove of garlic, minced fine. Add cabbage and ¼ cup water. Cover tightly. Bring to a quick steam, reduce heat and cook for 10 more minutes. Just before removing from range, add sour cream sauce made by mixing together the sour cream, vinegar, sugar, salt and egg beaten light. Pour over cabbage and bring to a quick boil. Serve at once.

Here's a spaghetti dish that has a fall tang to it, and is excellent served with fried eggplant and apricot upside-down cake.

Sausages and Spaghetti.
(Serves 6)

8 link sausages
1 small onion, sliced
1 green pepper, chopped
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons flour
2½ cups tomatoes
1½ cups spaghetti, cooked



Cut sausages in inch lengths; fry until golden brown. Add onion and green pepper and brown lightly. Add seasonings and flour and blend. Add tomatoes and spaghetti. Bake in a greased baking dish in moderate (350-degree) oven 30 minutes.

*Caramel Cinnamon Muffins.
(Makes 1½ dozen 2-inch muffins)

2 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg
2 tablespoons light corn syrup or honey
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons melted shortening

Sift together flour, baking powder, cinnamon and salt. Beat egg, add syrup, milk and shortening. Blend thoroughly and add to flour mixture. Stir only until flour is moistened. Bake in a moderately hot oven (425 degrees) 20 minutes. Prepare muffin pans as follows for these muffins: Into each muffin cup, put ½ teaspoon butter or margarine and 1 teaspoon corn syrup. Fill with batter ⅔ of an inch full.

Lynn Says:

Color in Your Meals: Do you realize that your eyes eat that food before you actually eat it yourself? If food looks dull and unattractive, your appetite lags and the food, if eaten is consumed without much relish.

The eye wants contrast. Pick foods that go well together. You can serve several green vegetables for one meal, but not several all-white vegetables or all-red.

Combine meat and vegetables on one platter to get a design and save plates besides! Use garnishes with care and give them an opportunity to bring out the most in your foods.

Sprinkle beets with a little lemon juice to make them a more intense red. Cook green vegetables only until done to assure them of being crisp, green.

A dash of lemon juice on apples, pears or other fresh fruit will prevent it from darkening.

Peace Planners Emphasize Need for Orderly 'D' Day

Planning Board Report Envisions Reintegration Of Men Into Services Where Skill, Ability Are Recognized.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

Next week's release of "Washington Digest" will be written from Quebec, where H. R. Baukhage covered the history-making Roosevelt-Churchill conference for Western Newspaper Union and its affiliated newspapers.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

As the plans which received their final approval at the Quebec conference start turning from ink and paper to moving men and machines, the thoughts of other planners turn toward another zero hour—"D" day.

The war is not over by any means but hard-headed people who realize that you can't wait until it rains to prepare for a rainy day know that you can't wait until the sun comes out to buy your summer clothes.

"D" day is as important as "M" day. Demobilization is as big a problem as mobilization. Various plans have been worked on, none has been perfected. The President has offered one. The Republican party will offer another. Industry will present its program. The administration, whoever is at the helm when peace comes, will have a heavy responsibility. The National Resources Planning board has already made a report expressing its opinions on a plan drawn up by a special committee on post-war readjustment which, at least, gives us a point of departure.

Plan Needed Now

The board points out that victims of the war are already coming back and the time is ripe. Only the other day, I went through Walter Reed hospital here and saw some of those victims. Saw photographs of the conditions in which they come back and others showing what medical skill has done for them. I also saw the workshops where wounded men are being rehabilitated, fitted to take up work which, in spite of their handicaps, they could learn to do.

This plan emphasizes the need for an orderly demobilization. It is important to get every man who can be spared from the armed forces, the moment he can be spared without threatening the nation's security, back into civilian life. I know how glad I was when I got out of uniform into civvies after the last war.

But the report emphasizes that still more important than speed is order in demobilization. "We not only want the men out of the armed services; we want to get them into peace services where skills and abilities can be fully recognized, utilized and rewarded." That is the thesis of the planning board.

Responsibility for the placement of veterans in industry is acknowledged by the re-employment division of the selective service system under the selective service act. The selective service system is not perfect but considering the job it had to do, it has worked out in a manner that is a triumph of the democratic method. Draft boards are groups of "neighbors" who pass upon each registrant, and on that basis, select or reject him. The same system will put the soldier back into his old job—if his old job is there, and if he can fill it. But many had no jobs. Others for one reason or another will be unable to fill the ones they had before the war. These cases must be taken care of.

Board's Principles

Business has been shuffled and shifted about just as the men themselves have. It may be difficult to get man and job together. The problem is intricate but the committee has tried to lay down certain principles. Here they are:

1. Three months' furlough at the end of the war at regular base pay not to exceed $100 a month, plus family allowances.
2. Beyond that time, if necessary, unemployment insurance for 26 weeks for those who register with the government employment service.
3. Special aid and counsel regarding readjustment and compensation.
4. Special provision, including tuition and allowance, for the continuation of education interrupted by the war or to follow a special course of training.
5. Veterans credit for old age and survivors' insurance on the basis of service in the armed forces.
6. Opportunities for agricultural employment and settlement for a limited number of well-qualified men. But no dumping of men on farms simply because industrial employment is not immediately available.

Re-Training Program

Similar provisions must be made for war workers as war industries close or change over. Meanwhile, the government will maintain centers where assistance and re-training for civilian jobs can be arranged. In order to prevent a too rapid attempt at change-over of industry, a moderate policy of continuation of war contracts some of which can be continued in the national good.

Of course, nothing can be done permanently to stabilize the labor situation without a rapid expansion of peace-time industry toward a goal of full employment. It is well understood even by the most fervent of government planners that private industry and not the government must eventualy furnish the employment.

Already industry is offering plans of its own but it cannot be expected to do the whole job. One suggestion is that government loans be made to industries turning to peace-time production in proportion to the number of men such industries employ.

Business cannot take over the burden alone. In 1939, we were at peace although we were making a lot of war supplies for the Allies. Then 4.1 million workers were employed in munitions making. Eight and six-tenths millions were working on farms or agricultural pursuits. At the end of last year, the workers in war plants had more than doubled. They were 10.5 millions. In agriculture, unemployment has not greatly changed, comparatively speaking; farm workers amount to 8.9 millions. But the men in the armed forces more than doubled. In the same period the unemployed had decreased from 8.7 millions to 1 million. (Some of these we shall always have with us—the lame, the halt and, of course, the lazy.) But it is estimated there were 900,000 persons jobless and deserving work in July of this year.

There may be points to the committee's plan to which objections will be raised. It is not offered as a working drawing, merely as a basis of discussion, but how much better such a procedure is than the policy after the last war when the soldier was a football and where each congress tried to vote more dollars out of the treasury without rhyme or reason; money which didn't provide jobs, which in many cases, pitifully failed of its purpose, and in others simply filled the coffers of the bootlegger and the shark and left the recipient nothing.

Over the land, the Victory gardens are bringing in their rich yields to many a person who probably never worked as hard—physically—for his supper before. And probably never had more fresh, sweet and luscious vegetables.

But I wandered over a farm recently that was crying for rain. I couldn't help thinking, as I pushed through a wood lot beside a shrunken stream, stained brown from the yellow leaves that carpeted it, how all the living things were anguishing with thirst. Twigs snapped under one's feet like dry bones, there was an ugly growl instead of a happy hum from the insects—it seemed that only the tough blue-bottles could survive. Not far from the stream where the earth in the bed of a spring was still damp, one cricket was singing gratefully but there were few of his fellows about. Leaves on tall weeds hung to the stem like a flag at half-staff on a day when no breeze stirs, one yellow-headed flower stood out in a spot of color, it looked like a very sleepy little girl, her damp locks glued to her face almost concealing her tired smile.

I thought: "I wish I could stay here until the rain comes singing through the leaves, wetting cracked lips of the peeling furrows—I believe I would hear a real hymn of rejoicing go up."

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

THIS old fashioned saw tooth quilt pattern has been used for the border of many handsome quilts. It is so modern looking and so simple to piece that it should serve many decorative purposes. Here it trims kitchen curtains of unbleached muslin. In addition to its old time use its angular note would make it effective as a border for luncheon cloths, aprons and various other purposes.

To make a pattern cut a square of cardboard, then cut diagonally; one half will make a triangle pattern. The size suggested in sketch may vary according to the purpose in mind. If a bright color is used for the plain triangles, a narrow border will make a good showing.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Rubber shortage will cause motor trucks to be operated this year only 60 per cent of their 1941 mileages, according to OWI. Ton mileage haul in intercity service, however, was up 10 per cent early this year.

Rubber latex, a milk-like substance, contains from 30 to 40 per cent solids; cow's milk has only 12 per cent solids.

Add lettuce to the list of rubber producers! Tests of three varieties of lettuce by the University of California, it has been reported, showed high content of rubber latex.

Notice To Farmers Who Need Help In Harvesting

Elsewhere in this issue is a proclamation issued by Mayor C. E. Stapp requesting all citizens of the County who can to give Wednesday, September 15th, to helping harvest the abundant crops raised this year.

Those farmers who are in need of help are asked to go to the County Agent's office and register, stating for what the help is needed. The farmer is also asked to have a way to transport his help from the Courthouse to his field on the day pecified.

If other day are needed to get the crops here harvested, other days will be named for this purpose.

CHILTON COUNTY HIGH P.-T.A. TO MEET ON NEXT TUESDAY

The Chilton County High School Parent-Teachers Association will hold a meeting at the high school next Tuesday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. Mrs. Mary Burnett, president, announced Tuesday. The president also announced there would be a social hour after the meeting. All members are asked to be present at this meeting.

Tire Recapping Comes To Town

No longer will the people of Chilton County have to ship their automobile tires to the larger cities to have them repaired or recapped. During the past week electricians and mechanics have been installing equipment at 308 7th Street, and now Clanton has it's own recapping plant.

Mr Henry G. Morgan, manager of the plant stated that the switch was thrown yesterday that put the plant in to operation. "Tires are already being turned out that have the appearance of new tires and will give just about the same service as the ones made before the war," said Mr Morgan. "This is due to the fact," continued Mr Morgan, "that the plant is equipped with the newest and most modern electrical molds and the Government has authorized the use of Grade C (Truck type) rubber for all passinger tires."

Mr Morgan has many years experience in the recapping industry and recently resigned from a large Rubber Co., to make his home in Clanton.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Due to the fact that there will be a special meeting next Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the First Baptist Church. There will be no meetings of the W.M.U. Circles in the homes Monday afternoon.

Dr Carson, returned Missionary from Nigeria, will be the speaker for the evening and the public is cordially invited Remember the date and keep it open—Monday, September 13, 8:00 o'clock, at First Baptist Church in Clanton.

ANNIE MAE DANIELS

Annie Mae Daniels, age 26, died at a Montgomery hospital Sunday night. The remains were brought to Clanton by J. Mell Martin & Sons and prepared for burial. Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at 10:00 o'clock at Clanton Church of Christ and burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery at Jemison. Services were conducted by Rev. J. T Daniels.

Pallbearers: Arkie Mahan, J. A. Nivens, George Kilgore, P. J. Thornton, Jess Motes, Vernon Carlson. Surviving are the mother and father. Mr. and Mrs. William Ol Daniels; two sisters, Edna and Ruby; one brother, J W. Daniels; several uncles and aunts.

ANOTHER SPLENDID BONUS IN OUR GREAT BABY CAMPAIGN

30,000 Extra Free Votes Given As A Bonus On Clubs Of $9.00 Worth Of Subscriptions Turned In At Our Office By September 22

Our exciting little Baby Campaign continues on its rollicking way, with interest in the final outcome becoming more keen as the days roll by. Nearly all of the babies are keeping pretty close together, while a few of the semi-active ones will very likely move up into the front rank with the other leaders, at the end of the present bonus period which ends this present Wednesday evening. Some of them will surely make their club and if they do, the 25,000 extra votes they will secure will put them very much in the running.

The clubbing offer which has just ended, seems to have been a popula one with all the workers, and nearly all of them have had good success under it. This being an evident fact. we have decided to make another club offer which we hope will prove equally profitable to all of you.

Here it is—beginning immediately, and effective until Wednesday evening, September 22, we will give a bonus of 30,000 extra votes on all clubs of $9.00 worth of subscriptions turned in at our office during this time. This is not a hard offer to make inasmuch as it gives you two weeks in which to pick up six subscriptions and we know there is no one, definitely interested in winning a prize for their baby, who will have any trouble in making at least one club. Very likely one could secure that many subscriptions in one day if they had the time to devote to it, but these are busy days and we want to give all our workers ample time in which to make their club, and 2 weeks would seem to be the answer to that.

This will be the last clubbing offer that will be made, and as at its conclusion, we will be entering the last and fateful period of the race, you must understand how extremely necessary it is to the success of your little one, that you make this very important club. If you fail to make this club and lose the bonus of 30,000 extra votes, you can see what a handicap your baby will be under as we enter the final period of the campaign. So don't, under any consideration, fail to make this $9.00 club; if you do make it, you can enter the final phase of the competition with faith and confidence, and the assurance that if your baby is to meet defeat, it will only be during the last ten days of the race—of course, if you can make two clubs during this period, it would make baby's chances rosy. indeed; perhaps if you hustle you can do it, incidentally, if you had a balance from the other club, it will apply on this $9.00 club.

So take up a notch in your belt and make up your mind that, come what may, you are going to make this club; baby's success depends upon it and you are not going to fail little sweetheart in this vital emergency, we feel sure.

We have received a number of compliments on our baby pictures. Now, we don't want to do too much bragging, but we do maintain that there is no other section of any country that can show a handsomer or more lovely collection of little folks than we are privileged to present to you during the progress of this mighty interesting baby feature — that's our story and we stick to it.

Small Growers Urged To Pool Sweet Potato Crop

Pooling of crops to make up carload lots of sweet potatoes, and sharing of curing and storage facilities were urged this week by the War Food Administration to help dispose of the bumper crop of sweet potatoes that threatens to swamp the market.

"To meet the requirement's support price program, sweet potatoes must be deliverd in carload lots," said William R. Sewell, state supervisor of the Food Distribution Administration. "Growers who do not have a large enough crop for a full carload should make arrangements in advance with other growers to pool their potatos to make a load."

Sweet potatoes must grade US No. 1 and be packed in rigid containers, as well as loaded in cars, to get the support price of $1.15 per bushel this Fall. The support price rises to $1.50 for cured potatoes in rigid containers in January, and $1.65 in February and thereafter through the season. Prices for US No. 2 grade with 75 percent US No. 1 quality will be 15 cents per bushel less than the price for US No. 1. While prices are considerably above the support level now, if a large number of green sweet potatoes are marketed this fall, prices may drop considerably In that case the grower may wish to take advantage of the government's guarantee, the FDA official pointed out.

"The obvious way for the grower to make more money on his crop is to cure and store the potatoes for winter or spring sale," Mr. Sewell said. "While a small grower may not have curing and storage facilities, and may not wish to rent space himself, growers can profitably share space in suitable buildings."

Growers were also warned to put in orders for rigid containers early bcaeuse of the shortage of crates and hampers.

EXECUTIVE MEETING OF P.-T. A.

The members of the High School P.-T. A. Executive Committee were the guests of the P.-T. A. president, Mrs. Rip Burnett, on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock for the purpose of discussing the duties of each officer and committee chairman for the coming year.

Plans were also made for the first meeting of the P.-T. A., which will be held on Tuesday, September 14th, at 4 o'clock at the High School. A program is planned and there will be a social hour for the purpose of helping the mothers and teachers get to know each other better. Every parent who can possibly come is urged to be present for this first meeting of "their P.-T. A."

GILBERT WAYNE KNIGHT

Gilbert Wayne Knight, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Odell Knight of the Mt Pisgah Community, died at a Montgomery hospital Friday night. Besides the mother and father several brothers and sisters survive.

Horse Show Committee Met Wednesday Night

Committee members of the Chilton County Horse Show, to be held at the Chilton County High School Athletic Field on September 29th, met Wednesday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chick Fiquette and mapped final plans for the show.

Dr. W. L. Parrish. Chairman, presided Reports from all committees as to progress made in preparation for the show was heard.

Entry blanks were mailed out last week to several hundred owners and breeders and a record crowd is expected to attend this first Chilton County Horse Show.

A PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS the farmers around us have produced bountifully and crops are now ready for harvest; and

WHEREAS farmers do not have enough labor to harvest these crops as it should be done for best results; and

WHEREAS everything that is produced should be harvested and used most effectively in winning this war; and

WHEREAS farmers, in addition to doing an outstanding production job this year, have sent their full portion of men to the armed forces and to war industries:

Now, therefore, I, C E. Stapp, Mayor of the City of Clanton, Alabama, do hereby proclaim a Farm Harvest Holiday begining at 6 a.m. (War Time) on Wednesday, September 15th, 1943.

And I am requesting every man, woman, and child, able to do a day's farm work, regardless of race, color, or creed, to meet at 6 a.m. at the Clanton coudthouse wearing clothes suitable for farm work. Bring pick sacks or aprons for picking cotton. If other such holidays are needed to harvest these crops they will be declared.

Executed under my hand at Clanton, Alabama, on this the ninth day of September, 1943, A.D.

C. E STAPP, Mayor.

Military Experts Satisfied With Results of Roosevelt-Churchill Conference; Political Angle an Enigma.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

Mr. Baukhage has written today's column from Quebec, site of the Roosevelt-Churchill conference, which he covered for newspapers affiliated with Western Newspaper Union.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

Now that some of the deep secrets which surrounded the most important conference so far held by the firm of Roosevelt & Churchill, purveyors of victory, are beginning to be revealed in action, one can lean back, gaze at this remarkable adventure in history in the making—and wonder . . .

I cannot help recalling the evening of Sunday, August 22, nearly a month after the actual preparations for the conference began, the purpose of which was then unguessed even by the people whose job was to do the spade work. I was sitting with Edgar Mowrer, the well-known newspaper man, Michael Barkway, representative of the British Broadcasting company, and Wilson Woodside, commentator for the Canadian Broadcasting system. That morning the news had broken that Ambassador Litvinov would not return to Washington. It was learned that a virtually unknown member of the Soviet diplomatic corps, who had been their representative in Ottawa, was to replace the adroit Mr. Maisky, Stalin's expert lieutenant in London.

Woodside had learned, quite by accident, that a little while before the representative of Tass, the official Russian news agency, who had been an active participator in the press conferences, had suddenly departed from our midst—severing the last shadowy link with the Kremlin.

A few days before, just as a rumor was circulating that the conference had agreed upon the division of Germany into separate states as one of the post-war steps, the text of a broadcast from Moscow was printed in an American paper. It was made by the so-called Free Germany committee, and of course could not have voiced any views contrary to the will of Stalin. It urged that the German army be kept intact after the war!

Stalin's Absence

Of course Stalin's absence from the conference had been widely discussed in Quebec. To say the least we were four very confused members of press and radio, and I think our feelings were typical—two of us had covered international conferences before. Was Russia running a competition show to the one staged on the heights of America's Gibraltar? The shudder we shuddered and which spread out over the telegraph lines and airwaves bounced back to the walls of the Citadel where the top-men were conferring. At an eight o'clock conference that eve-evening presidential secretary Stephen Early announced that the recall of Litvinov had been known to the conferees long before it happened and had no influence or effect on the conference.

Meanwhile all sorts of speculation about the effect of the absence of the Russians, the ominous "empty chair," had been pouring out of Quebec, perhaps comforting if not aiding the enemy and probably making no one happy, even Stalin.

Could this and the other unfortunate things which were written have been avoided; were we, in spite of ourselves, evil muses?

I said to one of the willing but rather futile and frustrated men who were supposed to provide us with facts: if we could have just had a little guidance wouldn't it have been better?

He admitted that was true, but, he added, "When an information man asks the higher ups for information they are so afraid they will say more than they ought to that we get nothing."

More than 200 press, radio and news photographers were here. We filled to bursting the little old Clarendon hotel, with its narrow corridors, its lobby turned into a telegraph office, and its modest bedrooms made into press room and broadcasting studios. Two blocks away was the spacious Chateau Frontenac, a Normandie palace with 750 bedrooms, where some 300 military and technical experts were immolated. Canadian Mounted police, tough British marines and hefty Canadian veterans of Dieppe guarded its portals. The inmates, like us, were virtually incommunicado. When they dared take a one-day's river trip one officer said, "it was to prevent an outbreak of claustrophobia."

Invisible Ink

There is much we did not know when we arrived. There is more we still do not know of what occurred after the conferees met. History was written but it was written in invisible ink.

Now some things can be told. In the first place the event was, perhaps purposely, perhaps unwittingly, played down in Washington in advance. Before I left the capital I was assured the conference would probably end about the Wednesday a week before it did. I had hoped for a quiet half-week's vacation. But no sooner had I arrived on the Sunday preceding Roosevelt's arrival the next Tuesday, than I saw we were all wrong. I felt sure something had happened when the President and the prime minister had their preliminary talk at Hyde Park. Something did, for I am sure there had been no intention of producing the parade of cabinet officers and other brass hats who kept dropping in from the skies and elsewhere one after another. But I learned that the length of the conference was planned to a "t" by the President long before it began. He knew it would last precisely as long as it did for he timed his Ottawa trip in advance so he would be back in Washington on August 26. He knew what was coming and that is why he slipped off for that fishing trip, which was just that and nothing more, ahead of the conference—it was a health measure pure and simple. Churchill and his midnight cigars are something to prepare for, the wee sma' hours are the big moments for this human dynamo.

Then the "something" yet to be revealed, happened. Churchill hailed his foreign minister from London and with him came not only Information Minister Bracken, who played no part as an informer but nevertheless was of cabinet rank, but also the permanent head of the British foreign office, Sir Alexander Cadogan with the accent on the "dog" pronounced (though Secretary Early could never quite master it) "dug."

Of course Hull had to appear to match Eden; then another cabinet member, Secretary of War Stimson to match Bracken and then Secretary of the Navy Knox for good measure, perhaps to give verisimilitude to the talk that the Pacific was not being neglected. Then just before Stalin made public his gesture of withdrawal (recalling Litvinov), T. V. Soong, Chinese foreign minister more or less permanently installed in Washington for some time past, appeared. Then there was the excuse that a big drive on Burma was in the wind.

The Big Drive

Meanwhile the press had blown very hot and then very cold on an immediate invasion of Europe from Britain. I don't know whether the reports that the big smash was coming was a part of the Allied war of nerves, but I am sure that the folks who threw cold water on it were sincere in their belief it just couldn't be started before spring.

I sat with a general whom I have known for a long time, a real soldier in World War I as well as in this one. Here's what he had to say:

"We haven't got the men yet. We must drop bombs upon bombs. There is a lot more softening up to do."

This man was on the periphery—not on the inside. I am sure that the technical experts, the officers—and we had them all, probably the greatest aggregation of military brains and real experience, too, ever assembled anywhere — they were sure. They were certain. And when the conference was over they were satisfied. As to the political side, that is an enigma and will be one as long as Russia remains one. And that she is.

ISRAEL MARCHES TOWARD CANAAN

LESSON TEXT—Numbers 10:11, 12, 29-36.

GOLDEN TEXT—Come thou with us, and we will do thee good.—Numbers 10:29.

There is a time to wait before God, to be instructed and prepared for holy living. There is also a time for action. When God says, "Move forward," His people are to arise and be on their way.

Israel, who had now been more than a year on the way from Egypt to Canaan, had been resting for a time at Mt. Sinai, there receiving instruction and being organized into a nation. They had set up a place of worship in their midst, and now they were ready to go on. That is God's will for His people. They are to

I. Move Toward the Goal (vv. 11, 12).

God had a schedule. He wanted them to move forward on a certain day (v. 11). Since the Jewish religious year, referred to here, began with the spring equinox, this was about the middle of May. The dry season was ahead—a good time to travel.

Those who think the purposes of God for men are nebulous and uncertain, and that He has no real plan for us, are obviously mistaken. His plan is good and acceptable and perfect; let us find and follow it.

We do not have a pillar of cloud and fire to move before us. We do not need it, for we, unlike the Israelites, have God's Word for our guide, and His Holy Spirit as the One who will tell every responsive soul when and where to go.

The important thing is to obey, promptly and willingly, and we shall have the blessing of God.

II. Bring Others With You (vv. 29-32).

Those who go up to the promised land should not go alone, they should bring others with them.

Moses, who had been in touch with the family of his father-in-law (known both as Jethro and Raguel or Reuel), now sees the value of having with him his brother-in-law, who was so acquainted with the great and terrible wilderness through which they were to pass that he could be invaluable as a guide and helper.

In giving him the invitation, however, Moses stressed the opposite thought—that it would be good for Hobab if he came with them. That was doubtless true, but it was not the right approach.

Men do not respond to the opportunity for advantage in spiritual things as readily as to the challenge to usefulness. The motive of acquisition is strong, but the best folk are not as interested in what they can get as what they can give.

The church may stress too much its value as a place of refuge and not enough the unparalleled opportunity it affords for sacrificial service.

When Moses changed his plea and revealed his need of Hobab, the response was immediate. He had thus won a friend and a helper.

III. Follow God's Guidance (vv. 33-36).

God gave special guidance on this occasion. The ark which commonly was found in the midst of the people, now moved out before them.

It was the symbol of God's presence. As they went out into the wilderness (which Deut. 1:19 calls "great and terrible") it was as though God Himself went before them.

Is not this always true? The "Captain of Our Salvation," Jesus Christ, is not One who tarries in safety at the rear and sends up orders for us to attack life's problems. He goes before us!

The pillar of cloud hovered over the people as though to give them shelter from the beating sun of the desert. God is mindful of the road His people must travel, and in His loving-kindness provides for their protection and care.

In our day there are many who are tempted to question whether God knows of their trials and afflictions. He does, and He will not permit them to be tried beyond their ability to bear it.

When the ark went forward, their leader, Moses, addressed God in the stirring words of verse 35. The people whose God is the Lord may count on Him to scatter their enemies.

All of human life is either a journey or a battle, and often it is both. We must arise and make valiant war against the forces of evil if we are to move forward for God. But we must recall that our foes, as Christians, are also God's foes.

The battle is not ours, but God's, and we do well to call on Him to rise up and smite the enemy.

Note that after the forward march came a time of rest. God always gives His people an opportunity for needed rest.

What is the most welcome gift you can send to a man in the service? Well, surveys among service men themselves show that one of the favorite packages from home are cigarettes. And first choice among men in all the services is Camel, based on the actual sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens. Though there are now Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. ON THE HOME FRONT

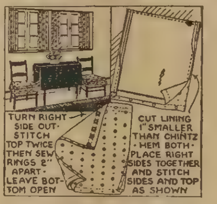
with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

QUAINT chintz curtains are always appropriate for casement windows and their colors give the best effect by day if they are lined to keep the light from shining through. At night they may be drawn together to serve instead of shades if the lining is of fairly heavy material.

The secret of making curtains of this type hang well is in not joining the two layers of material at the bottom. If your windows are narrow, a half width of chintz and of lining may be wide enough for each curtain. Plan them to be wide enough to hang slightly full when drawn together. The lining should be cut one inch narrower and shorter than the chintz. Hem each piece, then place right sides together and stitch side seams, as shown at the right of this sketch. Crease sides with seams on the lining, then stitch across top. The lower sketch shows how the top is finished.



TURN RIGHT SIDE OUT. STITCH TOP TWICE THEN SEW RINGS 2" APART. LEAVE BOTTOM OPEN CUT LINING 1" SMALLER THAN CHINTZ. HEM BOTH. PLACE RIGHT SIDES TOGETHER AND STITCH SIDES AND TOP AS SHOWN

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

Entered in the Postoffice at Clanton, Alabama, as second -class matter under the Act of Congress of March, 1897
MRS MARK L. TUCKER, Owner
R. M. TUCKER, Managing Editor
The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

WE HAD BEST TURN BACK

Man struggles today through a whirlpool that threatens to become too big and too powerful to be overcome.

Today we shed blood and our tears in a war that is too vast for any human mind to comprehend all its factors.

Tomorrow we will face an even harder job than the winning of the war. . .that of rebuilding a world whose old foundations have collapsed.

Even those things that in yesteryear were taken for granted have become tremendously difficult, probably because we, ourselves, have become too little for the tasks.

If you doubt that, consider what delinquency, juvenile and adult, is doing to a tremendous percentage of homes, not only in America, but in every other nation of the world.

Why are we puzzled and torn and distressed as no human beings have been since the creation?

We think the answer is so plain as to be simple.

Man has forgotten to fear God.

Man has forgotten the acient promises that good shall come to those who do good and evil to those who perform evil.

Even in Talladega we can show you child after child on the streets who never heard the word "God" except as an oath.

The old-fashioned family altar has gone from us. If we were to sing the grand old hymns about our home at eventide, the chances are we'd make a blasphemy of it by "swinging" them.

We go casually to church because it's the thing to do, but too many of us do not take God home with us.

Those are some of the things that have put the world and its people where they are today.

There is one way out.

The world is going to get down on its knees before the Almighty.

Either it will drop to its knees voluntarily, or the creator will put it there.

There is one great simplicity that can solve the great complexity in which we live. And that is the simplicity of the Eternal and His Truth.
—Talladega Daily Home.

PUBLIC WELFARE

The aged are the first concern to the Chilton County Department of Public Welfare, Miss Martha F. Burt, Director, said to-day in releasing monthly figures which show that 62 per cent of the Department's monthly expenditures and 74 per cent of the people ossisted by the agency are in this group. During the past month 238 family units of old people in the county received $2930.00, an average of $12.31 per family. each unit consisting of a per centage basis. of slightly less than two persons.

Emphasizing that assistance to the aged is a form of relief and is NOT a straight pension program, Miss Burt explained that individual grants are not paid on a flat basis of so much per month, but rather each grant is determined by each individual family's needs as compared to their resources and the money now available to aid the needy aged. "If funds would permit, grants would be made individual families to cover their total needs, but so far only a portion of the needs can be provided for because money is not available to meet more of the needs," Miss Burt said. Recent legislative action of the 1943 Alabama Legislature in appropriating additional money for Old Age Assistance should make it possible, however, to raise grants in Chilton County to an average of approximately $14.71 per month after October 1. 1943, when the new laws go into effect. Though this amount will still be too small, it will more adequately meet each family's needs, Miss Burt said.

This money is for those who are eligible for aid under the State and Federal laws governing Old Age Assistance. Miss Burt pointed out, stating that besides NEED and AGE, a person must be a resident of the State for at least a year preceding his application. He must also, Not be an inmate of a public institution nor have disposed of property in order to qualify for assistance.

Explaining how Old Age Assistance differs from old age insurance, Miss Burt said that old age insurance is paid by the Federal Social Security Boart to people who have "paid in" to it over a period of years. The people who have paid in receive benefits which are a result of their having paid contributions regularly towards such benefits, just as any other insurance. Old age insurance has no relation to need, as Old Age Assistance does, Miss Burt said, but neither Old Age Assistance nor old age insurance is a pension."

Assistance is administered to other groups of Needy people by the Department of Public Welfare, besides the assistance to the aged, Miss Burt added. In August 1943, a total of $3.-544.50 was expended in Chilton County for aid to needy people. $2930.00 went to 238 families of the aged (Old Age Assistance) $1395.00 went to 55 families with 155 dependent children (Aid to Dependent Children): $80.00 went to 5 family units of the blind (Aid to Blind) and $311.00 went to 25 family units where the breadwinner was otherwise handicapped. (Aid to the Handicapped).

In addition to the families cared for under the financial categories and receiving financial assistance through the Department of Public Welfare. Miss Burt said that 5 new cases of Juvenile Delinquency had been reported to the Department and had been handled by that agency as well as information on 213 registrants of the Local Selective Service Boards had been supplied the Local Boards by the Chilton County Department of Public Welfare.

Special Meeting Of W. M. U. Here September 14th.

It is with pleasure that we are able to announce that plans have been completed for a special missionary meeting to be held September 14, beginning at 10 a. m. at the First Baptist Church of Clanton with the WMU of both Chilton and Unity Associations participating.

Dr W. H. Carson, recently returned Southern Baptist Missionary from Algeria, West Africa, will be the main speaker both morning and afternoon. It is with unusual interest that we anticipate his timely message. All members of the Woman's Missionary Societies are urged to read and study in their local churches the Mission study book of our work in Nigeria, "Day Dawn in Yoruba Land," by Dr Charles E. Maddry, in preparation for this meeting.

Mrs J. H. Hudgins of Birmingham, W. M. U. President of the 9th District, will lead the morning devotional period. This message will be greatly appreciated by our people.

It is also hoped that Mr Hidie, formerly of Holland and now residing at Thorsby, will give a bird's eye view of conditions inside Europe under the Nazi regime.

All members of the Women's Missionary Societies of bobth Associations and pastors of the churches represented, are urged to attend this special meeting of unusual interest remembering that the words of Christ apply in a particular way to us in this day of strain and stress as we realize our need of His blessing now more than ever before: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." We are praying that our people from all our churches will demonstrate their love and devotion to the work of Christ's Kingdom by their cooperation and attendance at this meeting.

It is reqested that each one bring her own individual lunch as was done at our July meeting. We feel that this is a patriotic and sensible practice to follow for the duration of the war as we seek to help our cuntry conserve food and labor. The Clanton church will prepare the basement for lunch and will serve an ice drink to everyone.

Mrs S. J. M. Webb and Mrs H. G Heflin will call for meetings of the Executive Boards of both Chilton and Unity Associations immediately following the afternoon program.

A recent check showed that only 33 per cent of homemakers store bread in refrigerators in hot weather to avoid mold, yet bread waste is higher than for any other food.

Argentina normally ships out between a third and a fourth of all the meat exports in the world.

A recent nation-wide survey shows that the average grocery store has a completely new staff every five weeks.

I've Been Thinkin'

Listen to "REPORT TO THE NATION" On Columbia Network Radio Stations each Tuesday night 8:30 p.m.

I hear lots of people talking about the high cost of living. Once in a while you hear one say, "Well, everything else has gone up in price but there is still one thing you can use with the knowledge that you are not being charged any more for it than before the war. That's electricity." I sometimes wonder what it is that makes people complain when something goes wrong but keeps them from saying something nice to you when you give them good service at a low price.

Oh, yes, while I'm thinking of it, don't forget to buy War Stamps each week. By making a regular habit of that it is surprising how fast the dime, quarter and dollar stamps amount to enough with which to buy a War Bond. Those War Bonds are going to come in mighty handy after the war to buy those things you'll be wanting and needing then. They'll come in mighty handy, too, if you have a spell of sickness or some other hard luck.

To the PEOPLE of ALABAMA
Proclamation
"BACK THE ATTACK"
Carry the BLITZ to BERLIN

RECOGNIZING THE FACT that in carrying the war into enemy territory, we shall need greater amounts of money than any nation has ever asked from its citizens in all history, I, FRANKLIN D ROOSEVELT, President of the United States of America, do officially proclaim that on Thursday, the ninth of September, 1943, the Third War Loan shall be launched.

As Commander-in-Chief, I hereby invoke every citizen to give all possible aid and support to this Third War Loan drive, not only so that our financial goal may be reached, but to encourage and inspire those of our husbands and fathers and sons who are under fire on a dozen fronts all over the world. It is my earnest hope that every American will realize that in buying War Bonds in this Third War Loan he has an opportunity to express voluntarily and under the guidance of his conscience, the extent to which he will "back the attack."

The American people supported well the first and second War Loan drives and in fact did even more than was asked of them. Our need for money now is greater than ever, and will continue to grow until the very day that Victory is won, so we must ask far more sacrifice, far more cooperation than ever before.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

DONE at the City of Washington, this twenty-sixth day of July in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and forty-three, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixty-eighth.

[SEAL]

By the President
CORDELL HULL
Secretary of State

Franklin D Roosevelt

ALABAMA TAKES OFF—Alabama takes off at high noon, Sept. 9, to "Back the Attack" by "Carrying the Blitz to Berlin" in a bomber-fighter fleet of her own. Answering President Roosevelt's stirring proclamation, the state set its quota of $108,000,000 for the Third War Loan in planes and is off in a roar of excitement to put over the greatest financial campaign in the history of the state. Shown above are fighters and bombers of the "Alabama Fleet" together with President Franklin D. Roosevelt and his proclamation to the people of Alabama.

President Calls On People To Give All Aid and Support To Third War Loan Drive

Proclamation Officially Opens Third War Loan Drive September 9th

Alabama is off at high noon Sept. 9th to buy her own fleet of bombers and fighters to "Carry the Blitz to Berlin" as her part in the Third War Loan campaign. In this way Alabama will "Back the Attack."

In a stirring proclamation, President Franklin D. Roosevelt has called upon the state as Commander-in-Chief to "give all possible aid and support to this Third War Loan drive, not only so that our financial goal may be reached, but to encourage and inspire those of our husbands and fathers and sons who are under fire on a dozen fronts all over the world.

"It is my earnest hope that every American will realize that in buying War Bonds in this Third War Loan he has an opportunity to express voluntarily and under the guidance of his conscience, the extent to which he will 'back the attack.'

"The American people supported well the first and second War Loan drives and in fact did more than was asked of them. Our need for money now is greater than ever, and will continue to grow until the very day that Victory is won; so we must ask far more sacrifice, far more cooperation than ever before."

One Alabama mother, Mrs. Emma B. Grady, of Montevallo, who has seven sons in the service, has already answered the call to action. Mrs. Grady is buying War Bonds for all her sons, backing the attack with her sons and her dollars.

Ed Leigh McMillan, State War Finance Chairman, has called upon every citizen to match Mrs. Grady's example not with sons, for few families have so many sons of military age, but with dollars.

Mrs. Grady will speak briefly on state radio programs.

In a state wide "Take off" radio program to originate in Montgomery at 11:30 a.m. Sept. 9 Gov. Chauncey Sparks, war heroes stationed at Maxwell Field and Maj. Gen. Thomas J. Hanley, Jr., will launch the state drive.

In Mobile and Clanton parades will mark the beginning of the Third War Loan campaign while Birmingham is planning a bomber attack upon the city.

Misses Norma Jean and Annie Lou Payne were the guests of Miss Jane Shanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis McGee, of Isabella, spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Preston McGee Sunday.

Miss Mattie Delene Dennis was the Sunday afternoon guest of Miss Hilda Ruth Carter of Stanton.

Mrs. Cecil McSheehaw and daughter, Carolyn, of 500 Lauderdale St., Selma, are visiting her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Doss Lovelady. of Clanton.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Nazi Production Suffers New Blows As Allies Step Up Bombing Attacks; Russian Army's Westward Offensive Threat to All of German Strongholds

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

EUROPE:

Soften Fortress

Looking up into the gathering dusk or the early dawn, residents of England's southeast coast no longer crane their necks in wonder as Allied bombers fill the sky on their way to blast Hitler's European fortress.

With deadly monotony, Allied bombers are making the run over the continent. With Germany's Ruhr smoking in ruins, RAF light and heavy bombers shifted the weight of their attacks to Berlin, and daring U. S. Flying Fortresses stabbed ever deeper into Europe to strike at the famous Messerschmitt aircraft plants near Vienna and Regensberg. Meanwhile the Germans claimed that North African ports are filled with Allied vessels concentrating for a full scale invasion of Italy or France.

With all Europe in a pother over the expected invasion, Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Great Britain told the world that when the Allies open a second front, it will be only after military circumstances dictate, and not for political purposes.

KINGS:

One Prisoner

Striking with characteristic swiftness, German troops moved in force into Denmark and made that model Nazi protectorate a military province.

King Christian

Reportedly interned in Copenhagen was King Christian X. Under arrest was former Premier Eric Scavenius and members of his cabinet. Throughout the entire tiny state martial law was in force, with public assemblages forbidden, a curfew imposed, and all judicial and civil functions in the hands of Nazis.

Apparent cause for Hitler's sudden decision to take over Denmark was the recent wave of sabotage imperilling production and communication.

Possible cause for the move was Hitler's desire to seal off the most direct route to Berlin from the North sea.

One Dead

Tough, wily King Boris of Bulgaria died with his boots off. At 49, the Balkan monarch reportedly succumbed of heart trouble in his royal suite, after three brazen attempts on his life during his 25-year reign. Once, a bomb missed him; another time, a bullet grazed his mustache but killed his chauffeur, and then two days after that, an explosion rocked the cathedral in which the king was worshipping, killing 125 and injuring 200.

King Boris

As an ally of Germany in the present war, Boris had played his cards shrewdly. Through Hitler's graces, Bulgaria had taken over parts of western and northern Greece, and chunks of Jugoslavia and Rumania.

Upon Boris' death, his six-year-old son, Simeon, was proclaimed king and a group organized to govern for him.

RUSSIA:

Still Rolling

One hundred and eighty miles to their rear the lazy Dnieper river wound, and to its banks German troops were prepared to fall back for a last ditch defense against the rolling attack of the Russians.

Having pushed forward north of the Azov seaport of Taganrog, the Russians threatened Nazi troops entrenched in the area. Facing encirclement from the rear, the Germans picked up their stakes and pulled out of the district, even as horse-mounted Cossack cavalry and mechanized units were knifing from the northwestward.

On the Kharkov front, Russian troops bore down on the Germans' last main railroad line running through the northern Donetz basin. [illegible] the Reds plowed [illegible]ins.

GENERALS:

Marshall Stays

GENERALS: Gen. George C. Marshall will continue as chief of staff of the U. S. army, although his four-year term has expired, President Roosevelt announced. General Marshall is first chief of staff to be granted an extension during war time, and the second in history, the first being General MacArthur, whose term was prolonged, now commanding in the South Pacific, in 1933.

PRODUCTION:

Up in U. S.

Backing up its fighting men on the world's fronts, America's production army gave the wheel an extra nudge with its shoulder to show an increase in output for July.

As the "arsenal of democracy," America's production of war materials for July was almost five times as great as November, 1941. But while production in ships, artillery, motor vehicles and food and clothing, etc., has apparently reached its peak, output of airplanes, army ammunition and signal equipment must be speeded up to meet 1943 goals.

U. S. artillery production steady

According to War Production Board Chairman Donald Nelson, airplane manufacture has failed to reach its highest level because of changes in design and labor shortages. In aluminum and magnesium, production problems have been overcome, Nelson said, and efforts are being made to discover additional uses for magnesium.

Britain Keeps Pace

Keeping step with its Big Brother Sam, Great Britain increased munitions output in the second quarter of 1943 by 25 per cent over that for the same period last year.

Although change in designs of British aircraft resulted in temporary slowdowns, production of planes by weight rose 44 per cent in 1943 over last year. Further expansion of the industry in the next 12 months is planned.

British Spitfire output up

At the start of the year, Great Britain overhauled its entire war production program, concentrating on munitions figured most destructive to the enemy. Because of the readjustment, 75,000 workers were shifted to other industries. But the availability of additional material and help because of the cuts in other lines, enabled the more important industries to increase total output.

HOME FRONT:

Butter Assured

To assure civilians of a steady flow of butter, the War Food administration announced it would cut its government purchases by 10 per cent in September and cancel them altogether in October.

Under the WFA program, civilians have been allotted 80 per cent of the estimated butter supply for the fiscal year ending next June 30. In order to obtain its 20 per cent of the total without seriously disrupting civilian stocks, the WFA buys heavily during periods of high production, then lowers its sights with seasonal drops.

Hits Rent Fixing

Stating that the OPA's action in designating the entire United States as a defense area in order to establish rent ceilings was never intended by congress or empowered by the Constitution, Federal Judge Bascom S. Deaver of Georgia declared the rental provisions of the price control act of 1942 unconstitutional.

In announcing his decision, Judge Deaver remarked that various government bureaus were seeking to impose rule of regulation in place of one of law, in contradiction of the principles of the Constitution. Although the judge said rent control was desirable in time of war, he argued the right of fixing prices was a duty of congress.

POPULATION:

States Show Loss

Seven midwestern states have lost 8 per cent of their population up to May of this year, through migration to war factory centers and enlistment in the armed services, the National Industrial Conference board reports. For the nation as a whole, the net loss to the civilian population, resulting from growth of the army and navy, has been 2.4 per cent from April, 1940, to May, 1943, it was said.

Super-Gas

For years, triptane has stood on the shelves of laboratories. Known as the most powerful hydrocarbon for use in internal combustion engines, it could only be produced through a classical method costing from $40 to $3,000 per gallon.

Dr. Gustav Egloff

But working in conjunction with a staff headed by Dr. Gustav Egloff, an old officer of the Russian imperial army, Vladimir Ipatieff, and his 28-year-old pupil, Vladimir Haensel, have discovered a method for producing triptane at less than $1 a gallon.

According to Dr. Egloff, the new gasoline will increase the speed and range of American war planes 25 per cent, and boost their climbing power 20 per cent. Such performance would give the U. S. planes equal maneuverability with Jap Zeros, without sacrificing their heavier armor and gun placement.

PACIFIC:

Closer and Closer

The great factor of air power loomed larger in the Pacific battle zone, with Japanese strongholds in the southwest reeling under concentrated U. S. bombing, and heavy raids predicted on the enemy's homeland from bases acquired in the Aleutian islands.

With Allied and Japanese soldiers locked in close jungle fighting before Salamaua, New Guinea, American bombers roared 350 miles northward to hammer the enemy's air base at Weewak. Since August 17, more than 300 Japanese planes have been destroyed there, thus giving the Allies' front line soldiers relief from air attack and assuring the maximum operation of their supply lines.

Returning from a visit to the Aleutians, Lieut. Gen. John L. DeWitt of the western defense command, said that U. S. planes were closer to Japan now than Maj. Gen. James Doolittle and his fliers were when they took off from the Flat-top Hornet. General DeWitt envisioned heavy bombing flights from Aleutian bases over the enemy's homeland, with the planes flying onward to come down on Chinese airdromes.

PRICE CONTROL:

Over the Border

During the 3½ years in which Canada has been in the war, the country's cost of living has increased 17 per cent, in comparison with 26 per cent in the U. S. and 28 per cent in Great Britain.

Up to March 31, 63 per cent of Canada's war expenditure was paid off with taxes. Borrowings from banks amounted to 16 per cent. The rest of the money to pay for the war was raised through the sale of securities to the public.

By December, 1941, the wholesale price of farm products rose 28 per cent, while retail food costs jumped 25 per cent. To check a further rise, subsidies were paid producers, resulting in the maintenance of milk, butter and cheese output.

MINERS:

No Extra Pay

Because the miners are not entitled to pay for underground travel time under the fair labor standards act until the work week exceeds 40 hours, the War Labor board rejected their plea for such pay at $1.25 daily. The miners now work 35 hours.

William H. Davis

In the majority opinion written by Chairman William H. Davis, the WLB said that the United Mine Workers had failed to show why such underground travel pay should be granted in the face of the law, and so it concluded that the miners' request was an outright wage increase in violation of the stabilization policy.

Following the WLB's action, the UMW filed suit in the federal court at Birmingham for 2 hours daily underground travel time pay. They also asked five years such back pay.

Given Probation

In the first verdict under the Smith-Connally anti-strike law, 27 miners, charged with striking at government operated pits, were given suspended sentences of six months and put on three years procation.

WACS:

Recruiting Lags

Enlistments in the WAC (Women's Army corps) have been declining, statistics reveal. Only 3,005 women joined in June, 2,415 in July, and 1,720 in the first three weeks of August. Also, a large percentage of the 65,000 members of the WAAC, (Women's Auxiliary Army corps) are choosing to withdraw from service rather than to be sworn into the Women's Army corps.

LT. BURGESS MEREDITH certainly didn't expect, when he went overseas, that he'd find himself in a Midlands market town in England that has no cinema, no railroad station, and only two streets, during part of his spare time. But there he was; if you heard "Transatlantic Call," the British Broadcasting corporation-CBS program, you heard him, introducing local inhabitants who told the story of how the war has changed their town. Its contribution to the war is so vast tnat its name can't be mentioned. Incidentally, we hear that Meredith, Clark Gable and James Stewart may get leaves in order to make army pictures.

Jean Pierre Aumont's been having name trouble. After his first American picture, "Assignment in Brittany," was released, he got so many fan letters asking how to pronounce his first name that it was decided to drop it. Then along came more letters saying that the writers liked the triple name—so it's as Jean Pierre Aumont that he'll be listed in "The Cross of Lorraine."

Robert Walker, the sensational sailor in "Bataan" who was so good in that picture that he was cast for the second male lead in "Madame Curie" even before "Bataan" was finished, nearly missed his big chance. In his first test for the "Bataan" role, he played the sailor as a man of 24. Director Tay Garnett had a heart; instead of tossing out the test he explained to Bob that the sailor was a lad in his 'teens. Another test was shot, he got the part, and before "Madame Curie" was finished he had the lead in "See Here, Private Hargrove."

Robert Benchley's given up air travel for the duration. "I'm tired of sleeping in airports," says he. Recently he had to rush from New York to Hollywood for RKO's "The Sky's the Limit." In Kansas City they gave his seat to a ferry pilot. Five hours later he got another plane; in Dallas he was put off; reason, another ferry pilot. He spent six hours there; sat out another five in Tucson.

Walt Disney and Major Alexander Seversky are making a special broadcast for British Broadcasting company's Home Service in England on September 20. Rehearsing for it at the New York studios, Disney explained that Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and the other pet Disney characters can't just be funny any more; they must work to help win the war.

NEW EFFECTIVE HAY FEVER RELIEF

Hay fever, which annually causes more sneezes, more inflamed noses and more red, streaming eyes than any other scourge, may have its final big fling this September, all because a Pennsylvania electrical engineer was served a dish of corn meal mush which was entirely too salty.

The engineer, sneezing, and with all other hay fever manifestations, stopped at a hotel where he was served a dish of mush which he considered sending back as it was much too salty. Finally he ate it, however; the hay fever attack lessened, ultimately ceased. Next day he had three meals, all oversalted, and experienced his most comfortable time in years in the "hay fever season."

His analytical mind quickly grasped the possibility that the saline substance in his food was responsible for his relief.

About this time, Dr. E. E. Selleck, a graduate of Columbia University, met the engineer, made notes, and when he returned to his home, began experiments. Today Dr. Selleck declares he has found a certain means of relief for hay fever and is supported in his contention by other medical experts, and a nationally known chemical manufacturing concern, the Hollings-Smith Company, at Orangeburg, New York, has taken over making the remedy, which is called Nakamo Bell.

Describing the experiments, Dr. Selleck said, "After I was sure I had found a means of quickly relieving hay fever through the chloride group, I tested it in the most practical way I knew. I held a three day clinic, to which many hay fever sufferers responded, from ages ranging from 10 to 60 years. Each person was given two tablets with a little water. Some relief came to all within ten minutes. Reports on these cases during the ensuing weeks showed practically a complete cessation of symptoms."—Adv.

Walkover Races

Since 1910, American turf fans have witnessed 18 walkovers, or races in which all but one of the entered horses failed to appear. As such a situation does not cancel a stake race, the single starter runs around the course alone, is named the winner and awarded the purse.

Here are typical reports from farmers who inoculate legumes with NITRAGIN:

"My Austrian peas inoculated with NITRAGIN were a good stand, grew fast and made a good yield. The uninoculated side of the field made poor growth and was yellow all season."

"I always inoculate vetch, clovers and peas with NITRAGIN. It is mighty cheap crop insurance."

"My neighbor tells me it made the difference of no crop and a successful crop."

"I increased peanut yields 10 bushels per acre."

It costs only about 15c an acre and takes only a few minutes to inoculate legume seed with NITRAGIN—the oldest, most widely used inoculant for all legumes. Get it from your seed supplier, just ask for NITRAGIN.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Experience shows that tire failures during the four hot months from June to September average 20 per cent higher than during the rest of the year.

Rubber sheeting should be washed with soap and warm water, thoroughly rinsed and then cleaned with a 5 per cent solution of cresol, to get the longest service out of the rubber. Roll, don't fold, when not in service.

The granddad of the present-day raincoat, the Macintosh, was patented in England in 1823 by Charles Macintosh, of Glasgow, Scotland.

re told that since the black- e come to Germany that there n a great increase in the of bottled beer. Those beer can no longer find the lights, where they can drink asses and now they are sitting ark and drinking from bottles served that the drinking of so much beer from bottles is causing many blackouts in sobriety and decency. It matters not whether a drinker of beer be in Germany, England or America, if he hugs to the bottle soon there is a blackout in the brain of the drinker. The medical profession is affirming today that one bottle of beer goes that far in making the drinker a dangerious man on the highway. It occurs often here in America that a man drinks one bottle of beer and then attempts to drive his car. His vision is tampered with by the alcahol and he sideswipes another car and an innocent travelor has a blackout forever. Over the graves of thousands of murdered people there should be placed this sign: 'Killed by bottldd beer.'

During the Christmas holidays I saw a man with a monkey doing a landslide business on the side walk in front of the Sears Roebuck building in Houston, Texas. The man held a chain in his hand and on the other end the little monkey was linked. The little trick walked along, cutting all kinds of antics, and collecting nickels and pennies in large quantities. I observed that the monkey constantly watched his master and that he was guided by the man with the organ. There seemed to be a perfect understanding between the man and his monkey. To me that chained monkey gave a perfect picture of some folks I know. They are chained by bad habits to the devil, and all they are doing is carrying out the instructions of their master. Together they are doing a landslide busines.

One morning a dirty bum was passing our new home. His face was smoked black and the filthy rags that hung about his unkept body showed signs of his low way of living. This unktpt man stopped on the side walk and watched us as we worked among the flowers. It was a lovely day. The sun was shining, the birds were singing and the flowers were beautiful in deed. He said to himself, 'what a beautiful yard. The house is so white and clean and everything looks so bright.' Then he remarked to us, 'You have such a beautiful place. I love pretty things.' Then as he walked away he remarked to himself, 'To have beautiful things a fellow must work, and to keep them beautiful, a fellow must keep working.' What a pity that the old man did not practice what he knew. Remember folks that it takes work to make a beautiful yard and it takes work to keep it beautiful.

Our yard is not far from the distribution door of the supplies furnished by the government to the needy of the county. Those people come in great droves and carry these supplies away in large bundles. You would be surprised to know the condition of the ground and the yards near by. after one of those days of distribution. Those who receivo free supplies litter up the grounds with papers, boxes and fruit pelings. No one with pride appreciates his premises being littered up, and no one who has pride will do such things, but that is not all of the sad story of human life, Many people go to God for daily bread and receive bounterfully from His hand and yet they do not have the gratitude to keep themselves clean in heart, and they do not keep themselves from littring up the world about them. Sharper than a serpent's tooth is an ungrateful child.'

Pictured above are members of the Wayne County 4-H Club Chick Project, sponsored by the Wayne County Farm Bureau, of Waynesboro, Tenn. This patriotic project enabled 150 boys and girls to obtain 50 chicks and 100 pounds of starting mash each, to produce more eggs and poultry for America's "Food for Freedom" program.

4-H Club Boys and Girls Are Increasing Egg Production

To help Uncle Sam in his "Food for Freedom" program by increasing egg production and raising poultry for table use, a novel plan—easily adapted to any community—is being sponsored by the Wayne County Farm Bureau, of Waynesboro, Tenn.

This plan is called the Wayne County 4-H Club Chick Project, and consists of an arrangement whereby 150 members of the Wayne County 4-H Club obtained 50 baby chicks each, and 100 pounds of starting mash, on condition that each boy and girl would return 12 roosters weighing a total of 50 pounds to the Farm Bureau at the end of 172 days.

The sponsoring organization then will sell the roosters to pay for the baby chicks and feed.

If for any reason a boy or girl should not return these roosters to the Farm Bureau at the designated time, he or she (or the parent or guardian) would be liable for a cash payment of $9.00. But encouragement was given for payment in roosters instead of cash.

This patriotic activity was agreed upon by directors of the Wayne County Farm Bureau last January. Funds were borrowed from a bank to purchase 7,500 baby chicks and 150 bags of starting mash. Applications were received from hundreds of Wayne County 4-H boys and girls, and 150 entrants selected.

All members of the Wayne County 4-H Club Chick Project met at a designated place to receive their baby chicks and feed, and had their pictures taken.

Each boy and girl—and one parent or guardian—signed the following agreement:

"I, ______________, have enrolled in 4-H Poultry Club work for 1943 and hereby make application to the Wayne County Farm Bureau Committee for 50 Barred Rock chicks and 100 pounds of chick starter.

"I agree to follow to the best of my ability the instructions of the County Extension Agents in brooding, feeding, sanitation and general management of the chicks.

"On the date of the County 4-H Rooster Sale, I will deliver to the Wayne County Farm Bureau at Waynesboro at least 12 cockerels from the 50 chicks I received. If the cockerels do not bring $9.00, to pay for the chicks and feed I received, I agree to pay the difference in cash on the date of the sale. I understand that if the cockerels bring more than $9.00, the difference is to be paid to me.

"In order to help supply the increasing demand for poultry, meat and eggs, I will raise as many cockerels as possible to rooster weight (4 to 6 pounds) and sell them in the County 4-H Club rooster sale. I also agree to grow the pullets as rapidly as possible, and to get them to produce as many eggs as I can during the Fall."

Anyone interested in receiving more detailed information regarding this project has been invited to communicate with County Agent C. E. Lance, Waynesboro, Tenn.

1943 LEGISLATURE FAVORS WELFARE DEPT. IN AID TO NEEDY

Montgomery, Ala. — The State Department of Public Welfare will be able to reach more needy people, and better serve those already on the rolls, as a result of action by the 1943 legislature, according to Miss Loula Dunn, Commissioner of Public Welfare. The recent legislative session boosted the overall public welfare budget by $3,000.00 per annum, from the present $5,000.00 to approximately $8,000.00, one-half the increase being in the State and local funds, the other half Federal money to match these funds. The legislature also liberalized eligibility requirements for old age assistance, aid to dependent children and to the blind.

New legislation, which increased State and local old age assistance funds by $1,300.00, to be matched with Federal aid, will make it possible to increase old age assistance grants from the present $10.58 average per month 'to a State-wide average of $15, Miss Dunn said, while the present waiting list of more than 2,600 can now be added to the rolls. "All those known to be eligible can thus receive aid, while others will become eligible through liberalization of requirements," Miss Dunn pointed out.

Grants to other needy groups, dependent children, blind and handicapped persons can be increased up to the average paid by other Southern States, while those not now receiving aid but eligible can now be aided. The legislature also by specific act increased pensions of Confederate veterans from $65 to $100 a month and widows of veterans from $30 to $40.

The total number of families now being assisted by the department is 29,895. Included are: 22,153 aged family units averaging a little less than two persons per unit; 4,618 families with 12,781 dependent children; 2,477 family units of handicapped persons and families requiring temporary emergency aid and 647 of the blind averaging a little more than two persons per unit. Addition of those now on the waiting list will increase the total by about 4,000 family units.

The 1943 legislature gave the counties an additional $650,000 of sales tax money, to be divided on a basis of population 65 years of age and over, with counties required to continue existing welfare appropriations in order to share in the $650,000. The State will match this with a like additional amount appropriated to the Department of Public Welfare, making $1,300,000, to be increased to $2,600,000 when matched with Federal funds. In addition, one-third of the increased share of liquor money allotted to cities is earmarked for public welfare, expected to approximato $100,000 to be increased to $400.00 when matched first with State and then with Federal aid, making a total overall increase around $3,000,000.

Most of the new money does not become available until October 1, and benefits will not be materially [illegible] til then, however changes in eligibility requirements are already in effect and newly eligible persons will be assisted as rapidly as fu[illegible] Miss Dunn said.

No More Brass

On land or at sea our fighting men do their many chores by the sound of a bugle. All sorts of uncomplimentary epithets are used to designate the bugler, but nobody has yet been able to provide a satisfactory substitute for a bugle although recordings are used at some permanent bases.

Aboard ship the men fall in at the order of "Pipe muster." On land the bugler sounds "Assembly!" But no matter where the bugle is used thousands must be bought out of the money we are investing in War Bonds. Back the attack with an extra $100 Bond in the 3rd War Loan.

LOYALTY

ON your vacation and business trips in the past—as well as at your neighborhood Service Station—you have been served often by loyal men in the Standard Oil uniform. They were loyal to you—they were loyal to us.

It was only natural that men in whom the quality of loyalty was inbred and cherished should respond in large numbers to the call of their country. Hundreds of these stanch and faithful men have exchanged their old Service uniforms for the new uniform of greater service to Uncle Sam.

Someday they will be coming back, their new job finished. You will find them still loyal to you when they return and change their uniforms again.

In the meantime, other loyal men, who have been at their home posts, are upholding this service tradition under difficult and sometimes trying conditions.

Loyalty is that personal trait in individuals which makes a Company great—and wins wars.

See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former feature editor of a North Carolina newspaper, has been inducted into the army and is receiving his basic training at Fort Bragg. He has been classified as a cook and this coupled with his frequent assignment to KP have made him quite familiar with the Company kitchen. He has also learned a lot about the finer points of "goldbricking" and of other favorite soldier pastimes. He has learned all of the popular army slang expressions. He has become well acquainted with a number of other rookies—as the first training period draws toward its close this gang starts to break up. Hargrove himself is just starting his first ten-day furlough.

CHAPTER XI

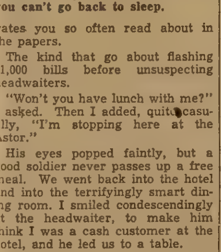
It's enough to drive a man to drink. You get a ten-day furlough and head for New York. You mooch a due bill on an ultra-swank hotel. You say to yourself that for those ten days you will be an all-out civilian, you will squander your substance in rioutous living, you will forget altogether the fact that you are a soldier. And then what happens?

You wake up at six o'clock, no matter how late you stay out the night before. Then you can't go back to sleep. You have to buy enormous quantities of civilian food to keep up with your Army appetite. You look in shop windows and see books you'd give your wisdom teeth for, but you think of your purse in terms of $36 a month and the inner man convinces you that you can't afford them.

You'd like very much to put on your civilian clothes, just for a change, but your friends think you look so pretty in your uniform that they won't let you pull the old blue serge out of mothballs.

It isn't bad all the way through, though.

For instance, I walked out of the hotel the other day and ran into one of the boys from my own barracks, in New York on a three-day pass. We exchanged the prescribed comments on the smallness of the world and I saw a sparkling opportunity to spread a thick layer of hokum. I could make the lad think I was one of these filthy-rich privates you so often read about in the papers.



You wake up at 6 o'clock no matter how late you went to bed. Then you can't go back to sleep.

The kind that go about flashing $1,000 bills before unsuspecting headwaiters.

"Won't you have lunch with me?" I asked. Then I added, quite casually, "I'm stopping here at the Astor."

His eyes popped faintly, but a good soldier never passes up a free meal. We went back into the hotel and into the terrifyingly smart dining room. I smiled condescendingly at the headwaiter, to make him think I was a cash customer at the hotel, and he led us to a table.

"I'm afraid you'll find the food here depressingly 'dull,' I told my comrade-in-arms. "No ortolans or hummingbird tongues. They seem to go in for plain but wholesome foods. Won't you try the breast of guinea hen, with a sip of Onion Soup Reine?"

"I don't care if I do," he said. "I ain't particularly particular about what I eat."

"My nerves are all shot," I remarked airily. "New York tires me dreadfully. I have to run about nolens volens—that's Latin for willy-nilly—from one night club to another, brushing up on old friendships. And I'm getting so tired of shows and cocktail parties! Won't you have a slug of hootch with me? I've got to have one."

He gulped nervously and replied that he didn't care if he did. I noticed with satisfaction that he was taking in all the propaganda about night clubs, shows, and cocktail parties.

"I'm a man of simple tastes myself," I said, lifting both eyebrows to give my face that bored expression. "I can't stand these silly mixed drinks. I like my liquor straight. I'm partial to Scotch."

"I'm a rye man myself," he said. The waiter, who had been standing by with a growingly disgusted face, shrugged his shoulders and fetched two tiny flagons of the Old Enemy.

His face sank a little at the sight, but I manged to keep up a sophisticated front. I took a sip of soda and lifted the glass. "Well, here's looking at you and going down me."

"Corn on the corn," he said, wincing at the toast. I downed the yellow poison and so did he. I bungled the job, though, and had to use two gulps. Ooooh! I shuddered violently, but he didn't see. He had turned his face and was coughing with real fervor.

We managed to get through the meal all right, weakened though we were by the firewater. I continued to impress him. The only obstacle I hit was his reminder that I would be spending Thanksgiving on kitchen police.

We parted when I told him I couldn't get out of a reception I had to attend at 2:30. I had sufficiently impressed him and, with the aid of Providence, I might be able to borrow money from him occasionally back at Fort Bragg.

The meal cost me nothing, but the fifty-cent tip was staggering. If worst should come to worst, I could always hock my watch. If I had a watch.

Thanksgiving Day—with all its roast Vermont turkey, its pies and fruits, its candies, and free cigarettes—was just another day to me. Phooey to it.

Our mess sergeant, one Orville D. Pope, was disgustingly cheerful when he awoke me in the morning.

"Please go away," I said. "Just go away and let me gently curse."

"Oh, Private Hargrove," he crowed, "we have so much to be thankful for. So very, very much! We have food, and warmth, and freedom!"

"Food, we've got," I growled. "Including potatoes, with peelings to peel. This is my 678th potato this morning. I don't need coal for warmth when I'm bathing myself in sweat. And freedom? See, I am laughing bitterly! It is Thanksgiving Day and I am peeling potatoes and washing dishes for the orgy. Phooey to Thanksgiving!"

Sollie Buchman, the cook, who was a student with me in Battery A, strode up humming that maudlin old grammar-school song about "over the river and through the woods, to grandfather's house we go."

"It is a glorious day," drooled Private Buchman. "It does my old heart good to think of the expression on those boys' faces when they see that Thanksgiving dinner."

"Repress yourself, Pappy," I asked him. "It is not to think of the dinner. I am thinking of the sinks overflowing with dirty dishes left by those gluttonous hogs. It was not enough that we had trays to wash. Now we have to have improvements. Now we have to have china plates. And cups. And soup bowls. And silverware. I hate progress!"

"Better leave the lad alone, Pappy," sighed Sergeant Pope. "He is pouting and will not enter into the spirit of the day. He has done wrong and is paying for it now."

Private Buchman and the mess sergeant busied themselves at the ovens. I sat there ferociously jabbing at potatoes and muttering wildly. Three times I scowled at the sergeant, but he wasn't looking.

Maury Sher, my bosom companion from the cooks' battery, came racing in through the back door. Maury was slated to be transferred to a cook's job at Madison Barracks, New York, and would be leaving the following day.

"If you have come to extend the season's greetings, comrade," I told him wearily, "kindly do not trouble yourself. To paraphrase Dickens, any fool who goes about with 'Happy Thanksgiving' on his lips should be boiled in his own slumgullion and buried with a GI breadstick in his heart. Do not attempt to cheer me."

"I'm not going to Madison Barracks," he shouted. "I'm staying here. Right here in the Replacement Center! I'm going to be a mess sergeant in the antitank battery. A mess sergeant!"

I was dawdling over a huge chocolate nut sundae the other night at the Service Club cafeteria when Johnny Lisk walked in with someone who was a dead ringer for Simmons Jones of the Charlotte News staff. Anyone who is a dead ringer for Simmons Jones can't be anybody but Simmons Jones, I decided, so I gave the low whistle. The two saw me and came over.

It was Simmons, all right. He looked as if the two things he needed most at the moment were a haircut and a kind word of sympathy. He had the look of utter futility known only to those who have been in the Army for less than ten days.

"Well, boy," I asked him, "how do you like the Army? And you don't need to lie about it."

"I don't think I'll ever get used to it," he said. "I've been pushed and crowded and yelled at for a week now, and it doesn't get any better. Maybe I was just born to be a civilian."

"You should have seen Johnny and me when we got in," I told him. "That's been only four months ago, and here we are being condescending and fatherly already. Them were the days, weren't they, Johnny?"

Lisk sighed deeply. "Simmons don't know the trouble at all," he said. "When Hargrove and I had been in three or four days, they slapped us on KP and almost killed us first thing. Then, the next day, they put the two of us to cleaning and painting GI cans until past supper time."

Simmons knocked on wood. "Well, they must have forgotten me. I've been in the Army a week already and I haven't been on KP yet."

"You will, brother," said Johnny. "You will."

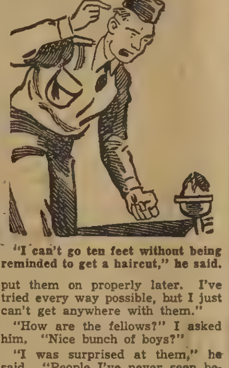
"Hargrove," said Simmons, "will you please stop looking at my hair? I can't go ten feet without being reminded to get a haircut. As soon as I can find a minute, I'll get it cut."

"Are you really having a hard time of it?" I asked him.

"Well, after that talk I got from you before I was inducted, I thought I would be going through hell for the first three weeks. The way you talked was terrifying, to say the least. So I prepared myself for a much rougher time than I'm really getting.

"The drilling isn't bad at all. I suppose my dancing has helped me there. Anyway, I even surprise myself at it.

"But the getting up and dressing in ten minutes! I'll never be able to do it. Everything is all right until it comes to the leggins. I struggle with those things until I'm limp, and I never do get them on in time. Yesterday I just tied them on for reveille and sneaked back and put them on properly later. I've tried every way possible, but I just can't get anywhere with them."



"I can't go ten feet without being reminded to get a haircut," he said.

"How are the fellows?" I asked him. "Nice bunch of boys?"

"I was surprised at them," he said. "People I've never seen before, and they all go out of their way to help each other. When we were first inducted, there were a lot of fellows I'd seen possibly once or twice before in my life and we all acted as if we'd known each other since we were babies."

"Then, too, I've already run across some of the boys I know. Johnny here is attached to our battery for rations and quarters, and so is Buster Charnley. They do as much as they can to show me the ropes and help me along during this awkward period."

Reading through the camp newspaper the other day, I noticed stories written by Pvt. T. Mulvehill, Private Thos. Mulvehille, Pfc. Tom Mulvehill, Thomas Mulvehill (pfc.) and various other authors whose names bore startling resemblance to Thomas Mulvehill, Pvt. or Pfc.

The collection of literary and journalistic contributions to the Fort Bragg Post were all marked by the same flair for rhetoric, the true gift of gab, and a certain rich and gorgeous sentimentality. In the midst of a factual story about a group of college girl choristers coming to Fort Bragg for a concert, the steady journalistic strain would suddenly burst into brilliant and majestic phrases such as "The Blankth Battalion recreation hall will burst into golden sound next Tuesday night when the angelic voices of thirty lovely Zilch College young ladies present a recital . . ." or "the General's little eight-year-old son, awed by the solemnity of the occasion, clung to his daddy's hand throughout the impressive ceremonies."

This is what is known as the Mulvehill Touch.

The Mulvehill Touch is supplied at Fort Bragg by the Public Relations Office's irrepressible and inimitable whirling dervish, Black Tom Mulvehill, a fantastic and unbelievable Irish tyro, who came from New York City by way of Salt Lake City, Utah. Mulvehill of the great head and the shaggy locks, Mulvehill of the lumbering walk, the man of a thousand faces and a thousand voices—Mulvehill is the Public Relations Office's one spark of true glamour, our hope of immortality.

Mulvehill is everywhere at all times. Out of every hundred photographs taken at Fort Bragg—official or personal, professional or amateur—it is safe to say that the flexible face of Private Mulvehill will beam out at you from ninety-five of them. Photographers have no idea of how he gets into the pictures, but a picture of any "Rec" hall in the Center will show Mulvehill playing ping-pong. (He's the one nearest the camera.)

Mulvehill's next greatest talent is his ability to create wildness and confusion at will. His desk drawers bulge and spill great quantities of unrelated papers, old notes, newspaper clippings, and weird personal effects. His working schedule and methods are chaotic and unfathomable. He can write six stories at once, using every needed typewriter in the building.

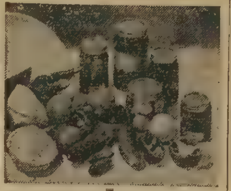
HOUSEHOLD MEMOS
by Lynn Chambers



Fruit pickles take less time to prepare, vegetable pickles may take several days or even weeks, but both contribute to brightening winter menus.

Pickling Time

Summer has slipped by and with it has passed the time of putting up fruits and vegetables. But canning is not yet over, for fall brings with it many fruits and vegetables which homemakers like to use for pickling and preserving.

Pickles may be of either the fruit or vegetable variety for there are a great many varieties of pickles. Fruit pickles can be made in a short time, but those made from vegetables require a longer time—sometimes as long as several weeks.

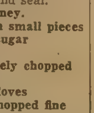
The best cucumber pickles take several weeks in order to complete the pickling process and make them crisp in texture, dark green in color. Sugar is introduced gradually to the cucumber after it has had a preliminary treatment in brine or vinegar.

Crisp Pickles.

How does one get crisp pickles is the question most frequently asked in pickling. Select fresh, ripe rather than over-ripe vegetables and fruits for pickling. Over-mature and stale vegetables will shrivel during the pickling process.

Old spices and low grade vinegar are other causes of pickle failure. It's important to use vinegar which has a strength of 40-60. Cider vinegar is usually preferred because of its mellow flavor. As a rule onions and cauliflower, which are light, require a white vinegar to make a light-colored pickle. Both types of vinegars serve to modify the taste of the product and also to preserve it.

Salt for Pickling.



Good quality salt is indicated for good pickles. Table salt or dairy salt (used for butter making) are good, but salt to which a lot of chemical has been added to prevent it from caking is not recommended. Chemicals may interfere with the pickling process.

Equipment.

Pickles may be cured in large stone crocks, if desired. They are usually stored in glass jars with caps, of the same type that are used for canning fruits and vegetables.

*Spiced Cantaloupe.

Peel rind and cut cantaloupe into 1-inch pieces. Soak overnight in vinegar. To each 7 pounds of fruit add 3 pounds of sugar, 8 sticks of cinnamon, and 1 tablespoon whole cloves. Cook about 1½ hours or until fruit becomes transparent. Place in sterile jars and seal.

*Apple Chutney.

2 quarts apples, cut in small pieces
2 pounds granulated sugar
2 cups seeded raisins
Rind of 2 oranges, finely chopped
½ cup strong vinegar
½ teaspoon ground cloves
1 cup pecan meats, chopped fine

Boil all ingredients together until apples and nuts are tender. Pour into sterile jars and seal at once.

*Green Tomato Pickle.

4 quarts green tomatoes
2 sweet red peppers
2 small onions
2 teaspoons ground cloves
2 teaspoons ground ginger
2 teaspoons ground allspice
1 tablespoon ground cinnamon
1 tablespoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon celery seed
1 quart vinegar
1 pound brown sugar
½ cup salt

Grind coarsely the tomatoes, onions, peppers. Put spices in a small bag and boil in the vinegar with salt and sugar, for 10 minutes. Add the ground vegetables and simmer for 1 hour. Remove spice bag. Pack into hot sterile jars and seal.

Lynn Says:

You Can Do It, Too! Readers write that they have hints to pass on to other readers, and I'm sure you'll like them for your own foods.

Careful seasonings make for good cooking—and that means first of all salt and pepper. Mixed poultry seasonings add accent to stuffings and stews. Bay leaf, thyme and sage are also good in stuffings and meats.

Spare the hand when using curry powder, but do use it in any meat or fish dish if you like the curry taste. It's especially good when you're using any of these foods with rice.

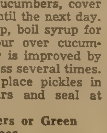
A pinch of nutmeg is indicated for spinach, for that occasional scalloped fish or oyster dish.

Clove and cinnamon blend well with smoked meats—use in cooking smoked ham or shoulder cuts.

At summer's end, you can look with pride on your canning shelf if you have been busy putting up fruits and vegetables, jams and jellies, pickles and relishes.

*Bread and Butter Pickles.

25 to 30 medium-sized cucumbers
8 large white onions
2 large sweet peppers
½ cup salt
5 cups cider vinegar
5 cups sugar
2 tablespoons mustard seed
1 teaspoon tumeric
½ teaspoon cloves



Wash cucumbers and slice as thin as possible. Chop onions and peppers and combine with cucumbers and salt. Let this stand 3 hours. Drain. Combine vinegar, sugar and spices in a large preserving kettle and bring to a boil. Add drained cucumbers. Heat thoroughly but do not boil. Pack while hot into jars and seal.

Ripe Cucumber Sweet Pickles.

8 large ripe cucumbers
⅛ pound stick cinnamon
1 ounce whole cloves
1½ pints vinegar
3 pounds sugar

Pare the cucumbers, take out seeds and cut in quarters. Cut quarters into medium-sized pieces. Scald in salted water (2 tablespoons salt to 1 quart water), then drain and simmer in clear water until tender. Tie spices in a bag and boil them with vinegar and sugar 5 minutes. Pour this mixture over cucumbers, cover jar and set away until the next day. Then, pour off syrup, boil syrup for 10 minutes and pour over cucumbers again. Flavor is improved by repeating this process several times. With last heating, place pickles in cleaned, sterile jars and seal at once.

Dilled Cucumbers or Green Tomatoes.

40 to 50 cucumbers, or green tomatoes
2 ounces mixed pickle spices
Fresh or dried dill
1 pint vinegar
1 pound salt
4 tablespoons sugar
2 gallons water

Use fresh-picked cucumbers or green tomatoes of uniform size and free from blemish. Wash them well and drain. Into a 5-gallon crock place a layer of dill and spice. Fill the jar with the cucumbers or tomatoes to within 4 or 5 inches of the top. Mix the vinegar, salt, sugar, and water, and pour over the vegetable. Place a layer of dill over the top. Cover with a heavy plate and weight it down to hold the vegetable under the brine. Use only enough brine barely to cover, for as the liquid is drawn from the vegetable the jar may overflow. Each day remove the scum that forms over the top and keep the pickles at even room temperature, about 70 degrees or as warm as 86 degrees Fahrenheit if possible. In about 2 weeks the pickles are ready to use—crisp, well-flavored with dill, and clear throughout with no white spots when cut.

For storage, pack the cured pickles in sterilized quart glass jars, and add ½ cup of vinegar to each. Fill up the jars with the pickle brine, but first strain it, bring it to a boil, and cool. Seal the jars and store in a cool, dry place.

SLAVE TO PURGATIVES FINDS FREEDOM!

Feels 20 Years Younger, He Says!

Everyone who has despaired of ever finding normal regularity should read this unsolicited letter:

"Six years ago, I was quite constipated. I'd taken many so-called 'cures', but it was the same old story. It seemed that each dose had to be stronger than the last. Then, I tried KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. Soon I was 'regular' again, with none of the old griping pain. I'm 60, but feel younger than 20 years ago when I was a victim of common constipation." Mr. A. Bousfield 426 S. Villa Avenue, Villa Park, Ill.

What's the secret of such reports of ALL-BRAN's wonderful results? It's simply this: Lack of certain cellulosic elements in the diet is a common cause of constipation. Scientists say KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is a rich, natural source of these elements—which help the colonic flora do their job—lightening and fluffing the accumulated waste for easy, natural evacuation. ALL-BRAN is not a purgative! Not roughage that acts by "sweeping you out"! It's a gentle-acting, "regulating" food! Eat ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if you, too, don't find the relief you've dreamed of! Insist on the genuine ALL-BRAN! It is made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

WAITING for a Voice From Home

Tankman, flier, doughboy—Pete and John and Bill—are waiting tonight to hear a certain voice on the wires. It's a voice that can put more spring in their stride, give them more determination to do their best until firing ceases. For Pete, John and Bill are waiting to hear—a voice from home.

When you're about to place a long distance call, won't you please remember these fellows who need a few minutes—before tomorrow's hard assignments—to talk to the homefolks? Won't you remember, too, that most of these men have to call in the evening, during that crowded period from 7 to 10? And because burdened lines can't be expanded now to meet all demands, won't you postpone your call until the less-busy hours?

When you avoid making long distance calls, or speak briefly if you talk, you're helping relieve the nation's war-crowded communications system. You're also helping bring "a voice from home" to the boys awaiting it. Pete, John and Bill will be grateful.

voting was not very heavy the week. Most of the campaign gers appear to be accumulating surplus vote they can for that nd fateful day. After all, that's when the votes are going to be tant, so in trying to determine ones will capture the prizes, be too strongly influenced by positions in the list of voting eek, they may be holding many in reserve of which the rest of eaders know nothing. Of one however, you may be very cer- every little darling remaining in st, has a splendid chance of lead- e parade when they march out the victory gate at the finish—it all depends on what success they have from now until the final day of the competition, which, by the way, is Saturday, October 2.

Concerning the paragraph above, the $9.00 club offer, in return for which we give the big bonus of 30.000 extra votes, provides the medium by which any of the little ones can be boosted into the driver's seat. This is the time to make your bid for victory. At the end of this club offer, which is next Wednesday evening, we will be entering the last and fateful period of the race. This is the last clubbing offer that will be made, and by the same token, your last opportunity to secure a bonus of 30,000 extra votes. So, you can readily see, this is the time to hit your best licks and grab all those extra votes you possibly can. If you beat any of the others this period, and make one more club than any of the little ones now remaining in the list. it will give your baby 30,000 more votes, and believe me, that will be a pretty comfortable thing to have as we enter the last period of the campaign.

There will be some sort of a bonus for the final period of the race, but don't hold your subscriptions thinking that the bonus will make your subscriptions worth more, in votes, than at any other time of the competition. Take our word for it, the last bonus will not be better than this one. and whisper—it might be less.

CAROLYN DeVAUGHN

EMMA JEAN VANCE

Did you ever see anything dearer or sweeter than these four lovely little babies who are in the junior class of our baby competitors. Although they are are only little babies as you can see, they are much more knowing than their tender years would indicate.

Davis Horace, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Judy, Mt Creek, Ala. Edith Faye Royster is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Royster, Stanton, Ala. Carolyn DeVaughn is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. DeVaughn, Clanton Route 3. Emma Jean Vance is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Vance, also of Route 3.

If you wouldn't roll up your sleeves and go to work for these precious little babies, then I don't know what else could possibly stimulate you. Fine work is being done for all of them and you may be sure there will be no let-down in their campaign during the balance of the race.

MOUNTAIN SPRINGS

The following services will be held at Mountain Springs Congregational Christian Church this week end:

10:00, Sunday—Sunday school, Superintendent, Mr. Amos Moates.

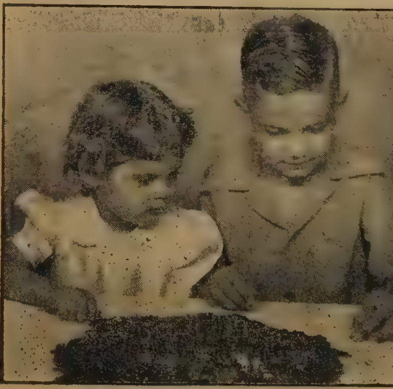
11:00—Church Service. Communion Service.

7:30—Church Service.

2:30, Tuesday — Women's meeting. Study of Ruth.

ARCHERS CHAPEL

There will be a Young People's meeting at the home of Mr. Frank Cook Saturday night at 7:30 p.m., with Minnie Lee Cook as leader.



MACKIE AND MARY ANN YEARGAN

Here is Mackie Yeargan, age 5, and his little sister, Mary Ann, age 3, counting their pennies to buy that War Bond with. They had exactly enough to buy a $25 Bond. The two little Patriotic Americans are getting as big a thrill out of saving for War Bonds as though they were saving for a new wagon or a new doll. They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Yeargan.

Reports Heard That Buying Slow, Importance Is Not Realized

LOYAL CITIZENS MUST ACT NOW

Reports from J. C. Pattillo, Chairman of the War Finance Committee, of Chilton County, are that the citizens of this County are not doing their bit in buying War Bonds to put us ovr the top in the present Fifteen Billion Dollar War Bond Drive.

However, Alabama Mills, Hill Grocery Company, V. J. Elmore Stores, are cooperating wonderfully, he stated, and are to be congratulated for their efforts. Alabama Mills alone has bought $25,000 worth of Bonds since the Drive started.

Here is a short message from Chairman Pattillo:

Dear People of Chilton County:

Somebody is failing to buy the war bond he or she should. Our County has made a poor showing so far. Six of the counties in the State have gone over their quota and are still going strong. Are you willing for our County to lag, and to lag means to fail? Would you still be proud of our County if we do fail to get our quota? What will our two thousand fighting men on the farflung battle fronts think of you and me when they learn that we failed them in this crucial hour?

Friends, this is war, war for our liberties, our freedom, for everything we hold dear. Will you let your money fail in its duty? Will you let it be called a slacker and a coward by our brave fighting men who are giving their money, their blood and some of them, their very lives? NO! NO! Never would you let that be said of us. Then do not wait. Do not hesitate, but rush to your bank or post office and say, 'Give me a War Bond," for the utmost dollar you can spare.

J. C. PATTILLO,

Executive Chairman, Chilton County War Finance Committee.

WILL YOU DEDICATE A BOND TO A SOLDIER?

Announcement was made from War Finance Headquarters Tuesday morning that with every Bond bought a dedication to a special soldier could be made and the soldier would be notified of the dedication by the County Chairman of the War Bond Drive.

Mr. J. C. Pattillo County Chairman, will personally write the soldier that the buyer has purchased the Bond in his honor.

No better way could the County Committee show the boys at the Front that the "home folks" are behind them. BUY YOUR BOND TODAY. Let your favorite soldier know that you are backing him to the limit.

ANTIOCH REVIVAL

My Sunday preaching schedule for the third Sunday is as follows: 9:30 a.m. at Antioch; 10:45 at Concord; and 11:45 at Pleasant Hill.

The revival begins with the Sunday morning 9:30 hour, and the Rev. A. C. Britt will be the guest preacher for the week. Every one is welcome.—Rev. Reese Farnell.

MINUTE MAIDS OF THORSBY DO FINE WORK

The Woman's Division of the War Finance Committee of Thorsby, under the direction of Mrs. C. F. Howard, did splendid work in the Third War Loan Drive. In their house to house canvass during the first week they almost reached the $2,000.00 mark, and to Thorsby is given the credit of being the FIRST place in the County, outside of Clanton to get in their report; there will be more later.

To Thorsby also is given the honor of having the First War Bond dedication to a service man. Mrs. Emma Johnson bought the bond and dedicated it to her son, 1st Sgt. Lewis W. Johnson, who is now serving his country with the United States Marine Corps.

Nice work Thorsby, and congratulations.

RED CROSS

The War Department has just informed us that all quotas of surgical dressings assigned through October will have to be completed and shipped before the end of the year. This means that approximately 80,000,000 dressings must be shipped monthly during September, October, November and December.

Eastern Area shipments are still far behind the other areas and we urge chapters to request shipping instructions for all finished dressings as soon as the required minimum number of cartons is completed.

Will you make plans immediately to finish and ship all dressings that have been assigned to your chapter up to November? We realize that the program has been retarded to a certain extent because of delay in receiving material, replacement of defective gauze, et cetera, but in spite of these handicaps, we know that we can count on your chapter to ship the finished dressings to the designated depots as promptly as you can.

An urgent plea is made to chapters to utilize all the gauze that can possibly be made up as it is difficult to get replacements from manufacturers and we have very little gauze in our storerooms.

We do not know what the requirements of the War Department will be in the future and as a consequence we are unable to give you any detail information at this time.

We wish to take this opportunity to express our appreciation of the splendid work being done by the Surgical Dressing Volunteers. Your response has always been so generous and wholehearted that we feel confident we shall live up to the responsibility we have assumed at the request of the War Department. — MRS. CORDELLA D. WOLF, Administrator Volunteer Special Services Eastern Area.

CHICKEN SUPPER AT STANTON

The Stanton school is making arrangements to feed a large number of people at its annual chicken supper on Friday night of this week. Large numbers of patrons, pupils and friends of the school turn out for this affair and provisions are under way to take care of them this year. Big chicken plates are to be served at the unbelievable low price of 50c.

Since this is the first social function of the school for this school year, a larger crowd than usual is expected. Besides helping the school financially, this affair affords a general "get together" enjoyed by everyone.

Be sure to come if your gas allowance will permit and bring someone with you. Tickets are being sold by high school girls. Get yours in advance. Tickets will be on sale at the supper.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Italy's Unconditional Surrender Marks Real 'Beginning of the End' for Axis; GOP Outlines Foreign Relations Plank; Red Army Retakes Ukraine Farm Lands

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

ITALY SURRENDERS:
One Down, Two to Go

Five days after British and Canadian troops stormed across the Messina straits to land on the Italian mainland, Italy surrendered unconditionally to Gen. Dwight Eisenhower.

When Marshal Pietro Badoglio's government gave up, it marked the first split in the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis. First indications of the Italian collapse came with the ouster of Benito Mussolini.

Left to hold Hitler's vaunted European fortress were German troops, themselves engaged in a major retreat in Russia, and the Nazis' smaller Balkan allies. While capitulation of Italy exposed central Europe to heavy bomber attack, the Alpine district presented a formidable obstacle to an Allied ground advance into southern Germany.

Hundreds of thousands of her troops killed or captured in North Africa; her elaborate railroad system torn to shreds; her fair cities smouldering in ruin, and lacking the natural resources to carry on war, Italy sought the easiest way out of the conflict.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:
Isolate Japs

Gen. George Blamey

Australian troops were hacking their way through jungle brush to the northwest of Lae, New Guinea, when a cloud of American planes appeared overhead. The next moment the sky was filled with tiny white puffs, marking out Allied paratroopers, floating to earth to assist in the encirclement of 20,000 Jap soldiers.

Previously, Australian units under Gen. George Blamey surprised the Japs by landing in force to the east of Lae. Moving quickly, they advanced on the big enemy base even while the Aussies and U. S. paratroopers were sealing off Lae to the northwest.

General MacArthur's trigger action not only cut off the Lae garrison from reinforcement from the north, but it also was designed to choke off stubborn Jap troops resisting an Allied advance before Salamaua, farther to the southeast.

HEALTH:
Holding Up Well

Civilians are maintaining a better level of health than federal authorities expected, despite food rationing, longer work hours, and fewer doctors and nurses available, the Office of War Information reports. While mortality and sickness rates are slightly higher, the statement comments that the rise is not more than could be anticipated, considering wartime strain.

The only serious epidemic condition is the increase in infantile paralysis (poliomyelitis) and spinal meningitis. More than 4,500 cases of infantile paralysis have been reported throughout the nation this year, the largest number since 1934. Spinal meningitis cases total 13,368, the greatest number since 1914, when records began.

2,000,000 OVERSEAS:
Marshall Reports

Gen. George Marshall

Of 7,000,000 men in the army July 1, 2,000,000 were overseas, Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. chief of staff, revealed in his biennial report to the nation.

Of the 7,000,000 men, General Marshall said, 521,000 are officers, with 1,065 generals. More than 2,000,000 men are serving in the air force.

Experience shows that six tons of shipping are necessary to transport a soldier and his accessories overseas, and his supply requires one ton a month, General Marshall said.

At the time the Japs attacked the Philippines, General Marshall stated, six troop ships and nine cargo vessels were enroute to the islands.

WACS

Most of the officers of the Women's Army Auxiliary corps (WAACS) have taken the oath in the new Women's Army corps (WACS) the war department announces. Of 5,977 WAAC officers, 5,656 have transferred to the new organization without change of rank. Of the 319 women who have not been given the oath, 41 may yet join, but their cases are pending. The others have dropped out for failure to meet physical requirements or other reasons it was said.

MANPOWER:
Control Coast Labor

James Byrnes

With 160,000 more persons required for shipyards and 100,000 for aircraft factories on the West coast, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes announced that the WMC received control of the supervision of labor in that area.

A copy of a program already developed in the Buffalo, N. Y., area, the WNC's West coast plan involves: 1. Determination of necessary production schedules in various factories; 2. Shift of labor to essential employment from less essential work or services; 3. Allotment of manpower to the more important industries in the area; 4. Distribution of farm help wherever most needed throughout the West coast.

Time to Switch

Along with adoption of the West coast plan, the WMC's selective service bureau sought to co-ordinate its draft program with industrial needs.

First, the bureau ordered that all non-deferrable workers seeking to switch to essential production be given 30 days, or till October 15, in which to find such employment through registration with the U. S. Employment service. The WMC previously ruled that essential occupation, and not dependency, be the basis for draft deferment.

Second, the bureau instructed local boards that before they induct any workers skilled in 149 critical occupations, they must submit the names of such men to the U. S. Employment service. The service will then determine whether these men are more urgently needed by another employer.

GOP:
Keep Sovereignty

Harrison Spangler

Co-operation in the preservation of peace without the loss of U. S. sovereignty constitutes the basis of the Republican party's post-war advisory committee's recommendation for future American foreign policy.

Meeting on historic Mackinac Island, Mich., under National Chairman Harrison Spangler, the GOP committee struck the theme for its 1944 plank on foreign affairs.

While declaring that "we must do our full share in a program for permanent peace among nations," the GOP committee members said, "we must preserve and protect all our own national interests." If any proposed international co-operation should conflict with our best interests, the committee said, "then the United States should adhere to the policy which will preserve its constitutionalism as expressed in the Declaration of Independence . . ."

For conquered countries, the committee recommended disarmament and destruction of war industries.

RUSSIA:
Regaining Wealth

Under the weight of massed Red attacks, German troops slowly fell back to the broad banks of the Dnieper river in southern Russia.

With many of the rich coal and iron deposits of the Donetz basin in Russian hands again, advancing Red armies also reclaimed much of the fertile farm land of the Ukraine, famed for its black earth and wheat and cotton fields. Slicing into the heart of this province, the Reds severed the Nazis' main rail connections to the north.

With the natural resources, Russian troops also recovered many former industrial cities, like Kharkov. But having been wracked by warfare and their manufacturing facilities demolished by the Germans, reconstruction will be necessary to restore them to production. In the north-central sector, Red troops pounded at the gateway into White Russia, adjacent to the former state of Poland.

MISCELLANY:

OCTANE GAS: High octane gasoline that will give motorists 50 to 70 miles to the gallon is predicted as a post-war development of the oil industries by William Carney, a research chemist for a large refining company. The new automobiles using this 90 to 95 octane gasoline will have smaller motors and lighter bodies, made of alloys or plastics, it is believed

U. S. TREASURY:
Seeks Billions

Rep. Robert Doughton

High finance has come to the forefront with the treasury's efforts to raise 100 billion dollars for war expenditures during the present fiscal year ending June 30.

Approximately 50 million bonds valued at 15 billion dollars are expected to be sold during the treasury's present bond selling campaign. All of the money will be sought from individuals and businesses, with banks offered a limited number of securities after the close of the public drive. However, the treasury has been obtaining 100 million dollars weekly through short term bill sales to banks.

With congress reconvened, Representative Robert Doughton's house ways and means committee was looking forward to consideration of new tax legislation to raise an additional 12 billion dollars requested by President Roosevelt. Present levies will yield 38 billions dollars.

RAIL WRECKS:
High Toll

Crowded with passengers returning to New York, the Pennsylvania railroad's mighty Congressional Limited streaked through the North Philadelphia station. On it whizzed to Frankfort Junction, Pa. Then, a burned journal on the seventh car of the 16-car train gave, throwing the coach high into the air.

Hurtling against a steel girder of a signal tower, the upper section of the coach was sheared right off. Careening wildly, the car behind smashed into the wrecked coach, and the rest of the train left the rails and plowed along the right of way. Fire broke out in some of the cars. More than 50 dead and 125 injured were removed from the wreckage.

Several hours later, the New York Central's Century Limited was roaring along near Canastota, N. Y., when its locomotive exploded, derailing nine of the 15 passenger cars. The first four cars lunged down an embankment; the others were strewn all over the tracks. Heavy, steel rails were plowed up and twisted into fantastic shapes. Three crewmen were killed; approximately seven passengers injured.

U. S.-BRITAIN:
Tongue Common Bond

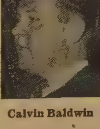
Speaking at Harvard university, Prime Minister Winston Churchill declared the United States and Great Britain must march together "in those realms of thought which are consecrated to the rights and dignity of man."

"It would be a most foolish and improvident act on the part of our two governments . . . to break up this smooth running and immensely powerful machinery the moment the war is over," Churchill added.

Commenting on studies being made by a special commission to construct a basic English language for use by all people, Churchill said such a common tongue offers far better opportunity for understanding between people than "taking away provinces and land or grinding them down in exploitation."

Stating that a common speech had drawn the United States and Great Britain close together in war, Churchill said that it may well prove the foundation for a common citizenship.

ECONOMIC DIRECTOR:
Appointed for Italy



Calvin Baldwin

Former assistant to Vice President Henry Wallace when he was secretary of agriculture, and more recently head of the Farm Security administration, 41-year-old Calvin B. Baldwin was named area director of economic operations in occupied Italy.

As area director, Baldwin will have the task of co-ordinating the various programs of supply and production instituted by the Allies' civil commissions in governing the captured territories. With Italy essentially an agricultural country, particularly in wheat and fruits, Baldwin's experience in farm administration undoubtedly determined his appointment.

Joining attacks on Baldwin's political philosophy, Senator Harry F. Byrd charged him with admitting to a joint committee on nonessential expenditure that FSA representatives had formulated a long-range plan of using the government's power of eminent domain for breaking up large land properties into smaller holdings.

JEFFERS

William M. Jeffers, director of the wartime rubber program, has resigned his office, stating that he believes that his main task is accomplished, and that he wishes to return to the railroad of which he is president.

About 30,000 tons of synthetic rubber will be turned out this month, in contrast to the 67,000 tons which is the goal of the program, Jeffers stated, explaining that difficulties have been encountered in expanding factory capacity.

WHILE making "Sahara" for Columbia, Bruce Bennett met a marine who'll have to be referred to merely as Joe, the marine. Joe was on leave after some tough Guadalcanal fighting, and due soon to return to the South Pacific. The actor told Joe about a Guatemalan machete he'd collected when he was making a Tarzan serial about ten years ago. "That's a little something I'd like to have," said Joe, so Bennett sent it to him. Last week a V-Mail note from Joe said: "My machete is the pride of the outfit. I spent two solid weeks sharpening it. And brother, I ain't out to cut hay!" Bennett wishes he'd had dozens of them to hand over.

Nobody could be more surprised than the originators of the air's WLS Barn Dance Show are at the way it has developed. It was started as a program that would appeal principally to listeners in rural areas, but come October 2 it celebrates its 10th anniversary on the network as a show that many city people love. It's one of the few that has a paying studio audience. The genial Hal O'Halloran will be on hand as usual as m. c.

Watch for a radio quiz master to name three of Hollywood's loveliest who have not played opposite Cary Grant. It would be hard to name one. Laraine Day shares honors with him in "Mr. Lucky," and is the latest of a list of 28 of his heroines. Irene Dunne, Katharine Hepburn and Sylvia Sidney have appeared three times apiece in Grant pictures and he's probably our only ranking star who has both Joan and Constance Bennett on his roster of "Celebrities I Have Made Love to on the Screen."

Who's News This Week

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

A MOST durable ambassador is Sir Samuel John Gurney Hoare, now back at 10 Downing Street to tell how he talked turkey to Franco. He is thinnish, with a tight mouth and a high, nasal voice that on occasion has run through the house of commons like the rasp of a file. But he knows his mind and probably knew, too, that Allied victories had ripened the time to back Franco into a corner.

A Bit Pompous, Sir Samuel Has Plenty Of Solid Qualities

One of those modern correspondents, who zip between London and New York the way an older generation used to ride the expresses between New York and Washington, reports that Hoare loves the pomp and circumstance of public life. He certainly acts as though he does when he togs out in court dress. His uniform is perfection. The sword that he wears as an Elder Brother of Trinity House slants jauntily. The blaze of his decorations heightens the light of pleasure in his eyes.

Sir Samuel is a prodigious worker, with an infinite capacity for important detail and his performance in Spain has been satisfactory all around. His wife, maybe, has helped there. She writes a weekly pep piece for consular representatives.

The Hoare family, though not venerable, has been in banking quite some time and there is plenty of money to support an ambassadorial establishment. Sir Samuel is 63.

THE Nazis in Belgium, according to exiled Prime Minister Hubert Pierlot, are slowly starving more than half of Belgium's small children. Fifty-three per cent of those between three and six, he says, are undernourished.

Nazis Are Starving Belgium's Children, H. Pierlot Declares

Pierlot speaks on the basis of first-rate information. He was prime minister before the captivity and the people who remained behind still look upon him as their leader and smuggle information over the Channel regularly.

A trifle old to fight in this war, 53, in the last struggle with Germany Pierlot enlisted as a private, finished a lieutenant and stayed on in the reserve to become a captain of the Chasseurs Ardennais. That "Ardennais," probably evoked memories he could not resist. It was in the Ardennes that the bloody battles of the summer of 1914 were fought, futile victories for the Germans they turned out to be.

After peace Pierlot became one of Brussels' most eminent lawyers and ultimately was elected to the senate. A thick man with a square face and little hair but vast eyebrows and a heavy moustache, he held various portfolios in the cabinet and reached the prime ministership just before the Germans' second invasion. He barely escaped their pursuit and with his wife and seven children went first to Vichy, then to Spain and by way of Portugal to England. King Leopold, meanwhile, fell in the Nazis' hands and Pierlot's first comment was bitterly accusing. It was, probably, only double talk for German consumption because he defends his king now.

AFTER an earlier war council called in Washington by the authors of the Atlantic Charter, it was rumored that a veteran general had backed away from the Burma offensive now tossed to the young, the hell-for-leather Lord Louis Mountbatten. Gossips said that when any schedule of men, ships, planes and guns was drawn up the oldster tck-tck-tcked and asked double. Mountbatten has always gone ahead with the tools at hand and has used these so well he is a vice admiral at 43.

Liken Mountbatten To Gen. Wellington In Various Ways

Incidentally, a superstitious neighbor points out that Wellington, when he finished Napoleon's generals in the Peninsular war, was 44. Burma, the neighbor notes, is also on a peninsula and Lord Mountbatten is 43. The "lord" is by courtesy, not Burke. An elder brother inherited the title of Marquis of Milford Haven and a nephew holds it now. Mountbatten is only plain Louis Francis Albert Victor Nicholas; but like Wellington, also a younger son, he may be more than marquis in the end.

Until 1914 the family name was Battenberg. It was changed because anti-German sentiment chafed Lord Louis' father, an English admiral also. The cousinship with Britain's king, so often mentioned, stems from a grandmother, one of Victoria's daughters. The line began a little less than a hundred years ago when a prince of Hesse married, morganatically, a Russian countess. Mountbatten himself married the fabulously wealthy daughter of a British commoner. The remainder of the family consists of two young and pretty daughters

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

There are about 400 kinds of trees and vines in the world that contain rubber latex, but Hevea brasiliensis, native of Brazil, is recognized as the best for commercial purposes.

Don't keep your car idle too long with the tires carrying the load. Drive it a short distance periodically. This flexes the tires and will prevent deterioration.

The Army is conserving rubber. It is estimated that by 1944 crude rubber requirements per vehicle will be cut 63 per cent as compared to the amount of rubber needed by the vehicle at the outbreak of the war.

See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, a newspaper man before his induction into the army, has been receiving his basic training at Fort Bragg, N. C. He has gone through the "hardest" weeks of his army career and has been classified as a cook. In addition, he has spent a considerable share of his spare time on KP duty. He is familiar with the finer points of "goldbricking" and "shooting the breeze." He has mastered most of the army slang expressions and has rather completely adjusted himself to training camp routine. As we pick up the story Private Hargrove and some of his buddies are having supper and are about to hand the mess sergeant his share of the day's abuse.

CHAPTER XII

Orville D. Pope, Mess Sergeant of Headquarters Battery and master of all he surveys (so long as he stays in the kitchen), strolled past our table like a happy night-club owner inspecting his saloon.

Photographer Bushemi lifted a forkful of creamed potatoes to his mouth, made a sour face and inserted the potatoes as if they were seasoned with liniment. Don Bishop, the public relations reporter who sometimes shows a streak of sheer sanity, lifted his coffee, held his nose and drank it.

"Sergeant Pope," I said in a small voice, "earlier in the course of this supper I told you that I had never tasted anything harder or drier than the bread you served us tonight. I want to take that back, Pope. When I said that, I hadn't tasted your peanut butter."

"You're the only ones I ever hear griping about the chow in this battery," said Pope. "You're the only ones I ever have trouble with. You three and Mulvehill. If I'll pay for your food, won't you please take all your meals at the Service Club?"

"Let's leave Mulvehill's name out of this," I said. "Poor, poor, old Mulvehill. We knew him well. He was a good boy, was the Lieuthomas."

"I noticed the place is so quiet tonight that you can even hear Bushemi eating his celery," said the sergeant. "Where is your dear friend Mulvehill, the bum?"

"You have run him over the hill," said Bishop. "Your food and your mess hall and your brutishly foul mouth have driven him away. He has deserted from the Army and his guilt is upon your hands."

"You know the one thing that's missing from this meal—the one thing that would make it perfect?" asked Bushemi.

"Ice cream?" asked the mess sergeant.

"Chloroform," said Bushemi.

Pope slapped his forehead mightily. "Why couldn't I have been a dud-picker, a horse valet, a suicide submarineman — anything but a mess sergeant? Where is Mulvehill?" He wrinkled his forehead. "Say! He wasn't here at breakfast either."

"Nor lunch," said Bishop. "Nor supper, nor lunch, nor breakfast yesterday."

"He has gone over the hill," I said, gloomily. "He has deserted."

"Let's see," said the sergeant. "He wasn't here all day today and he didn't come in yesterday and he didn't show up for supper the night before last. Is he sick?"

"He would have been," said Bishop, "if he hadn't got a decent meal soon."

"I can remember Mulvehill just like he was right here with us even now," I said. "He was a fine, noble, sensitive lad. He had a beautiful career before him in the Army. Fate can ruin any of us by tossing in the tiniest little monkey wrench—or the toughest little biscuit. I hated to see Mulvehill go over the hill."

"Cut the clowning," the sergeant wailed, convinced at last that Mulvehill had flown. "You can't make me think that he left because of my food. Where is he?"

"That," sighed Bishop, "is what the War Department would like to know."

Pope began drumming unconsciously on the table. "I know my food is as good as any in the Center. That ain't it. Did he take offense at something I said to him and start eating at the Service Club?"

Acton Dennington Hawkins the Third, chief cook, passed by. "Where's your friend Mulvehill?" he asked us.

"Oh," said Bushemi, forgetting the play, "Mulvehill's on furlough."

The mess sergeant rose with a roar. "The day shall come!" he screamed. "You'll all be on KP one of these days! Oh, will you suffer and will I enjoy myself! Finish your supper and get out of my mess hall! Get out! GET OUT!"

"As if I didn't have enough trouble on my hands with payday," said Top Sergeant Tate, "now I have to be exposed to the sight of you. Be brief."

"Sergeant," I began, "when I hear people say a soldier can't live on the pay he makes, I'd like to show them myself as a living proof that he can."

"Quit beating your gums," he said, "and get to the point. You didn't come in here to compliment the Army on its pay. And take your cap off when you're in the orderly room."

"I didn't come to compliment nobody nor nothing," I said, laying my cap on the corner of his desk. "I just came in to see if the War Department is mad at me. They haven't given me a cent of salary since the first of October."

"What in the sweet name of heaven are you talking about?" the top kick hooted, handing me back the cap. "We've had two regular paydays, including the one today. And we've had two supplementary payrolls for people who missed the regular paydays."

"Mind you," I put in, "I'm not complaining. I eat regularly and I have a roof over my head. I can get haircuts and movie tickets and cigarettes and shoe polish on credit, but I certainly would like a little cash spending money from time to time."

"Well," he groaned, slapping his desk wearily, "here we go again, Hargrove, the boy who makes a top kick's life exciting! Hargrove the hopeless—the sloppy bunk on inspection day, the soap in the soup, the thorn in the side. Hargrove, the boy who can take the simplest problem and reduce it to its most confusing form. Now let's start at the beginning and take the whole thing slowly. You haven't been paid since October first. How come?"

"That was because when the November first payday came around, I had just got here. I signed the October payroll in my old battery."

"All right," he said patiently, counting off a finger. "That's one payday. That brings us up to November tenth, the day of the supplementary payroll, when you should have got the pay you missed on the first. Did you sign the supplementary payroll for that occasion?"

"Yes, sir," I insisted. "Then when the supplementary payday came around, something happened. Or to be more correct, nothing happened. I still didn't get paid."

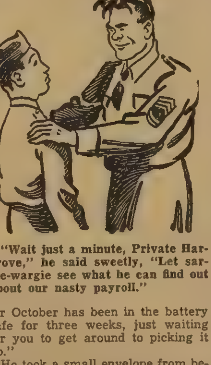
"That's two paydays you missed," the sergeant sighed. "I will check into the second later. Now—what about today's pay?"

"I missed out on that one too. The battery commander couldn't find my signature on the payroll."

He patted me on both shoulders, a little heavily, and I cowered. "Wait just a minute, Private Hargrove," he said sweetly. "Let sargie-wargie see what he can find out about the nasty old payroll."

He returned in a few minutes, frowning wearily. "Private Hargrove," he sighed, "dear Private Hargrove! You didn't draw your pay on the tenth of November because you weren't here on the tenth! You were on furlough! And you didn't sign the payroll for today because you were on furlough while it was being signed. Your modest pay for October has been in the battery safe for three weeks, just waiting for you to get around to picking it up."

He took a small envelope from behind his back. "Twenty-one dollars for services rendered through the month of October. Harrumph! Minus two-forty for theater tickets, minus a dollar for haircuts, minus seven dollars for canteen checks. Private Hargrove, I present to you your October wages—ten dollars and sixty cents!"



"Wait just a minute, Private Hargrove," he said sweetly, "Let sargie-wargie see what he can find out about our nasty payroll."

I took the money, looked at it tenderly, and crammed it into my pocket.

Winter, at last, is upon us, in the rear ranks, the surest indication is to be found in reveille.

All through the late summer and the fall, we hopped out of bed as soon as the whistle blew. Now we crawl grumblingly out when the sergeant puts the whistle to his lips for a "fall out!" blast. Since it is still dark when we stand reveille, and since we are aided occasionally by a heaven-sent fog, there are many saviors of democracy who slip on merely a pair of shoes (partially laced), a pair of trousers, and a field jacket. The field jacket, when buttoned all the way to the collar, hides the absence of shirt and tie —and the sergeant is none the wiser.

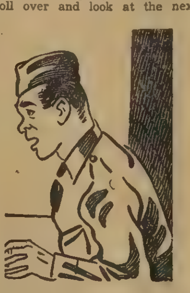
In Headquarters Battery, the process of getting up in the morning has sunk into a rut of repetition. It's the same procedure every morning.

Sergeant Roughton, platoon leader, toots his brass at six o'clock and a few energetic soldiers at the other end of the squadroom rise and begin the morning with sickeningly cheerful horseplay. They yank the covers off their neighbors. The neighbors yank the covers back on.

Private First Class Bishop, unofficial guardian of the public relations staff, rises from his bunk which is next to mine. "Hargrove! Bushemi! Get up! Salute the morn!" Then he yells down the length of the squadroom to the bed of Private First Class Thomas ("Thoss") Mulvehill.

Mulvehill, every morning, has already been forcibly ejected from his bed by his wild neighbors. He is, by this time, sitting on the edge of his bunk, with his great head sunk between his knees and his fingers fumbling with his shoelaces. In a thick and fiery Irish brogue, he is berating whatever forces of destiny put him in this mad corner of the squadroom.

I stick a cautious toe out from under the covers. The outer air isn't cold but, then again, it isn't warm. I roll over and look at the next bunk, where Private Bushemi is snoring gently. I roll back, get comfortable, and pull the cover over my head.



"Git out of there or I'll dump you out."

"Hargrove!" roars Bishop. "Get your lazy bones out of bed! It's five after six!"

"Call me at ten after six," I mutter. "Better still just sing out when my name is called at reveille."

Private Bishop reaches over suddenly and rips the blankets from the bunk. I rise, cursing him soundly. Private Bushemi is still sleeping, with a sweet and childish smile on his face. I lift a foot and give him a firm shove in the posterior.

"Git out of there, you blankerty-blanked dash-dash, shiftless, good-for-nothing bum!" I shout, giving him two or three more shoves. "Git out of there or I'll dump you out!"

I reach over and grab the edge of Bushemi's bunk. I joggle it slightly to give the impression that I am just about to overturn the bunk. Bushemi bounces out of bed, swinging wildly. "You're going to get funny just one morning too often, and I'm going to beat the eternal perdition out of both of you. It's getting to the point where it ain't funny." Then he begins mumbling aimlessly under his breath as he steps into his trousers.

Somehow, we manage to get into the second shoe just as the whistle blows to call us outside. We shiver in the dark cold as section leaders call the roll, mostly from memory. The second section of the first platoon is always the last to finish roll call. We stand there listening. "P-o-g-g-i!" "Hyoh!" "Pulver!" "Here!" and then the piece de resistence: "Peacock!" Always the answer comes in the same way—an unbelievably deep bass, long-drawn-out and rumbling: "Heeeeeeere!" The second platoon snickers and titters, just as it did the day before, and the top kick shouts, "Dismissed!"

Bushemi heads straight back for his bunk. "Call me at chowtime, will you?"

Bill, a friend of Bushemi's and mine in Charlotte, drives a street bus. Before he began his service as a driver, he served a hitch in the Army. Like all ex-service men, he's ready to drop everything and just shoot the breeze any time the conversation turns to the Army.

"There was a young first-class private got on my bus last week," he told me, "and he sat in the long seat behind me, so we got started talking. Well, I thought I'd snow him under, telling him about the time I was in the Army. So, just to start the ball rolling and get the talk turned to the Army, I asked him how long he'd been in.

" 'Oh, I've been in for well over eight months,' he said, like he was just starting his thirtieth year of service. Then he started wiping his sleeves so I'd be sure to notice his private-first-class stripe.

"I thought I'd let him blow off about his stripe, so I asked him, 'Say, what does that stripe stand for?'

" 'Oh, that,' he said, as much as to say aw-shucks-that-ain't-nothing. That just means I'm a sergeant.'

" 'Is that right?' I asked him, looking sort of widemouthed at him.

" 'Yessir,' he said, real casual, 'in the Army only eight months and I've already been made sergeant.'

" 'Well, tell me,' I said, 'what grade of sergeant are you? I've seen some sergeants have three stripes and then I've seen them have as many as six. How come that?'

Canadian, U. S. Universities Offer Plan for Prosperity

Two Schools Offer Prescription for Post-War Depression in Pamphlet Entitled 'The Midcontinent and the Peace.'

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Out of the part of the world farthest from the fighting, literally and figuratively, has come an interesting international prescription for the cure of the world's post-war headache—the spell of depression that we have to be ready for.

The formula is summarized in a 43-page pamphlet that I wish everyone could read. The title is "The Midcontinent and the Peace." The cover is an earthy brown embellished with alternating rows of golden grain sheaves, fat porkers and trucks.

It is a report made jointly by the Universities of Minnesota and Manitoba. It has nothing to do with departments of state, it has no official status beyond the fact that the American and Canadian governors asked their respective state universities to do the job. It is a splendid down-to-brass-tacks example of the recognition of the common interests of two important areas lying on opposite sides of an international boundary line.

The gist of the report is this:

I. Western Europe must arrange greatly to increase its imports of wheat, lard and pork after the war.

II. Canada and the United States must reorganize their automobile-producing industries so that a maximum employment in Canadian factories can be maintained; cost of autos be reduced to Canadian buyers and American car output increased.

III. Agriculture in the prairie provinces of Canada and the central northwest United States must continue along the lines of agricultural specialization developed out of necessity during the war.

The Connection

Now, at first glance, the connection between these steps may not be evident, but the report makes the whole effort clear and also shows how the program can be carried out. There is nothing new or revolutionary in the methods discussed, nor in the reasoning concerning their results, but a striking assemblage of data gathered and arranged in such a manner that it offers what appears to be a logical program of action.

In the first place, the report shows how domestic economic policies (the ones I briefly summarized in the three points above) are, in fact, international policies. It demonstrates with figures and explanation that "sound and strong internal economies in Canada and the United States" must have "resoundingly important effects on the external world."

Examples offered to prove this include the figures which show how the rise and fall of demand in Canada and the United States affected other parts of the world up to and after the depression hit us in 1929.

In less than three decades, imports in the United States of ten different commodities increased from 300 to 1,700 million dollars worth. Take silk: the yearly average importation of silk bought by the United States from 1901-05 amounted to 45 million dollars. In 1929, it had jumped to 432 million dollars. But when the depression struck, it fell to 114 million dollars in 1932.

The total imports of the ten commodities dropped from 1,718 million to 534 million dollars—and you can imagine what happened in the producing countries when these markets disappeared.

One interesting point brought out is that in this period of expanding trade (both import and export) in which Canada and the United States shared, the MUTUAL interests of the two countries greatly INCREASED and their competitive interests declined.

Industry Predominant

The report shows how agriculture has ceased to be our greatest source of wealth, how industry has become pre-eminent and to maintain our agriculture, a healthy condition of industry must be maintained. The old statement is quoted: "Tell me the amount of factory payrolls and I will tell you the price of meat and butter."

The plans for our own agriculture are fairly simple—maintenance of the same type of specialization now going on. The plan for Europe is more complicated but since the question of whether the people of western Europe eat at all for the next few years, depends largely on what Russia, the United States and the other grain producing countries do, these countries may be able to get western European countries to do what we want.

According to the Midcontinent planners, an arrangement should be made whereby western Europe for a period—perhaps 15 years—would absorb our surplus wheat, pork, lard and other farm products. Production of these products would be stopped in western Europe and resources saved would be put to efficient use. The producing countries would assist in reorganizing European agriculture to this changeover. The producing countries would also agree to reduce certain tariffs so that the Europeans can pay for the agricultural products they absorb with goods they can make. (Of course, there is the tough spot.)

As for changeovers in agriculture, it is pointed out that they are not new. Minnesota was once the greatest wheat producing state in the country. That is no longer true. "Mixed farming" has greatly increased. Diversified farming rose in Denmark and improved the standard of her people—these changes come about automatically because the new type introduced pays better. Similar changes, it is implied, could be brought about by ukase, too.

Unfortunately, space does not permit a detailed review of this report but quite as important as its actual content are the forces which initiated it—in the first place, it brings to our consciousness the mutual interests of this country and our northern neighbor which are plain to any American familiar with Canada and her people but which many in both countries ignore. Again, it shows how groups in two separate countries can get together and work out steps mutually beneficial and likewise advantageous to the whole world. The most important thing of all, however, is the emphasis on the fact that domestic problems are frequently international problems.

Diary of a Broadcaster

Let me tell you of another crazy rumor story that I heard today. It is so old that it has whiskers but people up and down this land are listening and believing it.

A reliable, otherwise hardheaded man told me that an acquaintance of his wife had a friend or relative who had a letter from her boy, a prisoner in Japan. The boy said that he was being well treated and then made a reference to his stamp collection.

He had none, so the remark got the people to thinking—they repeated it "then the FBI or somebody" took the letter, steamed off the stamp, and under it was written—

Well, before the man finished telling it, I said: "I know what was under it—They've cut my tongue out."

How did I guess? Well, I heard that story a dozen times in the last World war.

But to make sure, I made a few inquiries, simply to check the procedure. In the first place, prisoners of war don't use stamps. They can't write direct to their next of kin. The messages all are relayed through the International Red Cross anyhow.

Before we got into the last war, I was sitting on top of a Fifth avenue bus in New York, reading an article by David Lawrence, which reported how the department of justice had run down a story to the effect that sweaters knitted for the Red Cross were sold to soldiers. The bus stopped—a Liberty Bond orator was making a speech—I listened. He was telling the same story that the department of justice had run down and found it had absolutely NO basis whatever.

Remember this before you repeat these charming fantasies. Enlistment in the WACS, as fine a corps of American women as were ever gathered together, has been slowed down by a cheap and dirty story made out of whole cloth and passed from one drooling lascivious mouth to another.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Bombers that will dwarf in size our present Flying Fortresses, armed with heavy caliber cannon of an entirely new principle of operation and capable of carrying half a carload of bombs across the Atlantic and returning non-stop, are some of the revolutionary aircraft developments predicted for the near future by Gen. H. H. Arnold of the U. S. army air forces.

"By the hundreds of thousands, boys and girls who in other times would have completed high school, are now leaving the school before graduation to go to work," says the Educational Policies commission of the National Education association.

JUST KIDDING

No Production

"For ten years, ten long and lean years," cried the author, "I have been writing this drama, changing a word here, a line there, working on it till my fingers were cramped and aching, my brain and body weary from the toil."

"Too bad, too bad," the producer murmured. "All work and —no play."

NO! You can't see Inoculating Bacteria

● You can't see legume bacteria. If you could, you wouldn't know whether they were good or bad. But there is one sure way to get plenty of good and effective inoculating bacteria . . . just ask for NITRAGIN when you buy. NITRAGIN is the oldest and most widely used legume inoculant. For over forty years, farmers have used it to get bigger yields of legumes and build soil fertility. It costs only a few cents an acre but frequently boosts yields of vetch, winter peas, clovers, alfalfa, soy beans and other legumes up to 50% and more. Get NITRAGIN where you buy your seed. Look for the yellow can with the tradename NITRAGIN.

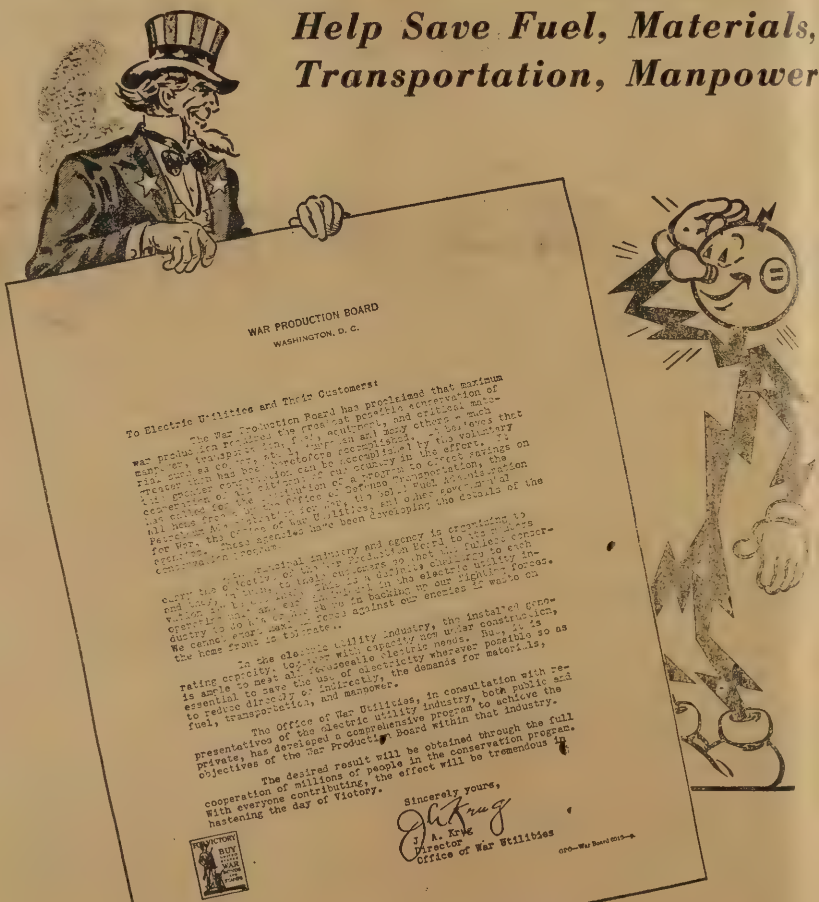
Don't Waste Electricity



Help Save Fuel, Materials, Transportation, Manpower

WAR PRODUCTION BOARD
WASHINGTON, D. C.

To Electric Utilities and Their Customers:

The War Production Board has proclaimed that maximum war production requires the greatest possible conservation of manpower, transportation, fuel, equipment, and critical materials such as copper, steel, tungsten and many others — much greater than has been heretofore accomplished. It believes that this greater conservation can be accomplished by the voluntary cooperation of all citizens of our country in the effort. It has called for the institution of a program to effect savings on all home fronts by the Office of Defense Transportation, the Petroleum Administration for War, the Solid Fuel Administration for War, the Office of War Utilities, and other governmental agencies. These agencies have been developing the details of the conservation program.

[illegible] principal industry and agency is organizing to carry the objectives of the War Production Board to its members and they, in turn, to their customers so that the fullest conservation [illegible]. This is a definite challenge to each operating unit and [illegible] in the electric utility industry to do [illegible] share in backing up our fighting forces. We cannot exert maximum force against our enemies if waste on the home front is tolerated.

In the electric utility industry, the installed generating capacity, together with capacity now under construction, is ample to meet all foreseeable electric needs. But, it is essential to save the use of electricity wherever possible so as to reduce directly or indirectly, the demands for materials, fuel, transportation, and manpower.

The Office of War Utilities, in consultation with representatives of the electric utility industry, both public and private, has developed a comprehensive program to achieve the objectives of the War Production Board within that industry.

The desired result will be obtained through the full cooperation of millions of people in the conservation program. With everyone contributing, the effect will be tremendous in hastening the day of Victory.

Sincerely yours,
J A Krug

WHAT'S DOING AT ISABELLA HIGH

Last week and Tuesday morning saw a multitude of students and teachers gathering at Isabella for resumation of another classroom session. In the group, as usual, was yours truly with a good case of journalistic itch on his fingers, grown somewhat nimble after three long months of "nothing oding at Isabella High." Nevertheless, we're glad to be back in school and are proud of the large enrollment and excellent faculty that now seems apparent. In a brief but listenable talk to the assembly Tuesday morning, Rev. Stuckey wisely told the students, "Study to show yourself approved."

The Isabella Mustangs have a tough football season ahead of them this year, as is indicated by the following schedule; yet, the group as a whole, although small, seems determined to get in there and do their best. Incidently, we were happy to welcome some good football material from Vermont this year.

Here is this year's schedule, subject, of course, to alterations:

Sept. 24—Hurt, at Clanton (night game).
Oct. 1—Centreville (there).
Oct. 8—Clanton (there).
Oct. 15—Wetumpka (there).
Oct. 22—Maplesville (there).
Oct. 29—Maplesville (here).
Nov. 5—Prattville (there).
Nov. 12—Holtville (there).
Nov. 24—Marion (there).

One of our every two families have at least two workers. Figure it out yourself how much, beyond 10 per cent of your family income you can put into War Bonds every payday.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

In the words of Rudyard Kipling:

"It ain't the guns nor armament
Nor funds that they can pay
But the close cooperation
That makes them win the day.
It ain't the individual—
Nor the army as a whole,
But the everlastin' teamwork
Of every bloomin' soul"

Here is a letter received from Marvin Ellison who is somewhere in Sicily, Italy, Germany or the Lord only knows where. We were really glad to hear from the boy, who once was employed by the News and who we feel very close to. A lot of his friends will appreciate the letter:

August 4, 1943.

Dear Ben:

Just wonder how the Folks and Things About Town are? I received a Chilton County News last night, and boy, it sure was great! Honest, I never knew one paper could help as much as that.

I am now in Sicily. Have seen a little—and like it (A little). Golly, home would sure look good to me now. This country is a great fruit and melon growing place; also the most famous for wine. . .Of course that means nothing to me.

Give Myrtle and Mrs Tucker, also the children, my regards.

Sincerely,
MARVIN ELLISON.

First let us congratulate Mr J. C. Pattillo and his Committees on the big parade that was presented to usher in our Third War Loan Drive. For a quick got-up affair and the material at hand that could be used the whole bunch should be highly complimented on the results obtained. It was a brilliant idea of someone's.

Let us second, say, "for shame" to those many, many onlookers lining the streets Thursday when the Flag went by. who failed to take their hats off. We know it was only thoughtlessness and not a lack of patriotism. as readily seen by the amount of Bonds sold that very day. But when it comes to "showing off" our feelings, we Americans are a backward lot.

Seems like we're trying to get Neil Rockett married about a month late. The wedding will be solmnized on October 3rd and not the 30th as announced in our columns last week. It was a typographical error on our part and we are glad to make the correction After all having been married only 17 years we get all goose-imply announcing weddings and we're likely to write anything.

Leo Thompson at Clanton Laundry & Cleaning Company is having Hanger trouble.. He cannot get enough hangers to send his clothes out on. Let's all remember to take a hanger with the next clothes we send to the Laundry They just can't be bought and they are something that are very necessary to his Dry Cleaning business.

Soldiers getting the county papers in Foreign Lands. now number in the hundreds. They read each issue thoroughly. They get news from their hometown paper that no mother, father, sister, or brother could write to them Some tell us that they even read the advertisements to keep up with which merchant is doing what. Wonder what some of them are going to say to these merchants when they get back who never even sign their name to a Government Adv., sponsoring War Bonds, to shorting the War or aid in a small way to get the boys back home?

Just ask the Emile Hegys what The American Spirit means

They know how precious is this thing that ONLY AMERICANS HAVE...for they fled a land where it never existed

Emile and Marie Hegy were born and wed in Alsace Lorraine at a time when their native land was under the heel of a conqueror.

In May 1924, they freed themselves from the political and economic uncertainty that governed their daily lives and came to America.

Emile started work as a common laborer in the L & N car shop at Birmingham, Alabama. Soon there came a proud day when he and Marie became full-fledged citizens in a land where individual rights and freedoms were guaranteed.

On December 7, 1941, war came to America . . . their America now. That day found the one-time "common laborer," Emile Hegy, a valued L & N veteran in a good paying job, earned on merit . . . a thing that would have been impossible in a land where men live under government decree and a common laborer must remain a common laborer until he dies.

Hardly before war was declared next day, Emile and Marie Hegy bought a $1,000 Defense Bond, the first $1,000 bond sold that day in Birmingham. Then, as fast as they could convert investments into cash, the Hegys bought more bonds. Today, a substantial part of every L & N pay check to Emile Hegy goes for the purchase of still more War Bonds.

Emile and Marie would tell you that they are buying all the War Bonds they can afford for TWO reasons. One is to help beat Hitler and Hirohito. The other . . . to help make sure that America will keep the priceless American Spirit alive.

That is the Spirit that laid the railroads, dug the mines, built the factories that make possible our arsenal of freedom today. It is the Spirit that will never die, so long as we remain free to strive in our own individual ways, for our own individual betterment.

J. B. Hill
PRESIDENT
LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD

The L & N, like other railroads that share in the wartime marvel of transportation, is a product of The American Spirit. Actuated by that Spirit, our nation has grown strong because free men have been able to invest their savings in productive industry; labor has progressed under the right to bargain, individually or collectively; every person has been free to earn a just reward for energy, ability and initiative. It is that Spirit, nurtured on these freedoms, that holds the hope of a better world tomorrow . . . a tomorrow in which the L & N will continue to contribute to the certain development of the South.

Sarge—What do you mean by kissing that girl over there in that dark corner?

Private—Now that I see her in the light, I wonder myself.

In the Name of the Lord

Smith—What was all that swearing I heard when I went by your house on the way to church this morning?

Blue—That was grandpa. He was late for church and couldn't find his hymn book.

Giggle Water

Druggist—And what, sonny, can I do for you?

Junior—My mother told me she wanted a bottle of good-natured alcohol.

CHEAP AT THAT

A lanky young man came into the office of an editor of a big city paper and handed him a poem several feet long to read, saying in a condescending sort of way:

"You can publish this poem for ten dollars."

"All right," replied the editor. "Just hand over the ten dollars. That's less than our usual space rates, but times are hard, and I'll take it."

Brown—It's an awful bother deciding what to do on holidays.

Blue—It doesn't bother me. My boss tells when to go and my wife tells me where!

Put Nutrition in That Lunch Box
(See Recipes Below)

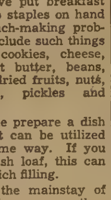
Let's Pack a Lunch

Do you realize as your children once again begin the trek back to school with their lunch boxes that those mid-day meals should carry a third of the day's calories in them?

Lunches that are a bite-and-run excuse for a meal will not give children or workers nourishment from which they are to draw the pep and energy, vim and vigor they need to do their best day's work. Their loads are heavier to carry these days than ever before, and it behooves every homemaker to be on her toes to put in the box the very best lunch she can pack.

Packing the lunch need not take undue time or effort. Assemble the equipment needed for packing a lunch at one convenient spot, and then you can get right to work with it as soon as you've put breakfast on the table. Keep staples on hand to simplify the lunch-making problem. This should include such things as crackers and cookies, cheese, milk, eggs, peanut butter, beans, salmon, sardines, dried fruits, nuts, jelly, marmalade, pickles and olives.

Whenever possible prepare a dish for the family that can be utilized in the lunch in some way. If you make a meat or fish loaf, this can be used as a sandwich filling.



Sandwiches are the mainstay of the lunch box. However, as they are used so often, vary the bread and fillings as much as possible to avoid that mealtime monotony. Cut them in sections—they're more attractive and easier to eat that way. Wrap in waxed paper to keep from drying out. Have the fillings moist to keep them from being unappetizing and spread the bread with butter, margarine or mayonnaise to keep it moist, fresh and tasty.

Sandwich Fillings.

Chopped hard-cooked egg, pickle or celery, mayonnaise on oatmeal bread.

Cream cheese, chopped olives on white or whole wheat bread.

Cream cheese or cottage cheese with jelly and marmalade with Boston Brown bread.

Peanut butter or ground peanuts with chopped figs, dates or prunes, mayonnaise or cream to moisten on white bread.

Ground dried beef with pickle and mayonnaise to moisten on rye bread.

Lunch Box Menu
Cream of Tomato Soup
Crackers
Ham Salad on Whole Wheat Bread
Chopped Egg Salad on White Bread
Carrot Strips
Fresh Apple Cookies

Meat or sardines in thick white sauce on white bread or bun.

Ground ham and carrots with sour cream dressing on buttered rye bread.

Cooked liver or liver sausage, mashed or ground fine with fried onion, minced, chili sauce on whole wheat, rye or pumpernickel bread.

Ground veal, carrot and celery moistened with mayonnaise.

Chopped carrots, raisins, and nuts, moistened with mayonnaise, on white or oatmeal bread.

Oatmeal Bread.
(Makes 2 large loaves)

- 2 cups oatmeal, uncooked
- ½ cup molasses
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon shortening
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1 cup milk
- 1 cake yeast dissolved in
- ½ cup lukewarm water
- 5 cups flour

Measure oatmeal, molasses, salt and shortening into bowl. Add boiling water and let stand 1 hour. Beat in milk, dissolved yeast and flour. Let rise until doubled in bulk. Knead well. Turn into greased bread pans, let rise again until double in bulk. Bake 15 minutes at 425 degrees, then 45 minutes at 375 degrees.

Boston Brown Bread
(Makes 2 small loaves)

- 1 cup graham flour
- 1 cup rye flour
- 1 cup cornmeal
- 1½ teaspoons soda
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 1 cup sour milk or buttermilk
- 1 cup water
- ¾ cup molasses
- 1 cup floured raisins

Sift together the dry ingredients. Add bran remaining in sifter to dry ingredients. Combine sour milk, water and molasses. Make a well in the dry ingredients, pour in liquid and mix as quickly as possible. Add raisins with last few sweeps of mixing spoon. Fill greased molds ⅔ full, cover closely and steam for 2 hours.

Milk Drinks.

Vary the lunch box beverage as often as possible, serving milk, hot chocolate or cocoa. For a change of menu, try an old favorite which contains iron—molasses milk drink, made by mixing 1 quart of milk with 2 or 3 tablespoons molasses and a dash of nutmeg.

Spiced milk: To 6 cups heated milk, add ¾ teaspoon cinnamon, dash of nutmeg or mace and stir vigorously. Add sugar, if desired, and serve hot or cold as preferred.

Fruits make wonderful desserts and add a generous portion of the day's vitamin and mineral health. If an energy-producing dessert is desired, try a pudding:

Orange Marmalade Bread Pudding.
(Serves 6)

- 1⅓ cups dry bread crumbs
- 1⅓ cups scalded milk
- 1⅓ cups sugar
- 1 tablespoon melted butter
- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- ½ cup orange marmalade
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg

Soak bread crumbs in hot milk. When cool, add remaining ingredients in order given. Place in a buttered baking dish and set in a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 45 to 50 minutes, or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serve with lemon sauce or cream.

Lynn Says:

Going Places? Lunches that go places to school, to the defense plant or office should be just as attractive as you can make 'em. A box is better than a bag, as it will hold the food without having it get mussed.

Keep lunch boxes clean and air out. If the box has an enamel finish it can be washed out with soap and water. Any box can be aired out between lunches, kept free from crumbs.

Use waxed paper to keep sandwiches fresh and moist, vegetables crisp and fresh. A vacuum bottle will keep beverages hot or cold, soups steaming hot. Easy-to-pack crackers with soup furnish energy—give a real homey touch to the lunch.

Try surprises often in the lunch box just for morale's sake. A piece of favorite gum, candy or a few nuts, an orange, sectioned and peeled and peeling fitted over orange to give the appearance of being peeled but to keep it fresh and moist do loads to give the school child or worker a lift.

Are you having a time stretching meats? Write to Miss Lynn Chambers for practical help, at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Don't forget to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

TIME TO DO YOUR XMAS SHOPPING

The Christmas shopping season is here—even though the weather is still warm.

Mailing of gifts for Army and Navy personnel overseas must begin by September 15, if many of the men and women in our armed services are not to be disappointed; and September 15 is less than two weeks away.

Christmas gifts may be mailed by parcel post to Army men and women overseas only between September 15 and October 15. After the latter date, such parcels maynot be mailed unless a written request from the soldier for the article is presented with each parcel. No soldier should have to ASK for a Christmas gift; so gifts must be mailed on time. The Navy also urges that gifts be mailed between September 15 and October 15.

Reasons for the early mailing dates are: The vast distances that the parcels must travel to reach our men at war fronts and stations the world over; frequent transfers of thousands of men from one location to another, which means forwarding of the mail and consumes additional time; the necessity for giving preference to reinforcements, arms, munitions, medicine and food in allotment of shipping space, which often means that the shipments of gifts must wait. And it is most urgent that gifts be delivered to the men IN TIME FOR CHRISTMAS, to keep their spirit high.

The only way to insure against disappointment for the fighting men is to buy at once and mail early—mail your gifts as soon as possible after the September 15 starting date.

Those who have relatives or friends in the service should remember that we have fighting men in Alaska, Greenland, Iceland, England, Sicily, far-separated regions of Africa, the Near Eastern countries Australia, many of the South Pacific islands, India, China, South America, and other areas.

Weeks are required for a ship to reach many of these stations. There can be no assurance, of course, that the first ship sailing for any of these locations will have space available to carry Christmas parcels. Gifts may have to wait until vitally needed supplies and equipment have been shipped, to assure victory and to save the lives of our men. If the parcels are not mailed early, that delay may prove to be just enough to prevent their arrival by Christmas day, with consequent disappointment to the men who are offering their lives for their country and ours.

Mail of all kinds is vital to the spirit of fighting men. Every officer who has inspected our Army and Navy postal facilities overseas has reported that thousands of fighting men disregard mess call when it conflicts with mail call, and get their letters first. Officers at our large military and naval stations report that the spirit and efficiency of their men receive a distinct lift when mail is distributed, and that a delay in mail service caused a decided decline in spirit with a consequent letdown in efficiency.

A disconsolate soldier or sailor who thinks he has been forgotten at Christmas obviously is not at his best. So the gifts MUST be mailed on time so that they can arrive on time.

Rules for Christmas mailings to the fighting forces overseas were made public in June for the guidance of early shoppers. They include:

The parcel must not exceed five pounds, and must not be more than 15 inches in length or 36 inches in length and girth combined. It should be marked "Christmas parcel" so that it may be given special attention to assure its arrival before December 25.

Not more than one parcel may be mailed in any one week to the same member of the armed forces by or in behalf of the same mailer.

The parcel must be well and strongly packed, in a container of metal, wood, strong fiber board, or similar material, then wrapped in strong paper and tied with twine. The cover should be such that it can be opened readily for censorship. The contents should be packed tightly.

Perishable goods, such as fruits that may spoil, are prohibited. Intoxicants, inflammable materials such as matches or lighter fluids, poisons, and anything that may damage other mail also are prohibited. Gifts enclosed in glass should be substantially packed to avoid breakage. Sharp instruments such as razors and knives, must have their edges and points protected so that they cannot cut through the coverings and injure postal personnel or damage other packages.

Since the armed forces are being plentifully supplied with food and clothing, the Army and Navy recommended against these as gifts.

Addresses must be written clearly and completely. In addition to the return address of the sender, a parcel for an Army man should show the name, rank, Army serial number, branch of service, organization Army post office number, and name of post office through which the parcel is routed. A typical address for an Army man:

Pvt. Jhon R. Doe (Army serial No.)
Company F, 167th Infantry
A.P.O. 810, In Care Postmaster
New York, N. Y.

The address on a parcel for a Navy man should include the name and rank or rating of the addressee, the Naval unit to which he is assigned and the Navy number assigned thereto, or the name of his ship, and the fleet post office through which the parcel is routed A typical Navy address:

John M Jones, Seaman First Class,
U. S. Navy, Naval Air Station,
Navy 199 (one nine nine)
In Care Fleet Post Office

MY JIMMY
NEEDS YOUR HELP!

"Jimmy's over there now, fighting our enemies to keep the Stars and Stripes flying.

"Before he left, he told me they are going to need more equipment, more ammunition and more food for INVASION of enemy lands.

"'The more bonds the folks at home buy—the more they'll be helping us fighters to win.' That's what Jimmy said."

* * * *

The 3rd War Loan of 15 billion dollars must produce the money to pay for these essentials to victory.

Buy at least one EXTRA $100 Bond besides your regular bond purchases—many will have to invest thousands!

Don't think that what you do isn't important. It will take all every individual in America can raise to put this 3rd War Loan over the top. So buy more bonds out of your pay—out of extra income—out of "rainy-day" funds!

The quicker you do that the more you'll help Jimmy and our other boys smash through to Victory.

What do you say? It's the safest, soundest investment you'll ever make!

Home Front Volunteers Start Today To Put Over Third War Loan Campaign For World's Greatest Financing Drive

With the Slogan "Back the Attack—With War Bonds," Every American Citizen Is Asked to Buy at Least One Additional $100 Bond in September

WASHINGTON, D. C., September 9.—America's Third Army marched forth today to capture the most important immediate objective on the home front.

As 2,000,000 volunteers swung into line to put over the Third War Loan campaign, they were met with helping hands from millions of workers in the home front production battle, and cheers of encouragement from men on the fighting fronts—to whom the success of the Third War Loan is literally a matter of life and death.

To "Back the attack—with War Bonds"—every American who can do so will be asked to buy at least an extra $100 War Bond. The quota for those who are able to invest more from income or accumulated funds will be much higher.

Speaking of the great drive to raise $15 billion—a major portion to come from individuals—Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., said:

"The United Nations are on the march. The first rumblings of the big offensive are being heard in all the Axis nations. Thousands of our men have stormed Sicily. Tons upon tons of bombs are dropping on Germany. We are attacking Jap-held territory as never before. This is a great day for us. But it means that the time has come for us to really tighten our belts here on the home front. We have come to a most crucial period in the war, and the success that we will have on the fighting fronts, will depend to a considerable extent upon the degree to which we here at home are willing to work and sacrifice for ultimate victory.

"It's going to be a costly victory. We have said that before, but we must repeat it again and again. The real war has only now begun. Billions of dollars more must be spent to keep the material of war going to our men at the front. Your Government must call upon you, the American people, for that money.

"Remember! It is up to all of us here at home to 'Back the Attack' —and to do it more enthusiastically, more thoroughly and with greater sacrifice than any attack has ever been backed by any home front in all history. Everything is at stake. Everyone must help to the very limit of his ability."

The drive, continuing throughout September, will offer to investors in addition to Series E, F and G United States Savings Bonds the following securities: Treasury Savings Notes, Series C; 2½ percent Treasury Bonds of 1964-69; 2 percent Treasury Bonds of 1951-53; ⅞ percent Certificates of Indebtedness.

FARMERS CAN PRODUCE MUCH OF OWN NITROGEN SUPPLY AT HOME

With nitrogen, one of the most essential plant food elements, deficient in most soils and needed on nearly every acre of land to produce bigger crop yields, P. H. Smith, County Agent, and C. G. Cofer, Chairman, AAA Committee, said here today that farmers can produce much of their own nitrogen supply by planting winter legumes this fall and turning them under next spring.

"Every farmer can manufacture nitrogen right on his own farm," they said. "More than three fourths of the atmosphere is composed of nitrogen. The supply of nitrogen in the air is inexhaustable. There is enough nitrogen over each acre of land to produce big yields of crops for thousands of years if farmers will utilize it."

"Farmers can draw on the unlimited supply of nitrogen in the air by growing legumes. Millions of tiny bacteria live in little nodules on the roots of the legumes, such as the vetches and peas and clover, and work day and night extracting nitrogen from the air and giving it to the plants.

"The legumes use this nitrogen in their growth and store it up in the stems and leaves of the plants. When the plants are plowed under the nitrogen is added to the soil.

'Farmers who want to increase the nitrogen supply of their soils and grow bigger yields of better crops can do so by growing and turning under winter legumes.

"And farmers who carry out this practice will earn AAA soilbuilding payments, which will cover a substantial part of the cost of carrying out the practice." they concluded.

THE SIN OF MOSES AND AARON

LESSON TEXT—Numbers 20:1-13, 27, 28.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye angry, and sin not.—Ephesians 4:26.

Sin is a serious matter, and even though men in our day may not call it by its real name, it is as much here as it was in the days of Moses —and it is just as awfully sinful as ever.

Sin is universal; it appears not only among the people, but also among their leaders. God's dealing with it is on the basis of "greater privilege, greater responsibility." No leader, especially in God's cause, can expect special consideration of his weakness. He must meet God and answer for his sin.

I. The Unbelief of the People (vv. 1-5).

It is well to bear in mind that the people of Israel who were now at Kadesh-Barnea, on the borderland of Canaan, had been here once before—40 years before. Here they had rebelled against God in unbelief because of the report of the spies concerning the land. Because of their unwillingness to take God at His word, they had been sent to wander 40 years in the wilderness until the complainers had died. Read that graphic and instructive story in Numbers 13 and 14.

Now they were back at Kadesh—and a new generation shows that the spirit of unbelief and distrust has a hold on humanity, and makes son like father.

They had run short of water. The spring which had served their fathers on the previous visit to Kadesh had run dry.

One would have supposed that all the mighty dealings of God in their deliverances over and over again, would have indicated the need of faith; but they had only a wailing criticism of God and His leaders.

II. The Answer—God's Power (vv. 6-8).

Moses and Aaron, now old men but still God's chosen leaders, took their sorrow to Him (v. 6). It was the right place to go, for power belongeth unto the Lord (Ps. 62:11).

Instead of punishing the people for their unbelief, God calls upon His servant Moses to show them that He (God) is able. At a word from Moses, the rock would bring forth water before their eyes.

Is not that the perfect answer to all man's questioning and lack of faith—the revelation of the omnipotence of God?

But God's purpose is defeated (at least in a measure) by the

III. Unbelief of the Leaders (vv. 9-11).

Instead of taking their place as the servants and subordinates of God, Moses and Aaron claimed that they would provide water (v. 10). Instead of showing God's power by speaking to the rock, and His mercy in providing for the people, they uttered a rebuke; and then, by smiting the rock, took to themselves the honor that really belonged to God.

When called upon to act for God, they acted for themselves, and in their own name. They used for their own glory the power delegated to them by God. Let us beware that we do not fall into the same error.

Let us also note that if the punishment seems severe, we should recall that they had broken a type of Christ. Christ was the Rock. He was to be smitten at Calvary, that the water of life might flow forth. But He died once for sin (I Cor. 10:4) and is not to be smitten again. We need now only speak to Him in faith and receive life.

In Exodus 17:5, 6, Moses smote the rock, presenting the first half of the type foreshadowing the work of Christ; now he was to speak to it, fulfilling the type, and in unbelief he destroyed God's picture or type of redemption. It was a grievous sin.

IV. The Answer—Judgment (vv. 12, 13, 27, 28).

Moses and Aaron were not to be permitted to enter the promised land because of their failure. No doubt it was true that their departure to be with the Lord was in a sense "far better" for them; and yet it cannot be denied that there was disappointment in not seeing the conclusion of their long and arduous labors.

The lesson is clear. We may serve God long and faithfully, but that is not any excuse for "letting down" in our closing years. We dare not presume, as though our intimate touch with God and place of leadership gave us an "inside track," a right to take it easy, spiritually or morally.

Sin is always sin; and it is especially grievous in one who has the privilege of high position and of power with God.

God buried His workmen; but His work went on. For Aaron there was his son Eleazar (v. 28). For Moses there was a Joshua, "full of the spirit of wisdom" (Deut. 34:9). It is always so. None of us is indispensable.

"YOU understand how it is," the little man said anxiously. "I am only able to charge such high prices for my apartments because I run a respectable house. Nothing like this has ever happened before. I want you to leave no stone unturned, Captain Stokes, in apprehending the man who stole young Mr. Trumbell's jewelry.

"It occurred last night between nine o'clock and one or two in the morning. Young Trumbell went out to a dance. He didn't notice the theft until this morning. He reported it to me immediately and I came to you."

"Has the insurance company been notified?"

"I presume so. That's Trumbell's business, not mine."

"I see. How many students have you rooming in your house?"

"Eleven. All occupy small suites. There are two suites on each floor, except the top which is somewhat of a penthouse. Trumbell hired it. He's the son of C. K. Trumbell, the steel manufacturer. The upper floors are reached by an automatic elevator. There is a fire escape on the outside rear of the building."

"Possibly one of the students on the lower floors, eh?"

The little man's jaw set firmly. "I repeat, my boys are above reproach."

"Okay, okay. Let's get out there and have a look around."

The building was one of many of similar architecture located in a quiet, residential section of the city not far from the university. Before entering, Haynes led the detective around back and showed him the fire escape. The type was familiar. Its last section was hung suspended some 20 feet above the ground, automatically lowering under the weight of a person descending.

"It would be a simple matter," Haynes pointed out, "for anyone with a short ladder to reach the lower step."

"Apple pie to a second story man," Stokes agreed. "Let's have a look inside."

Haynes seemed worried. "You won't disturb any of my boys—"

"All of 'em," Stokes interrupted. "And unless you stop beefing and get co-operative I'll do it in a manner you won't like."

"Open the door of the rear apartment with your pass key," Stokes directed. "Don't knock. And never mind the front apartments."

As the door opened a youth, sitting in a chair with his feet on the bed, looked up from a book he was reading. Beside him on a table a radio played softly. The youth looked startled, switched off the radio and got to his feet. "Say—"

"Take it easy, son," Stokes said briskly. "There's been a robbery. I'm from police headquarters."

"A robbery? Here? In this house?"

"That's right. Relax." Stokes crossed quickly to the window, opened it and looked out. Withdrawing his head, he stood a moment in deep thought. Something was wrong and he couldn't place his finger on it.

"Haynes, let me have your pass keys. You two stay here. I'm going upstairs myself."

Haynes opened his mouth to protest. Stokes jerked the keys out of his hands and went out, slamming the door. Twenty minutes later he was back.

"Well," Haynes snapped, "are you satisfied? I suppose you've succeeded in creating a disturbance all over the house."

"Shut up!" snapped Stokes. "Haynes, go out and press the button that calls the elevator. I walked down from the top floor. Go on! Do as I say!"

When Haynes returned to the apartment after carrying out the order he stopped short, gaping. The youth was laying on the floor, blood streaming from a wound in his head, and Stokes was clamping handcuffs to his wrists.

"He got nasty and I had to clip him," the detective explained matter-of-factly. "That theory of yours about someone gaining entrance by means of the fire escape and a ladder was cockeyed. The ground beneath the fire escape showed no evidence of a ladder or anything else being used. That meant it was an inside job. When we entered this apartment the kid here snapped off the radio a little too quickly. It wasn't natural. Upstairs, I found all the other apartments deserted, so I switched on a radio, then worked the elevator. The electric motor created plenty of static. A man who checked his timing could tell how many floors the elevator was descending by listening to the static on his radio. And that would be a dead give-away that Trumbell was out, because he's the only one who lives on the sixth? Get it?"

TO YOUR Good Health

by DR. JAMES W. BARTON
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

SUN AND HEAT STROKES

Dr. Barton

Two emergencies that come with hot weather are sunstroke and heatstroke. Whether the individual is working or at rest the sun may cause dizziness, headache, dryness of the skin, and difficulty in breathing. Suddenly the patient falls, convulsions occur, and sometimes is apparently completely paralyzed. There is flushing of the face, delirium, nausea, vomiting, a coated tongue, and high temperature—skin hot and red. This condition is called sunstroke or thermic fever. The patient is placed in a shady spot and ice or cold water is applied continuously to the surface of the whole body. Ice pack if available is placed behind ears and about the head.

However, what is called heat exhaustion is now more often seen than sunstroke. Heat exhaustion usually occurs where the individual is working hard amid great heat in a place where the ventilation is poor. There is a feeling of great weakness and the first thing noticed is that there is no perspiration on the skin which is very hot and dry, temperature below normal and pulse feeble.

In heatstroke the patient should be disrobed to the underwear and placed on his back in some cool shady place. Ice bags are applied to the head and both armpits. The use of hand fans (or towels) to stir up air currents is advisable. When the patient recovers consciousness he should be given increasing quantities of cold water by mouth and a quarter teaspoon of table salt with each glass of water.

In what is called heat exhaustion, which is a mild form of heatstroke, the body temperature instead of being high, as in heatstroke, may be below normal. Skin is pale and clammy and moist, breathing rapid and shallow. Treatment consists in placing patient in a cool place and giving him cool drinks of fruit juices and a quarter teaspoonful (15 grains) of table salt every three hours.

Getting the patient to a cool spot and giving cool drinks and table salt (to keep water in the body tissues) is the main thought in the treatment of heat stroke and heat exhaustion. It is the great loss of water and salt from the body tissues that brings on the symptoms.

Allergies Grouped Into Three Classes

Hay fever is a form of allergy—being sensitive to certain substances.

A simple definition of allergy is given by Dr. H. K. Detweiler, Toronto, in the Bulletin of the Academy of Medicine, Toronto. "Allergy is a condition of some individuals in which certain tissues react in an altered manner in the presence of specific substances (usually protein in nature) which, to the ordinary individual, are without effect."

Dr. Detweiler states that there are three main or major types of allergy or over-sensitiveness. These are (1) atopic allergy, (2) bacterial allergy, (3) contact allergy. Examples of atopic allergy are hay fever, pollen asthma, or asthma due to sensitiveness to protein of foods, furs, feathers, dander of animals, or various substances such as house dust, orris root, linseed.

Examples of bacterial allergy are tuberculin-sensitive individuals and patients suffering from asthma caused by sinusitis, bronchitis, and other infections.

Examples of contact allergy are skin inflammations due to contact with plants, chemicals and metals.

What about heredity as a cause of allergy? The atopic type if not really hereditary shows a definite tendency to follow the laws of heredity; bacterial allergy has not been definitely established as being of a hereditary nature; contact allergy is not hereditary.

What about treatment? Is the injection of pollen vaccine effective in preventing hay fever? Does avoiding using or small doses of the foods causing allergy prevent asthma or other allergic symptoms? Can asthmatic attacks be prevented by "desensitizing" these individuals with extracts of house dust, animal and other substances?

The great majority of these patients can obtain relief if they are patient enough to submit to the various tests necessary.

Increase Sea Harvest

By adding fertiliers to sea water, thus increasing the growth of the plants on which fish feed, marine research workers have increased the weight of fish ten times.

Important fish tests are being carried out in a small lake in the west of Scotland under Sir John Graham Kerr, noted marine biologist.

Scientists are working on the theory that sea fish can be multiplied by increasing their sea-plant food by adding nitrogen and phosphates.

Send Your Pulpwood TO WAR!

REMEMBER? THEN ACT ! !

Remember when the Japs and Nazis laughed at us, called us soft and decadent, and bragged how they'd biff the daylights out of the democracies?

Remember how they tried to deliver a sneak knock-out punch and had the peace terms all figured out for us? They were to be the lords; we the slaves.

You do remember, don't you? Of course you do. Made you mad, didn't it? It made the whole country mad.

Well, the Japs and Nazis have been feeling the sting of our might. Every American contributed to the sting. And every American will contribute still more to bigger and deadlier wallops already in the making.

Our individual contributions to the war effort are beginning to count. Our work in war plants, airplane spotting in our spare time, air-raid warden duty, over-subscribing two war loans, giving our scrap metal, waste fats — all these things are beginning to show. But more is needed, much more.

Right now we are asked to put our money into War Bonds to keep our war machine rolling in high—to speed victory.

While the Third War Loan drive is on, we have a fine chance to take another wham at the Axis—by cutting pulpwood, and putting the money we make into War Bonds. The country needs pulpwood—badly. And we need money to run the war.

So get out that ax and grind it sharp. Then get going. Every cord of pulpwood you cut will hasten the day of victory. It will accelerate that speed if you put your pulpwood money into War Bonds—Do it NOW!

Can it be done? The answer is in your ax!

LEE AMUSEMENT COMPANY PRESENTS RIDES

The Lee Amusement Company is going full speed on the vacant lot behind Clanton Motors this week. The Street Fair features only rides and is clean throughout. This entertainment comes to Clanton each year and Mr. Lee is to be complimented on the good clean entertainment he provides for the children and grown-ups. The show will remain throughout the week.

DEDICATED WAR BOND TO PFC. MARVIN ELLISON

Mrs. W. M. (Frances Lula) Paterson of Clanton Route 2, purchased War Bond in honor of her nephew, Pfc. Marvin Ellison, who is now on he battle front somewhere near Sicily, this week. This was a very patriotic deed as well as the satisfaction of helping the boys who are doing the fighting. May other persons follow in Mrs. Patterson's footsteps.

Pfc. Marvin Ellison is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Ellison of Clanton Route 1.

BOND DEDICATED TO A-C CHALMERS H. JONES

A Bond was purchased on Saturday by Miss Mary Courtney Jones, and dedicated to her cousin, Chalmers Heath Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Span Jones, Mulberry, Ala.

Chalmers is an Aviation Cadet in the Naval Air Corps. He enlisted in the Marines November, 1941, and was stationed at Parris Island, S. C., for sixteen months. During this interval he was made Drill Instructor. Later he was transferred to the Naval Air Corps, and ordered to report to the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, where he received his pre-flight training. At Peru, Ind., he successfully passed his primary training.

Now stationed at Pensacola, Fla., Cadet Jones is working hard, so that upon the completion of his course there, he may become a pilot in the Naval Air Corps.

Here's hoping, for those gold wings of the Navy, Chalmers!

TO THE PEOPLE OF CHILTON COUNTY

The Third War Loan Quota of $554,000.00 for Chilton County is still far from the goal, in fact, we have about $300,000.00 yet to raise between now and September 30th. This shows that the idle dollars of our citizens are not responding to the call of our Country. Is it possible that we do not yet realize that money is as much a fighting unit in this gigantic struggle for the preservation of our very liberties and freedom as our fighting men? Can it be that many of us are willing for our fighting men to offer their lives to preserve our heritage from our forefathers and we are not willing to lend our money at a good rate of interest for this same great cause?

Surely we have not thought it through. If we had, I can't for the life of me, believe that even one of us who has an idle dollar would hesitate to come forward at the earliest possible moment and lend it.

There is enough idle money in Chilton County to meet our quota several times over. You want this war to end in Victory for our Nation and our Allies? I know you do, because there is "None with soul so dead, who ne'er to himself hath said, 'This is my own, my Native Land.' "

Every dollar that does not help our side, weakens it just that much, and weakening our side strengthens our enemies' side, therefore, if your dollar remains idle in this struggle it becomes an actual enemy to us and a friend to Hitler and Hirohito. THINK IT THROUGH AND FOLLOW YOUR CONSCIENCE is my earnest plea, and the plea of all brave, liberty-loving Americans.

J. C. PATTILLO.

IISS P.-T. A. ALLEN WINS ST PLACE IN SHOW .T HAYNEVILLE

OND DEDICATED TO CAPT. OSEPH W. MOORE

The Dedication Bonds which are a art of Chilton County's effort to put the Third War Loan over the top, are beginning to make a nice showing. These bonds are purchased by any individual and dedicated to the soldier r sailor of one's choice.

The honor of the first Dedication Bond sold in Clanton, goes to Capt. oseph W. Moore, 0-417863, APO 923, 72nd Station Hospital, in care Postmaster, San Francisco, Calif. Capt. Moore is stationed with the Medical Corps in Australia, and has been overseas for the past year. The Bond was $1,000.00 Bond and was purchased y his mother, Mrs. J. Watts Moore.

QUOTAS SET BY WAR BOND COMMITTEE

At a meeting held at the Courthouse Tuesday night it was voted that each Town and Community in the County be given a quota to raise so that these districts might have a goal to work to.

Wednesday morning Mr. J. C. Pattillo, County Chairman, and Judge L. H. Reynolds worked out the following quotas: Clanton $185,000; Thorsby $10,000; Jemison $10,000; Maplesville $10,000; Verbena $10,000; Stanton $1,500; Cooper $1,000; Mt. Creek $1,000; and the State of Alabama $62,500. This amount would enable Chilton County to reach its goal of $554,000. There is yet $290,500 to be raised in this Drive.

UNITY BAPTIST ASSOCIATION TO MEET AT PROVDENCE

The Unity Baptist Association will meet in its 89th session with the Providence Church, six miles east of Clanton, September 28th and 29th. FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

The way we hear it: Dock Smith, he Union man, was the only man in own to report at the Courthouse to vork a day on a farm. Picked 221 ounds of cotton for L. R. Armstrong. . .Sleepy Miller is in the hospital . . .L. D. Easterling was home week efore last and we failed to mention he fact. Now he says he ain't going o kill me those two Japs like he romised. Going to kill them for omebody else. . . .A most appreciated etter from Louie Smith. At Camp Fannin, Texas, and according to Louie, doing fine. . . .Patrolmen Ed Propst and Luther Kendricks can stop more good motorists to question. Our secret ambition is to hide behind their car some day and find out what the questions are. . . .Houston Nivens and Jeff Pilgreen and the Power Crew sure had a night of Clanton last Thursday night

What could be nicer than the Street Fair in town this week? Nothing ut rides It affords young and old a little recreation that is sorely needed in these times. The only ones who ould kick are the folks living near nough to hear that awful music that lways goes with a Carnival. It is good, clean, wholesome fun, and a little of it along with our Bond buying and taxpaying won't do any one much harm.

Here's one that will make you take your hat off: Herman Todd, who is employed by Chilton Truck & Implement Company, takes his Bond buying seriously. Tuesday morning he ought three $100.00 Bonds. This was esides several $25 Bonds that he's een buying along as he could. He akes care of a family of six. His income will average less than twenty dollars per week. He is putting his Country FIRST.

Our old friend, Ralph Bryan, who or years operated Royal Cleaners, is ow in the Insurance Business. He is agent for Standard Life Insurance Company of Jackson, Miss. Ralph plans to open an office here within he next few months. He is well known, well liked in the County and the Company is fortunate in getting him for the place.

We just learned this morning that our favorite Tax Collector, Jack Hayes, will be home soon. We learned that the Doctors at Emory University Hospital, where he has been for several weeks, have found the rouble and will be able to save his sight. That comes under the head of 'Good News."

Mrs. Hugh Jones asks that we thank the ladies who served so faithfully all day last Saturday at the several booths about town selling War Bonds. She also stated that many more volunteers are needed and would be appreciated. The County is far behind in this Bond quota and the help of all is needed badly.

Seems that we heard somewhere hat the stores would start today Wednesday) closing again at 1:00 o'clock, for the duration. The banks already close each Wednesday at oon, and the store keepers evidently got in the habit during the Summer nonths and found that a little rest once in a while doesn't hurt anyone and voted to do it again. Of course this ain't official, we only heard it.

GT. B. L. VANCE HONORED WITH THREE DEDICATION BONDS

Mrs. Albert Headley purchased a 100.00 Bond and dedicated it to Sgt. B. L. Vance 34017180, Co. A., 738 MP Bn., APO 823, in care Postmaster, San Francisco, Calif.

Mr. Grover, the father of Sgt. Vance, who is serving his country overseas, also purchased and dedicated to his son, two $100.00 Bonds.

Mr. Vance is buying more than one Bond out of each bale of cotton he ells. Are you, Reader, sending a like message to our sons?

Strongly Intrenched Nazi Divisions Lock Allies in Hand-to-Hand Combat As Cost of Italian Invasion Mounts; Germans Continue Retreat in Russia

ITALY:
Bloody Fighting

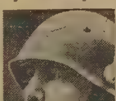
Twenty miles of beach below Salerno, where American troops first set foot on the European mainland, was a raging inferno, with battle-hardened German troops fighting to throw the Allies back into the sea.

Streaming ashore from their barges with supplies speedily unloaded, Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth army of American, British and Canadian troops ran into a stout German defense that made good use of the unfavorable terrain.

High in the hills above the beaches, the Germans 88-mm. artillery poured fire all along the landing strip; nestled behind orange and apple trees, and hidden in the tall sweet corn, their machine gunners worked, and summing up all of their experience, their panzer divisions stabbed into our lines, exposing the backs of the infantry turning to meet the attack to their rifle fire.

But in bloody fighting, the Allied units struggled bitterly to hold their ground, throwing their own tank divisions against the Germans, and locking in hand-to-hand combat with the enemy when he drove to the beaches. One-hundred miles to the south, the British Eighth army beat forward in an effort to join with the sorely pressed Fifth army.

Restore Il Duce



Benito Mussolini

Whisked from a mountainous plateau east of Rome by German paratroopers, according to a romantic dispatch from Hitler's headquarters, stubby, grizzled Benito Mussolini, architect of Fascism, was reinstalled in northern Italy to try to rebuild the broken ruins of his edifice.

As Mussolini assumed the task of heading a national government which the Germans set up in his name, the Duce's tough old Fascist militia reappeared in their black shirts on the streets of Italy's northern cities, and re-established themselves in control.

Once the most popular man in Italy, Mussolini's first acts were reported to be abrogation of Marshal Badoglio's unconditional surrender to the Allies as it might affect that part of the country under his dominance, and dissolution of the monarchy, with which he faithfully cooperated until it broke his power.

PORK:
Production High

With a hog population of over 100 million for the year, pork production is expected to approximate 12 billion pounds for the 12 months ending next June 30.

Of the 12 billion pounds, between 7 and 8 billion are to be allotted to civilians. The army will receive 1 billion and the remainder is marked for our Allies, notably Great Britain and Russia.

Some effect on total pork production is expected as a result of the government's support of prime light weights in an effort to conserve scarce feed supplies, and the $14.75 ceiling, Chicago basis, recently established.

FOOD PRICES:
Down 2.3%

Chester Bowles

Living costs will drop 2.3 per cent to within 2 per cent of September, 1942, levels with the government's subsidization of apples, oranges, potatoes, onions, peanut butter, lard, shortening and cooking oils.

According to the general manager of the OPA, Chester Bowles, cost of the program is expected to total 100 million dollars, which will be in addition to the 400 million dollars already being expended to reduce meat and butter prices.

In explaining the program, Bowles said that the government will pay some of the transportation costs of oranges, and will buy the entire potato crop and resell it at lower prices. Subsidies for peanut butter, lard and other shortenings will be paid to processors. Efforts will be made to cut prices of fresh fruits and vegetables 15 per cent below last winter's levels, Bowles said.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:
New Guinea Victory

Cut off from communication from the north by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's daring envelopment of Lae with sea and air borne troops, the stubborn Japanese garrison of Salamaua abandoned that New Guinea base.

Beating their way through the thick jungle northward, remnants of the garrison sought to join up with the enemy forces at Lae. But there, no better fate awaited them, as airborne U. S. paratroopers advanced on that base from the west, while Australian units pressed in from the east, where they had been landed by Allied naval forces.

Built in plantations on both sides of the place, Lae's defenses came under the artillery fire of heavy Allied guns, and Allied troops moved slowly forward against earthen machine-gun and rifle nests. The New Guinea and Solomon islands conquests meant the encirclement of the great Jap air and naval base of Rabaul, New Britain, and the anticipated neutralization of that center for future South Pacific action.

RUSSIA:
Move Forward

Following their plan of defensive action to conserve their strength to meet the shock of the Allies' charge in the west, the Germans fell steadily back toward the broad, winding Dnieper river all along the front.

Surging forward, Red troops entered Bryansk, east of the Dnieper's headwaters, once the Germans' key communication point on the central front.

To the south of Bryansk, Russian troops plowed closer to the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, which stands on the west bank of the Dnieper. And still farther down the river, the Reds moved in on Dnepropetrovsk, whose Dnieper dams supplied the power for the southern Ukraine.

In shortening their lines, the Germans surrendered rich farm land and territory abounding in raw material. They did, however, destroy all factories.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

EXCHANGED: According to a roundabout statement from Tokyo, the exchange ship Teia Maru has sailed from Yokohama with 1,250 American civilians, bound for Mormugao, Portuguese India. The Gripsholm left New York on September 2, carrying 1,330 Japanese to the same port, where an exchange will be effected, it has been reported.

SHEEP: The largest run of sheep since 1921 passed through the Omaha livestock market recently, when 48,000 animals were sold. Dealers attribute the large influx principally to fear of ranchers in the West that they cannot find sufficient herders to tend the sheep over the winter, condition of range pastures also were said to be about 83%.

Willed $72,000,000

Marshall Field

On September 28, Marshall Field III, grandson of Chicago's pioneer merchant prince, will be 50 years old. On that day, he will receive the residue of his illustrious grandfather's estate, amounting to approximately $72,000,000.

Added to about $93,000,000 previously obtained under the terms of the will, the September 28 bequest will make Field one of the richest men in the United States. He is the father of five children.

Through investments made by trustees of the estate, Field will have an interest in such outstanding Chicago realty enterprises as the 44-story Field skyscraper; the 38-story Pittsfield building, and the 22-story Conway structure. Through Field's own initiative, the trustees also erected the 600-family Garden Apartments on Chicago's near North side, in one of the first slum-clearance projects in the country.

DADS' DRAFT:
Seek Others First

While congress sought to untangle the complicated manpower situation state draft boards were ordered to make an extensive inventory of all available single and childless married men to assure their induction before fathers.

Under the order, all of a state's available single and childless married men will be pooled as a whole and will be drafted before fathers. Quotas of individual boards will be suspended, so that those with more men available will be able to go over their allotments, while those with less, will be allowed to fall under.

Congressional demands for the postponement of the fathers' draft inspired efforts for a general investigation of the whole manpower situation, to determine approximate military and industrial needs.

Employment Drops

In the face of the demand for congressional action on the manpower situation, the department of labor reported total non-farm employment in August at 38,295,000, a drop of 88,000 from July.

For the first time since the wartime shipbuilding program was inaugurated, employment dropped in the shipyards. Heavier declines were recorded in the construction and service industries.

In war industry as a whole, employment increased 29,000. Approximately 9,000 less workers were reported in non-manufacturing fields.

According to Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, men workers during the next few months will no more than replace those entering the armed services and auxiliaries. However, she said, many can be switched to war production from less essential industry.

BANKS:
Double U. S. Holdings

Federal Reserve member banks held 44½ billion dollars of government obligations, June 30, almost double the amount of a year ago.

At the same time, it was announced that interest rates on short term commercial paper rose to an average of 3 per cent, compared with 2.76 in March.

On June 30, total loans and investments of the banks amounted to more than 67 billion dollars, approximately 20 billion dollars more than a year ago.

WORLD COURT:
Proposed by Hull

Cordell Hull

Submission of all international problems for arbitration and the use of force to check aggression were proposed by Secretary of State Cordell Hull for maintenance of world peace.

For problems of a political character, Hull advocated the establishment of agencies which would mediate the various differences. For problems of a legal nature, he suggested creation of a World Court, operating on principles of law.

"But to assure peace," Hull declared, "there must be means for restraining aggressors . . . . The peacefully inclined nations must be willing to accept responsibility for this task in accordance with their respective capacities."

Although each nation has its own peculiar interests, it still has enough in common with other countries to fight for maintenance of peace, Hull said.

BOOTLEGGING:

With bonded liquor scarce and subject to high federal, state and local taxes, the bootlegger is coming back, asserts M. L. Curtis, president of the National Alcoholic Beverage Control association, and a member of the Iowa state liquor commission.

The situation threatens to create a "bootleggers' paradise," said Mr. Curtis. The old-time bootlegger is already offering "hootch" at bargain prices, he said.

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

INGRID BERGMAN'S superb performance in "For Whom the Bell Tolls" is one of those things that people remember for years. It's the more notable because in that opus she was up against really tough competition. Katina Paxinou, the talented Greek actress who plays "Pilar," can dominate any scene without half trying, and the list of male actors reads like an all-star cast. Incidentally, after 100 performances the picture was still selling out at all performances in New York; that meant that for eight solid weeks the public had been trooping to the theater to see just that picture—no news reel, no comedy, no other attraction.

INGRID BERGMAN

Mentioning Ingrid Bergman reminds me that in "Gaslight," which she is making with Charles Boyer—who plays a most villainous villain—you'll see Tarquin Olivier, son of Laurence Olivier and Jill Esmond, the clever and attractive actress who was his wife before he married Vivian Leigh. Young Tarquin is only five, so he's starting his career fairly early.

It's a nice break that Gail Russell, new in films, gets. She's making "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay," playing one of the principal roles, and Paramount has given her a new term contract and the starring part in "Her Heart in Her Throat," scheduled first for Loretta Young. Looks as if Loretta liked her role in "And Now Tomorrow" better. "Her Heart in Her Throat" is a mystery.

A curious soft slapping sound heard occasionally during rehearsals of Morton Downey's afternoon radio program, usually just after he had finished a song, has finally been eliminated. Radio engineers, checking on the origin of the sound, discovered that it was caused by Downey's thumbing his bright red suspenders. He began doing it after he was warned not to jingle coins while he was singing. Now he wears a belt in the studio, and empties his pockets before he steps up to a microphone.

It's no wonder that producers get jittery. Michael O'Shea was riding a motor scooter, crashed into a stage wall—and landed in a hospital, with severe bruises, to put it mildly. That held up shooting on United Artists' "Jack London," as he was to appear in every remaining scene.

Joseph Cotten, narrator and acting star of "America—Ceiling Unlimited," and greatly in demand in Hollywood, is billed as the Great Joseph, "The Wizard of the South," in Orson Welles' Mercury Wonder show; it's done nightly under canvas, in Hollywood, for the edification of service men; they're entertained — and highly — by feats of magic, and all for nothing!

It was a thrill for Dinah Shore recently when her new picture, "Thank Your Lucky Stars," was sneak-previewed at WSM's Air Castle studio in Nashville, Tenn., where Dinah started her singing career. All her old friends came. Her new commercial starring series starts on CBS September 30, and will be heard Thursday evenings at 9:30, Eastern War Time.

Back in the 1920s Gertrude Lawrence made a guest appearance on a radio variety show for which the sponsors paid her 20 pounds a minute—about $100 American money. It established a financial record. When she returns to the air with her new show, September 30, on the Blue Network, she'll get so much more that—though the figure's still a secret—it will establish another record.

ODDS AND ENDS—When Don Ameche, host of the "What's New?" show heard Saturdays over the Blue network, calls his wife "Honey" it's not only a term of endearment, but an abbreviation of her name, Honore . . . After all that talk about retiring, Fred Allen returns to the air next month, but this year the show will emanate from Hollywood and he'll take a flyer in pictures . . . Trudy Erwin had some earrings made from two antique gold thimbles, wore 'em to rehearsal of the Big Crosby show, and lost one—and finally found Crosby wearing it . . . War or no war, Ted Husing will be announcing football games over CBS this fall.

ON THE HOME FRONT
with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

MANY young homemakers are gaily setting forth to buy junk furniture for remodeling. The first thing they learn is to consider each piece not for what it is but for what it may be. The 40-year-old buffet shown here was picked up.

The sketch shows how the main part of the buffet was remodeled to make a chest under a window in a combination sewing and guest room. A wood chisel is useful for removing carving that is glued on and either putty or plastic wood may be used for filling screw holes and other holes. If the piece is varnished, it is best to rub it down with sandpaper to remove the high gloss before painting. What became of the mirror and legs of this buffet is another story to appear soon.

In the Navy a floor is a "deck," doors are "bulkheads," downstairs is "below," and a cigarette is a "Camel." At least, Camel is the favorite cigarette among Navy men, as it is among men in the Army, Marines, and Coast Guard. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) And a carton of Camels is a favorite gift. Though there are now Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former feature editor of a North Carolina newspaper, has been inducted into the army and has completed a good portion of his basic training at Fort Bragg. Classified as a cook and with plenty of extra KP duty because of his failure at times to grasp some of the fundamentals of army life, he has become quite familiar with the Company kitchen. He has learned the finer points of "goldbricking" and has mastered the elements of army slang. As we pick up his story here, Hargrove is listening to a bus driver in a nearby town expand on his former army career. Hargrove suspects (and rightly so) that the truth is being stretched. The bus driver speaks:

CHAPTER XIII

"'Well,' he said, hemming and hawing a little, 'three stripes means he's just a plain buck sergeant. Six stripes is a master sergeant. I'm a supply sergeant. That's two grades above a buck sergeant and one grade below a master sergeant. I'm expecting to be a master sergeant in a month or so. That's as high as you can get.'

"I didn't say anything for a while; just sat there looking like I was letting it soak in. Then I asked him, real calm-like and ignorant, 'How many stripes does a private first class have?'

"So help me, he looked like he was going to choke for a while. Then he came back with a snappy answer in a flash.

"'Well,' he said, 'first-class privates have one stripe, just like us supply sergeants, only their stripe is bottom-upward from ours. Their stripes point down.'

"Well, sir, I thought I'd die. I almost popped trying to keep from laughing, but I kept a straight face. Then I said, 'Things sure have changed since I was in the Army. Back then, three or four years ago, supply sergeants were just plain buck sergeants and first-class privates were the only one-stripe men.'

"'Yeah,' he said, sort of weak-like, 'time changes a lot of things.'

"That was all he had to say. He looked sort of foolish and pulled the cord to get off at the next stop.

"So there was another bull session shot to hell. Maybe it was for the best, though. I didn't have a chance against a fellow with that much talent."

I ran out of cigarettes this afternoon near my old cooks' battery, so I thought I'd drop in on First Sergeant Goldsmith, who smokes the same brand that I do. Sergeant Goldsmith is the old type of top sergeant, with a heart of GI shoe leather and a voice that would put the stoutest bugle to shame.

"Great gods and little paychecks," he railed. "Look what's loose again! What's the latest, little man, or aren't reporters supposed to know?"

"The only news I've heard today," I told him, helping myself to a coffin nail from his desk, "is that they're sending all the first sergeants in the Replacement Center to Panama for hard-labor service detachments. Polish your brass and you might make acting corporal before the war's over."

"Oh, it's lovely to run into an old top sergeant who can't put you on kitchen police when you sass back at him."

"You're a sweet little lad, Hargrove," he purred. "We really do miss you here. When you were here, I never had to worry about where I was going to get another man when there was a stovepipe to be cleaned or a street to be swept. Now I have to go and search around—search, mind you—for someone who's been a bad little boy. Never had that trouble when you were here."

"Sergeant," I told him, propping my feet on his wastebasket, "you never miss the water until it's gone under the bridge. This battery owes a lot to me. Look out there at that grass growing in front of the orderly room. That grass wouldn't be there—much less be that green—if I hadn't spent time and labor sprinkling it with fertilizer. And think how much cleaner the windows were when I was here to wash every one of them every week. I'll bet you haven't had a clean floor in the battery since I laid down my mop."

"How's sergeant Ooton making out with his grocery budget?" I asked. "Trying to feed you on forty-two cents a day? The last time I saw him, he was working out plans to feed you on Buncombe County turnip greens or pay you to eat at the Service Club."

"Oh, that," he said. "I've saved so much on cigarettes since you left the battery that I could afford to eat uptown now if I wanted to. And let's leave any remarks about Buncombe County out of this. And let's leave your feet out of my wastebasket."

From now on I must deny myself one of the fundamental rights and joys of mankind. I must quit bumming matches from those near and dear to me—that is, if I want them to remain near and dear to me. Whenever I ask anyone around Center Headquarters—even Mulvehill or Bishop or Bushemi—for a match, I get one of two answers, both of which are getting very tiresome by now. I hear either "What's the matter? Has your fire gone out?" or "Just light your cigarette on one of our conflagrations; there should be a small arson in yonder corner."

Since I am a patient and long-suffering child, I make no scathing remarks in return for these jaded witticisms. I merely shrug my frail shoulders pathetically and seek greener pastures. It isn't so bad, their refusing the match. The worst part of it is the reminder of an incident which might well be forgotten. The incident is of no consequence, but it might as well come off my chest.

Being a slave to the despoiler of human health and well-being, the cigarette, I still have a fondness for an occasional switch to a pipe. I don't especially enjoy the taste of pipe tobacco, and I don't believe even the most avid pipe smoker especially cares for it. Most of them like me, merely like the feel of a pipe in their mouths and the dignity and solemnity a pipe gives them when they punctuate their conversations by jabbing the air with it.

Smoking a pipe only occasionally, I still have not become overly proficient at keeping the little things burning. When I buy a can of tobacco, I buy a five cent box of country matches with it. Half my smoke is tobacco; the other half is Georgia pine smoke from the matchsticks.

I was busy today typing out a story, and I had lit my pipe for about the twenty-second time. I threw the match into the wastebasket and forgot all about the whole thing. I was absorbed in my work.

I noticed by degrees that our office was becoming lighter and warmer. I noted the fact with a rich feeling of comfort, but no great interest in finding out the cause. It wasn't until I reached for another match to light that pipe again that I noticed my wastebasket. The thing had in it a cheerful little blaze bright enough to take action photographs on a moonless night.

There was nothing to get excited about, I told the remainder of the public relations staff, the sergeant major's corps of assistants, and the filing department. I nonchalantly put my foot into the basket and started stamping out the fire. The thing would have worked, too, except that the length of my foot was greater than the diameter of the wastebasket. The foot stuck and I could not stamp.

Corporal Sager, of Plans and Training, leaped to the rescue, pried the foot from the basket, grabbed the basket and sped away to the water cooler. I followed him and poured myself a cup of water. I still saw no cause for excitement.

To the bystanders' catcalls, unseemly laughter, and accusations of arson, I turned a fatherly ear and a quieting voice. I explained patiently that setting fire to wastebaskets was an ancient and honored pastime in the newspaper world. I told them that one of the best newspaper men North Carolina has ever seen—"Uncle John" Dickson, former city editor of the News—used to set his wastebasket on fire at least twice a week by tossing cigarettes or burning matches into it. It was a mark of certain industry, a sign that a man was wrapped up in his work.

Maury Sher, my old buddy when we were together in the student cooks' battery, had been on an extended furlough. Before he returned, I had left on a three-day pass for Charlotte. We had not got together for two or three weeks, so I went over to his battery to look him up.

The battery street was almost empty; the mess-hall door was locked. The mess sergeant was nowhere to be seen. Finally I found a soldier who had seen Sergeant Sher in his room, so I looked for him there.

The sergeant lay on his lazy back on a stilted bunk in his cadre room, reading Dorothy Parker. The windows of the room had been equipped with flimsy green curtains, and partially deflated holiday balloons fluttered against them. On the wall above the bed hung a small oil painting of a forest, with an icy white mountain in the background. A writing table had been installed and on a shelf in over his bunk were a reading lamp, a small radio, and a neat array of books.

I stood there surveying the place for a while. "What in the sweet name of military hardship have you got here?" I asked him. "All this place needs is a couple of Morris chairs and a sign reading, 'What is home without a mother?' "

"Beginning to look nice, ain't it?" he said. "Just a few minor improvements here and there. Know where I can pick up a small upright piano at a good price?"

I looked over the room again and my eye fell on the resplendent forest scene. "Where'd you get this canvas knickknack? It's an original, isn't it?"

"It ain't nothing else but," he said. "Painted by a friend of mine up in Columbus. Guy knocks them off like that in about twenty minutes. How do you like it?"

Aside from the fact that the waterfall is a little frothy and the mountain looks like something from a mentholatum advertisement, it would do credit to any mess sergeant's room in the whole Replacement Center."

"You didn't notice this," he said, lifting himself lazily from the bunk. From the table he took an ordinary-looking beer can with an extra lid on it. "John Bull Beer," he said. "Can't buy it anywhere except in my family's restaurant in Ohio and Pennsylvania."

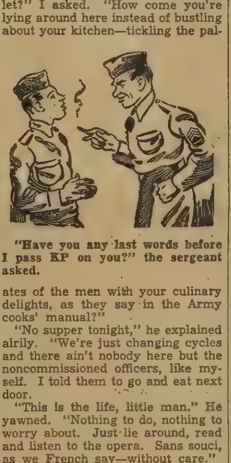
He lifted the top lid, revealing a businesslike cigarette lighter. I took the can, struck the flint and a roaring blaze leaped at me. It burned merrily away.

"Not bad, huh? Good advertising scheme."

"It should come in handy," I told him, "anytime the furnace goes blah. That little conflagration would heat a whole barracks in three minutes flat."

He twisted the dial of his radio and a high-pitched feminine wail bounced off the far wall. "I've been listening to the opera most of the afternoon—The Magic Flute."

"What happened to the magic skillet?" I asked. "How come you're lying around here instead of bustling about your kitchen—tickling the palates of the men with your culinary delights, as they say in the Army cooks' manual?"



"Have you any last words before I pass KP on you?" the sergeant asked.

"No supper tonight," he explained airily. "We're just changing cycles and there ain't nobody here but the noncommissioned officers, like myself. I told them to go and eat next door.

"This is the life, little man." He yawned. "Nothing to do, nothing to worry about. Just lie around, read and listen to the opera. Sans souci, as we French say—without care."

The first sergeant looked over his glasses with a rather unpleasant gleam in his eyes. He glanced significantly at the top of my head, so I removed my cap. The first sergeant adjusted himself in his chair and cleared his throat.

"Private Hargrove," he began slowly and deliberately, "the government of the United States, to whom no task seems impossible, has tackled the job of pulling you a little of the way out of your abysmal ignorance. With complete faith that heaven will help them in this job, they have begun a series of lectures about why you are being trained to fight, whom you are being trained to fight, and all the other little things you should know."

"Yes, sir," I said hesitantly, running my finger around the inside of my collar. "You mean the radio lectures on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons."

"From four until four-thirty," the first sergeant said. "The entire population has been invited by Upstairs to gather in the mess halls to hear and discuss these lectures. Yesterday afternoon you weren't on hand. Have you any last words before I pass KP on to you?"

"It's a rather long story, sergeant," I began.

"Here we go again," sighed the sergeant. "Have a chair and begin breaking my heart. It will make you feel better to have that off your chest before you go to the kitchen."

"Sergeant," I asked him, "were you ever editor of a high-school newspaper?"

"Is this long story about me or you?" the sergeant asked. "Please continue with your story."

"Well, sir," I continued, "only a high-school editor could know the pain that is in my heart. Only he could sympathize with me. I have gone back to my old job I had years ago. I am again a true high-school editor. I am editor of the Replacement Center section of the Fort Bragg Post."

"Meeting such a dignitary is one of the greatest occasions of my life," the first sergeant said dryly

Good Breads

"I want to know how to make good bread," is a desire expressed often by readers who write in and tell me their problems. Some feel making bread is a matter of good luck, while others are certain that if they just had a good recipe, they could make good bread.

Bread, good bread, is one of the easiest of all baked goods to make. The yeast bread takes longer for the process to be completed, but there is nothing hard about any of the steps. Bear in mind these essentials when baking bread with yeast:

1. Liquids used may be water, milk, diluted evaporated milk, potato water or a mixture of any of these. When using milk, scald and cool to lukewarm.

2. Yeast may be compressed, granular or dry.

3. Sugar is used to help yeast make leavening gas. Salt controls fermentation, gives flavor.

4. Add all flour necessary at the time of mixing, to keep dough from sticking, and to avoid dark streaks in bread.

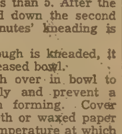
5. Dough is kneaded until smooth and satiny. Curve the fingers over dough and push into it with the palms of the hands. The first kneading is longest—8 to 10 minutes required, never less than 5. After the dough is punched down the second time, only 2 minutes' kneading is necessary.

6. After the dough is kneaded, it is placed in a greased bowl.

Turn the dough over in bowl to grease it entirely and prevent a hard crust from forming. Cover dough with a cloth or waxed paper while rising. Temperature at which dough rises should be 82 degrees.

7. When punching dough down, punch hands into the center of the dough.

8. When dough has been punched down the second time and risen until double in bulk, and the dough retains dents when pressed lightly, it is ready for molding. Knead down and divide in portions for loaves. Cover and let rest 10 to 15 minutes. To mold dough, flatten into a ball, fold lengthwise, and stretch three times the length of the pan. Overlap ends at center and fold lengthwise; flatten again, fold in thirds; seal edge; roll lightly and place in greased pan, fold down.



White Bread.
(Makes 4 1-pound loaves)
¼ cup sugar
2 tablespoons shortening
4 teaspoons salt
4 cups liquid, scalded
1 cake yeast
¼ cup lukewarm water
12 to 14 cups flour

Combine sugar, shortening, salt and liquid in a large mixing bowl. Cool to lukewarm, then add yeast, softened in lukewarm water. Add 4 cups of flour and beat thoroughly. Add remaining flour and mix gradually to a dough that won't stick to hands or bowl. Knead lightly on a floured board 8 to 10 minutes. Place in a greased bowl, cover closely, and let rise until double in bulk (2 to 2½ hours). Punch down and knead 2 minutes. Let rise again until double in bulk. Knead down. Divide into 4 portions for loaves. Cover and let rest 10 to 15 minutes. Mold in loaves. Place in greased pans. Cover closely and let set in a warm place until doubled in bulk and a light touch leaves a dent. Bake in a moderately hot (400 to 425-degrees) oven 40 to 45 minutes.

Bread is done when it shrinks from the pan and sounds hollow when tapped with finger. Remove loaves from pans immediately and cool on rack. For a crisp crust, neither grease nor cover loaves when cooling. For a soft crust, brush top of loaves with fat or salad oil after removing from oven.

Refrigerator Rolls.
(Makes 3 dozen medium-sized rolls)
1 cup milk, scalded
1 cup hot mashed potato
½ cup shortening
¼ cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
1 cake yeast
½ cup lukewarm water
2 beaten eggs
5 to 6 cups flour

Combine milk, potato, shortening, sugar and salt in large mixing bowl. Add yeast, softened in water and eggs. Add 1½ cups flour and beat well. Cover and let stand in a warm place for 1 hour, or until full of bubbles. Stir in 3½ to 4½ cups of flour to make a fairly stiff dough. Knead until smooth on a lightly floured surface. Return to greased mixing bowl. Grease top of dough. Cover and chill in refrigerator. About 1½ hours before serving time, shape desired number of rolls. Place in greased pans; let rise 1 hour. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) 15 to 20 minutes. Punch down unused dough and return to refrigerator.

You don't have time to make yeast rolls or bread? Then you will enjoy a lovely quick bread with a cherry-bran combination that is tops:

All-Bran Cherry Bread.
(Makes 1 loaf)
1 tablespoon butter
¼ cup light brown sugar
⅓ cup chopped maraschino cherries
¼ cup chopped nutmeats

2½ cups flour
4½ teaspoons baking powder
¾ cup sugar
¾ teaspoon salt
1 egg
1¼ cups milk
2 tablespoons melted shortening
1 cup all-bran
⅓ cup chopped maraschino cherries
¼ cup chopped nutmeats

Melt butter in loaf pan and sprinkle sugar, cherries and nutmeats evenly over bottom of pan.

Sift flour with baking powder, sugar and salt. Beat egg, add milk and shortening and stir into flour mixture. Add bran, cherries and nutmeats. Pour over cherry mixture and bake in a moderate oven.

Loaf may be baked omitting cherry-nut mixture on bottom of pan.

Are you having a time stretching meats? Write to Miss Lynn Chambers for practical help, at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Don't forget to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

Lynn Says:

Homemade Breads: Wash the bread box out thoroughly so the bread will stay fresh and moist longer. Every week, the box should have a soapy sudsing, and thorough drying out in the sunshine. Bread sometimes becomes stringy, if a certain germ is allowed to become imbedded in the box through lack of cleanliness.

Have freshly baked rolls often, by making a batch of refrigerator dough to have on hand. Then make a variety of rolls from it to add interest to the menu—caramel rolls, cinnamon twists, poppyseed rolls, orange-filled rolls, etc.

If homemade bread tends to get that day-old flavor, freshen the loaves by sprinkling a little water in a brown bag, placing loaf of bread in it, and into the oven for several minutes.

A VEGETABLE Laxative For Headache, Sour Stomach and Dizzy Spells when caused by Constipation. Use only as directed. 15 doses for only 10 cents. Dr. HITCHCOCK'S LAXATIVE POWDER

"NO MORE 'DOSING' FOR ME!"

Says happy ALL-BRAN eater!

If you've been "dosing" without getting the lasting relief you wanted, this letter may offer you real encouragement:

"Permit me to compliment you on your wonderful product, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN! It certainly lived up to its promises, with me! I'd been taking manufactured laxatives for a long time! But, no more dosing for me, thanks to KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN! I've adopted it as my standby!" Mr. Alexander Klein, 630 West 170th Street, N. Y. C.

Yes, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN really "gets at" one big cause of constipation — lack of sufficient "cellulosic" elements in the diet—because ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's most effective sources of these elements! They work by helping the friendly colonic flora fluff up and lighten the colonic wastes for easy elimination. Not a harsh purgative! Doesn't "sweep you out"! ALL-BRAN is simply a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If this is your trouble eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if you don't find you can give up "dosing" for good! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

THE TIME FOR ACTION

This is the time of the vear that sufferers from hay fever and asthma unite in a fervent wish that the authorities that be will get busv and cut down ragweed and other growths which cause them to suffer.

Chilton Countv undoubtedlv includes some citizens in the amazing number of those who suffer from these diseases. If something like the "good neighbor" policv could be put into effect in this com munity, manv weeds would come down and these sufferers would be spared a part, at least, of their annual affliction.

Municipal authorities everywhere should take cognizance of the situation and do what is possible to prevent the prevalence of ragweed and such growths.

FOR COUNTRY BUTTE

The Office of Price Administration has increased from ten to twelve the number of red stamps required for a pound of creamery butter.

At the same time, farm or country, butter is listed seperately, with a value of six points a pound. Previously, it had the same point value as creamery butter. The difference in point value is designed to spur the movement of farm churned butter to urban markets to relieve the shortage of creamery butter.

For those who prefer "country" butter, and there are many, its reduced point value is an advantage and even those who are not accustomed to farm churned butter may develop a taste that will save them six red stamps a pound.

FREE SCHOOLS BUILD DEMOCRACY

The reopening of the free public schools in Chilton County and elsewhere in the United States is an annual event, taken for granted by pupils and parents alike. It is natural that children should fail to appreciate the education opportunities that are presented to them but it is regrettable that parents fail to appreciate the tremendous significance of our public school system.

One does not have to go back very far, in the history of the world, to reach the time, just a little more than one hundred years ago, when the right to an education was restricted. Even today, in some countries, there is only the slightest effort to provide an educational system, such as we have in the United States under state and federal control.

In the development of democracy, it was inevitable that parents of all classes should insist upon the right of their children to enjoy the opportunity of mental development to the highest possible degree. Moreover the educational system that we support by public taxation, which is open to all citizens and good enough for all people, is an example in democracy. In addition, the schools prepare our boys and girls to become proper citizens of a democratic state.

In the United States, to an extent unequaled elsewhere in the world the public schools are patronized by all classes. The only exception is found in certain private, religious or parochial schools which educate about ten percent of our elementary grade children. In this instance, however, the motive for segration is religious and without class distinction.

SAVES MONEY FOR FARMERS

"Price control has so far saved the farmers of America $1,000,000,000 in living costs," declairs George Myers, an attorney connected with the Office of Price Administration.

Illustrative of what he has in mind the official said that in the last war the price of farm machinery rose 74 per cent; this time the increase has been 7 per cent. The price of fertilizer rose 86 per cent in the last war and only 13 per cent in this war.

The speaker also points out that futher savings to farmers have resulted from the control of operating and maintenance expenses. He estimates that farmers have saved more that $2,000,000,000 because prices have not been permitted to go up as in the last war.

These savings are indirect and hence cannot be thoroughly appreciated. Nevertheless, they are real, Moreover, if control avoids a ruinous inflation of land values there is no telling how many billions of dollars the farmers of this nation will save.

It is only a careless agriculturist who believes that the price of farm products can go up without an advance in the price of other things which the farmer buys. The wise tiller of the soil knows, from past experience, that inflation harms the farmer as much as any other person and he is against it.

Uncle Sam Asks All to Avoid Waste of Electricity

"The War Production Board has proclaimed that maximum war production requires the greatest possible conservation of manpower, transportation, fuel, equipment, and critical material such as copper, steel, tungsten and many others—much greater than has been heretofore accomplished. It believes that this greater conservation can be accomplished by the voluntary cooperation of all citizens of our country in the effort. It has called for the institution of a program to effect savings on all home fronts by the Office of Defense Transportation, the Petroleum Administration for War, the Solid Fuel Administration for War, the Office of War Utilities, and other governmental agencies. These agencies have been developing the details of the conservation program."

J. A. KRUG, Director
Office of War Utilities

WHY There is plenty of electricity for all essential needs. However, much electric power is made in steam electric generating stations. The fuel they use must be hauled. The copper, steel and other critical materials to make new locomotives, cars and trucks are needed for production for the Army and the Navy.

Reduced use of electricity is desirable even in areas served by companies generating partly from water power. Electricity not used in these areas can be transmitted to the areas where fuel and transportation problems are most critical.

Electricity not used means that tons less of fuel will need to be hauled—that freight cars, trucks and barges can be used to haul other essential war materials.

HOW Users of electricity all over the nation are being asked by the Government to curtail their use of electric service. The Government is requesting that, for the period of the emergency be reduced within safety limits and that Commercial Users of Electric Service, Such as Stores, Theaters and Outdoor Business curtail the use of electric service as follows:

White Way Lighting

1. Eliminate daytime indoor and outdoor advertising or display lighting. Limit such lighting from dusk to 10 p.m. Identification signs permitted at night while establishments are open for business, with reduced light.
2. Discontinue indoor and outdoor decorative, ornamental and flood lighting.
3. Eliminate daytime window lighting; reduce at night.
4. Discontinue daytime marquee and entrance lighting; reduce at night.
5. Eliminate daytime outdoor business lighting; reduce at night.
6. Curtail general interior illumination and showcase lighting.
7. Operate air conditioning systems more moderately.
8. Curtail all unnecessary use.

Industrial Users of Electric Service

are requested to curtail their use of electric service wherever possible without reducing production. Our representatives will continue to discuss with our industrial customers ways and means of conserving electric energy without affecting the volume of production.

Residential Users of Electricity are requested to turn off lights, radios and appliances when not needed, and to avoid wasteful practices in the use of refrigerators, ranges, water heaters and other appliances; to refrain from leaving lights burning when away from home.

WHEN These suggestions should be put into effect now, and reduced use of electricity should continue until the need for conservation no longer exists.

GARDENERS SHOULD CONSTRUCT COMPOST HEAPS

As a means of obtaining organic matter for the improvement of garden soil, Chilton county gardeners should construct compost heaps.

A compost heap may be started at any time of the year when waste plant material is readily available, says P. H. Smith, County Agent. He points out that leaves, lawn clippings, weeds and fruit and vegetable trimmings may be obtained although the addition of manure insures a better product.

The essentials to produce compost are fertilizers, lime, and crop residues. If the composting is done on a small scale, a ready-mixed fertilizer is the most practical material to add. Two hundred pounds of this fertilizer will be needed for each ton of dry material used. A small amount of lime, 50 to 100 pounds per ton of dry material, should be added to the compost.

In preparing compost from waste materials, Mr. Smith says the problem is to bring about thorough decomposition as rapidly as possible. It is preferable to build a pen for the compost pile. A pen 10 feet by 10 feet and 6 feet high will hold one ton of dry leaves or other material. One ton of dry leaves or straw will make about 2 and one-half tons of manure.

Put layer of straw or leaves about one foot thick and sprinkle over the surface a suitable portion of fertilizer and then scatter a thin layer of manure or rich loamy soil over the surface to inoculate the compost with decomposing organisms.. Then add other layers until the pile is five to six feet high.

The compost pile should be built in the open and slope to the center so that rain can run into it. The material in the compost pile should be kept wet to hasten decomposition.

Visitors were: Mrs. Ada Williams, Mr. Alvinton Cassel, Mrs. Ida Henon and children, Misses Willie Mae Enfinger and Delene Glenn, Messrs. Virgil and Verdlie Wright.

They entertained the crowd with some good guitar music and singing. At the noon hour a bountiful dinner was spread out under the big pecan trees and everybody seemed to enjoy that mighty well.

Visitors in the afternoon were:

Mr. and Mrs. Alton Baker, Misses Annie, Bobby, Hazel and Emma Pearl Mullins, Mr. and Mrs. Tommie Easterling and little daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Red Fulmer, Mrs. Jim Popwell.

Everybody parted in the afternoon with the report of having a good time, and hoping to meet again next year.—Mrs. Maudie Enfinger.

EASTVIEW

Pfc. Clayton Anderson has just returned to Camp Phillips, Kan., after being on 2 1-2 months maneuvers somewhere in Tennessee and then home on a 15-day furlough. He was gladly welcomed home by his wife, Mildred, who at the present is staying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Henley of Jemison. Pfc. Anderson also had a hearty welcome home by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Anderson. and sister, Louise, of Verbena. After visitng their parents, the couple then visited his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Baker of Verbena, his sister, Mrs. Reedie Powell, of Clanton and several relatives around Verbena. Everyone seemed to enjoy his visit home, as well as he did himself, and hopes he will return again real soon.

Pfc. Anderson was unable to carry his wife back to Camp with him at the present, but plans for her to join him out there in the near future. The couple plans to make their home in Selina, Kan., at that time.

It's a boy without a name so far. We are glad to announce the arrival of a fine baby boy to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Henley of Jemison. It arrived on August 24th and they have not named it yet. This only makes the 11th one, so I guess it is a hard job to name that many. So if anybody knows a good name for it, just drop it's parents a card and tell them about it. seems like they have run out, so let's give them a lift.

Miss Catherine Henley of Jemison spent Saturday and Sunday of last week with Miss Lucille Sammons.

Pfc. and Mrs. Clayton Anderson, formerly of Camp Forrest, Tenn., spent Thursday and Friday of last week shopping in Clanton.

Listen, People of Chilton County. The Third War Loan Drive is on the drag in Chilton County. Our quota must be raised within the next seven days or we will fail. If you were being asked to give your money, if there was any doubt about the safety of these bonds, then there would probably be some reason for not meeting the quota. You are not giving, you only lend and you get the safest security in the world. There are seven different bonds you can buy that will count on our quota. One of these bonds is the 7-8 percent U. S. Treasury Certificate of Indebtedness, dated September 15, 1943, and due September 1, 1944. These certificates are almost as liquid as Cash. Some of our people bought these certificates in the April Drive, these buyers can get their money right now if they want to surrender the certificate. They can get all of the money they used to buy these certificates and they can also get the interest from April, 1943, up to date they decide to sell the certificates. These certificates come in $1,000.00 denomination and they are just as good as money.

We have done our bit. Now, let's do our best!

Too Tired to Sleep

A furniture store was displaying a new type of mattress on a bed in the window. To make the thing look more realistic, the store advertised for a "demonstrator."

The first applicant was a lazy-looking fellow. He yawned as the manager recited his duties.

"All you have to do," the manager said, "is to lie on that mattress in the window and pretend to sleep peacefully from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m."

"Those are awful long hours," the chronic loafer grumbled. "How about a rest period in between?"

The Woman of It

Jones—I suppose I shouldn't mention it, but there's a lot of gossip around that your wife talks to herself.

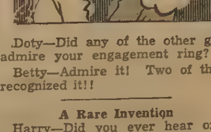
Smith—Oh, yes, I know it. She talks to herself all right, but she thinks I'm listening.

Processional

Choirmaster—Now remember the altos and sopranos will sing alone until we get to "the gates of hell"—

Voice in Back—Is that where the congregation comes in?

WELL WORN!!



Doty—Did any of the other girls admire your engagement ring?

Betty—Admire it! Two of them recognized it!!

A Rare Invention

Harry—Did you ever hear of a Scotch mousetrap?

Jerry—No. Is it so tight it squeezes the mouse to death?

Harry—Better than that. It catches the mouse before it gets the cheese!

Slippery Music

Chuck—Why is a piano like an icy sidewalk?

Cluck—I don't know, why is it?

Chuck—Well, because if you don't C Sharp, you'll B Flat.

Worth Seeing

A backwoodsman was applying for the job of watchman or a single-line.

Supposing you are at the crossing and two trains are coming along from opposite directions, what would you do?" asked the examiner.

"I'd always wear a red shirt, and I'd take it off and flag the trains."

"Let's say this was at night."

"Then I'd swing my lantern."

"But suppose you had no oil?"

"In that case I'd call my sister to come on down, and see the goldarndest wreck she ever saw in her life!"

Which Is It?

Joe—Say that was the best chicken pie I ever tasted!

Mrs.—That wasn't chicken, that was rabbit.

Joe—Why didn't you tell me before I ate it? You know I don't like rabbit!

Matter of Time

Boss—You can't just ask for a raise like that. You must work yourself up.

Employee—But I have. I'm trembling all over.

Tripartite Picture Clearer Since Meeting in Quebec

U. S., England, Russia Agreed on Fundamental Policies; Observers Optimistic Concerning War and Post-War Cooperation.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The ink is now dry on the secret footnotes which appear in the memoranda officially recorded after the long and quiet conversations which took place in the presidential study in the White House when the Allied strategists worked out the end of another chapter in the history of World War II.

My own modest notations, scribbled on the backs of envelopes, and on scratch pads, and written in taxicabs, leaning against a White House elm after a press and radio conference, taken down while the President or other officials were speaking, make a clearer pattern.

Words and phrases take on new meanings, rough sketches are filled out in revealing detail.

The speculation, the criticism, the attacks and the apologies which swirled about the Allied policy toward Russia, for instance, it is plain now was built mostly on half knowledge.

While press and public were crying for a tripartite meeting of the representatives of Russia, Britain and the United States, the arrangements for a whole series of meetings were already being made. It was not until almost the end of the Roosevelt-Churchill visit that we learned, first, that the tripartite meetings "on the foreign minister level" had been definitely agreed upon and, second, (which no one then guessed) that a commission was to be formed of representatives of all three powers to discuss the situation arising out of the Allied victories in the Mediterranean in which Russia is so deeply concerned but which, militarily speaking, she has been forced to view from a distance. When we received that news, we were unable to indicate its source.

The Darlan Question

Another source of bitter controversy which has been allowed to fester was cleared up at the same time. Certain groups in England and America from the very beginning violently objected to the choice of Darlan as the man with whom the Allies dealt in North Africa. There have been two revelations on that score which, had they come earlier, might have cleared the air.

One concerns the Russian attitude—and the Russians certainly ought to lean as far to the left as anyone. It now seems that the Soviet leaders, frankly opposed to Darlan and all he stood for, actually accepted the British and American policy on the basis of an old Russian saying that in matters of military strategy—or comparable situations—it is sometimes necessary to deal with the devil and his grandmother.

A word from the chief of staff revealed in his annual report to the secretary of war is interesting in this connection. He says of the diplomatic preparation before the invasion of Africa: "Should an approach be made to a single Frenchman who proved unsympathetic to our purpose, we risked the slaughter of our soldiers on the beaches of North Africa as well as decisive losses to our shipping . . . unexpectedly, Admiral Jean Darlan, Petain's designated successor, and commander-in-chief of all French forces, was found to be in Algiers visiting his sick son when our forces landed. He was taken into protective custody and when it was found that French leaders stood loyal to the Vichy government, a series of conferences immediately followed with the purpose of calling a halt to the French resistance against General Patton's task force in the vicinity of Casablanca."

The Background

Then, on the morning of November 11, the Germans invaded France and Darlan obligingly rejected the pseudo-independent Vichy government and assumed authority in North Africa in the name of Marshal Petain and ordered the French to cease all hostilities.

Just what pressure or argument was used in getting Darlan to yield to Allied wishes has never been revealed or what his motives may have been—they may indeed have been prompted by the devil or his grandmother—but those who knew the inside military expediency, did not quarrel with his action. Death took Darlan from the picture. It did not end the arguments, but since we know now that the head of the Communist state of Russia was able to swallow Darlan, the squeamishness of some of the critics seems a little far fetched.

In the days that followed the recall of the Soviet ambassadors to London and Washington, the outcry over the absence of Stalin at Quebec increased. Roosevelt, Churchill and Secretary Hull were blamed—there was the blow-up over the charges by a columnist who said Hull was anti-Russian.

I talked with Secretary Hull about that time. Whatever his feelings may be regarding communism, he indicated from his remarks to me that Russia was looking sympathetically on the attempts at a joint conference, and a few days later, a high British source stated flatly there was no great divergence of views between the Soviets and the Allies.

Agreement

Both were thoroughly agreed on the necessity of the destruction of Nazi tyranny and Prussian militarism, and it was revealed that Marshal Stalin was rising in prestige with the army and that the Soviet army was rising in prestige with the Russian people until it was already on a level with the communist party itself. This seemed to indicate, as Captain Rickenbacker said when he returned from Russia, that the ideologies of the policies and the capitalist nations were growing nearer.

Today, as Washington looks back on this last visit of Prime Minister Churchill, there is a feeling that not only are Britain and the United States closer in both their war and their post-war aims, but that the possibility of bringing the Soviets into the circle is greater. One reason for this is that certain problems on which there has been disagreement have been met and thrashed out successfully between Roosevelt and Churchill and the way is open to a much more extended discussion with Stalin's representatives.

Meanwhile, the position of Secretary Hull, within the administration, has been greatly strengthened as one after another, he has taken over the functions of all agencies which have any dealings whatsoever with foreign countries. He has placed the question frankly before the President who had to choose between his secretary of state and those who opposed him inside and outside of the state department.

Hull's Position

Secretary Hull's position is this: the policies which I have sponsored and insisted upon have justified themselves. Either my department must have full authority in the field of foreign relations or I will hand in my portfolio.

The President faces, first, a congress which has had time to think over its position, has heard the complaints and received the advice of its constituents. It returns determined to imprint its will on national policy, foreign and domestic. Its texture is and has been for some time strongly away from the so-called new-deal policies, strongly toward the conservative side. Secretary Hull probably stands higher, has more friends, and can exert more influence with congress than any member of the cabinet. The President needs a congress which will stand behind him if he is to carry out the plans for further conduct of the war and the winning of the peace according to methods he believes it is necessary to employ.

And, of course, there is the fourth term ahead, for continuance in office is essential, the President's friends believe, if he is to mold the post-war world.

Secretary Hull is his anchor to windward. This is due to his political influence and also because he and what he symbolizes both at home and abroad, have become inextricably bound up in world negotiations.

And for the President, there is but one objective now—that is, to be the peacemaker as he was the war leader. All else—choice of counsellors, domestic policies, must dovetail into that purpose.

Blind Man's Baseball Has Cables to Guide Players

A baseball game played by the blind has only five men on a team—pitcher, catcher and three basemen—and the "ball" is a three-inch metal ring strung on a waist-high cable running from the catcher's box almost to second base, according to Collier's. When the batter strikes the pitcher ring, the basemen, standing in line behind the pitcher, try to grab and shoot it back to the catcher.

For instance, if the ring passes the first baseman and the second baseman catches it and returns it to the plate before the runner reaches second, a one-base hit is made. A home run is scored when all three basemen miss it.

The diamond is also enclosed by a cable to guide the players to the bases, which are run clockwise.

WHAT'S DOING AT ISABELLA HIGH

The Isabella F.F.A. held a brief meeting last week for the discussion of several items of business. Since Erman Cleckler is to leave for the Service in the near future Hansel Grooms was elected to serve in his place as vice-president. Incidently, Hansel holds the distinction of being State F.F.A. Reporter.

Another important item of business was the Bond Campaign. As their contribution to the Third War Loan Drive, each F.F.A. Chapter in the State is being asked to sponsor a "Buy A Jeep" Campaign. The price of a Jeep is $1,165. and this is the goal of the local chapter. The members will be given blanks and asked to contact their neighbors in regard to buying bonds.

The Mustangs got their first taste of a football game last Friday afternoon when they tackled a strong team of outsiders. They were blocked to a 6 to 0 loss. Next Friday night the boys meet the Hurt School of Montgomery at the Clanton Ball Park. We understand that this Hurt School is fairly new, but they will likely be prepared to hand us something veteran in the way of football. At any rate, the contest should be worth seeing.

A called meeting was held by the Beta Club last week for the purpose of making revisions in the staff of the school paper. As the election was made last year, Mary Ann Oden and Jesse Culp were made co-editors. The latter half promptly resigned, refusing a co-editor setup. A vacancy in the mimeographing was also caused by Erman Cleckler's absence.

In the meeting last week, it was decided that Mary Ann would be Editor-in-chief and Jesse would be Assistant Editor. Esther Lee Mizzell was elected to help Earl Wright with the mimeographing. The first edition of the Isabella School Journal is scheduled for publication this week.

WELCOME TO CLANTON AND CHILTON COUNTY HORSE SHOW

The first Chilton County Horse Show will be held at the High School Atheletic Field on Wednesday, September 29th, at 7:30 o'clock.

The Show is being sponsored by the Clanton Pilot and Kiwanis Clubs. Every man, woman and child of Chilton County and surrounding states are invited to attend.

We have attempted to have classes to promote this show for the best interest of the horse owners of Chilton County and Central Alabama. We invite every saddle horse owner in Chilton County to enter his horse in this show. It matters not whether this is a draft horse, a brood mare or a utility horse, just so this horse can be ridden we have a place for him.

We have kept in mind that the saddle horse is the best and most substantial horse for this section of Alabama, and to the owners of such horses we dedicate this show for the year 1943.

The purpose of this show is not only to provide amusement and entertainment of the highest type for the people of Chilton County and surrounding territory, but to promote and popularize the riding of the walking horse; to promote the breeding of walking horses as a sound business venture for horse lovers, and to promote and standardize walking horse shows in Chilton County.

To the people of Chilton County, we urge you to bring your horses in on September 29. There will be persons on the grounds who will help you in placing them in the correct class.

We are counting on you to help make this show a success. Come bring your family and your horses.

SINGING HELD AT NEW HARMONY

The Convention was opened by the Chairman, singing, 'Wonderous Love," and prayer by Mr. Roy Jackson. A lesson was directed by each: J. W. Hays and Elder J. H. Williams, before the eleven o'clock hour. Elder Williams, the pastor at New Harmony, preached a wonderful sermon. Elder Williams is from Tallassee, Ala.

The Convention always sing a song in memory of a member who passes away between sessions.

Following preaching services the memorial service was held. The first lesson was sung in memory of B. T. White by Mr. A. A. Jackson; M. C. Jackson sang, "The Lone Pilgrim," in memory of J. T. Weldon; J. W. Hays sang, "Long Sought Home," in memory of Allen Moates.

A bountiful dinner was served to all at the noon hour. To look at that beautiful table you would not have thought groceries were rationed.

The opening song for the afternoon was sung by our Chairman, W. L. Sanders, after which, the Convention went into the regular business session for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year. The election was as follows: Chairman, Mr. A. A. Jackson; Vice Chairman, Mr. W. L. Sanders; Secretary, Mrs. Myrtle Jackson.

Afternoon directors were: A. A. Jackson, Mrs. Flora Oaks, Elder J. H. Williams from Tallassee, M. C. Jackson, Mrs. Alta Mae Jones, W. L. Jackson, Lawrence Hays, Mrs. J. H. Gaines, W. L. Sanders and Mr. J. H. Gaines.

The Convention extends thanks to all who helps in any way to make the day a success; to all who helped in the singing and who helped to serve such a nice dinner.

The singers of New Harmony Community and surrounding communities voted to meet every third Sunday morning at 9:00 o'clock and sing in the Sacred Harp book until preaching hour, and then sing in the afternoon.

Now, singers, let's back this singing up and make it a real success. We can spare one Sunday out of four to go to the Lord's House to meet and worship Him. I am sure if we only try hard enough to do a this thing, we can do it. Let's make this singing every third Sunday a success.

The meeting time at New Harmony has been changed from the fourth Saturday and Sunday to the third Saturday and Sunday. Everybody has a special invitation to come to New Harmony and help in the singing and hear our pastor preach. — Secretary, Myrtle Jackson.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

ABIDING VALUES FROM ISRAEL'S HISTORY

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 11:13-25.

GOLDEN TEXT—Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people.—Proverbs 14:34.

What makes a nation great? God's dealings with Israel answer that question. The history which we have briefly touched upon in our study of the first four books of the Bible is reviewed in Deuteronomy.

Moses, realizing that the end was at hand for him and that a new generation was about to go into the promised land, reviewed the history of the people, restated their laws, and renewed the appeal of God for their loyal obedience. This record is found in the Book of Deuteronomy, from which our lesson is taken.

We find here that the nation which is truly great—

I. Worships the True God (vv. 13-15).

There is a fundamental factor which must underlie all real national greatness—love of God. This has an inseparable corollary—serving Him "with all your heart, and all your soul."

Says the wise man of Proverbs (14:34), "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." We have well-nigh forgotten that fact. We need to be reminded of it again in God's word to Israel.

What is the result? The blessing of God upon the land, the giving of abundant harvest, in fact, the openhanded generosity of God.

II. Heeds God's Warning (vv. 16, 17).

This is the negative side. God dealt with Israel through promises if they were faithful, and the threat of judgment if they forgot Him.

One is as important as the other in the leading of a nation—and in the rearing of children. We, like our heavenly Father, should faithfully keep every promise; but we should just as surely fulfill every warning of coming judgment.

America has seen the handwriting of God in warning concerning its waywardness and sin. Will it heed and avoid further judgment?

III. Honors God's Word (vv. 18, 19).

Loving God and His Word is not a matter for theological speculation or for sanctimonious discussion in some dark cloister. Thank God the Christian faith is at its best in the ordinary affairs of life. It finds its proper place in the tender relationship of parent and child. Its teachings are pure, delightful, simple and entirely appropriate to any occasion, whether one sits or rises, walks or lies down. God's words are the words to be laid up in the heart and in the soul, to be taught to our children, to be the constant and normal subject of conversation.

IV. Testifies for God (vv. 20, 21).

Here again we have the home before us. And it is, of course, the home which makes the nation. If the home speaks for God, the nation will do so, inevitably and effectively.

We may not, as did the pious Jew, fasten a little container bearing God's Word on our doorpost, but we may make the home itself and the life of its inhabitants an effective testimony for God before our neighbors.

It is obvious that the home either speaks for or against God. A profession of faith in Him, an outward reputation for adherence to religious principles which does not vitally touch our dealings with one another and with the community in which we live—these clearly testify not for God but against Him. On the other hand, who can estimate the value of a sweet and orderly Christian home? Whether it be on a dusty city street, or on a quiet country lane, it is a light that cannot be hid.

V. Counts on God for Victory (vv. 22-25).

God promised that if Israel diligently kept His commandments, loved Him and walked in His ways, they would be a nation that would overcome and dispossess their enemies, and prosper in every good purpose.

God desires the nation which honors His name to stand before the other nations of the earth victorious and prosperous.

The purpose of the Lord for Israel was a far greater one than they ever achieved, because they fell into sin and drew back in unbelief. The limits of the land which He proposed to give them, as stated in verse 24, far exceed that which they did possess in Palestine.

God's plans are large plans. His promises to us, like those to Israel, are stupendous. We need to learn to take Him at His word.

"No man shall be able to stand before you" (v. 25) was the promise to Israel. "Ask what ye will" (John 15:7) is the promise to us. They failed because they did not believe God. Will we fail for the same reason?

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

If authorities prove to be correct, post-war tires may give 75,000 or more miles of service. Super-tough rayon, nylon or improved cotton carcass will help to make this mileage possible.

Army raincoats formerly containing 40 per cent crude rubber now are made almost entirely of synthetic resin and oil-treated material. Crude rubber content of boots and overshoes has been cut about 40 per cent.

A complete armored division on the road has 13,488 tires in use, not counting spares and reserve supplies.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Use bacon fat as shortening in waffles, pancakes and muffins. It flavors them nicely and conserves fats at the same time.

• • •

Wash and drain salad greens—lettuce, radishes, celery—before storing. Store in a cold place, preferably in covered dish in refrigerator.

• • •

To prevent braided or crocheted rugs from rumpling up, cover the backs with wall paper. After you wash rugs, paste on the paper and let dry thoroughly.

To speed up dish drying, take a dry towel in each hand.

Add the fat for flavoring cooked vegetables either just before the vegetables come off the stove or after you have them in a serving dish. The seasoning is better that way.

• • •

Household sponges are kept fresh by soaking in salt water after they have been washed.

Our Use of Paper

Not only is America using vast quantities of paper in the war effort, but its peacetime consumption has always far surpassed that of every other nation. For years before this war, the annual per-capita use was 250 pounds in the United States, 120 pounds in England, 85 in Germany and 20 in Japan.

JUST JESTING

Maybe So

Percy—What would you think of a man who was constantly deceiving his wife?

Flage—I'd think he was a wizard.

If we didn't trust one another, we'd all have to live within our incomes.

Relieved Him

Joe—Did you get any relief when you went to the dentist?

Jim—Yes. The dentist wasn't there.

Gentle Hint

Talkative Lady—A big man like you might be better occupied than in cruelly catching little innocent fish.

Fisherman—Perhaps you are right; but if this fish had kept his mouth shut, he wouldn't be here.

Singing Sands

The "singing sands" of the Arabian desert have mystified travelers for thousands of years. These sands produce the most unusual sound effects, ranging from the rumble of drums to the high-pitched twanging of harp strings. Sounds are produced over the musical dunes by the movement of sand grains in the wind.

Only sand grains of a certain size, shape, and uniformity will produce these interesting sounds. This accounts for the vast acreages of silent sand in many lands.

How Good Is Your Judgement?

Do you know a GOOD buy when you see it?

Wouldn't you, Mr. and Mrs. Citizens of Chilton County and the United States of America, consider it good judgement to buy WAR BONDS when they will do so many things for you and also help your Country's war effort?

Just what are you buying when you buy War Bonds?

WELL, LISTEN TO THIS:

You are buying --- Freedom of Speech, Freedom From Want, The Freedom to Worship in any way you please, The Freedom to select any kind job or occupation you might choose, or any other Freedoms that people living in a free country can enjoy.

You are buying security for yourself and your family, as well as for your Country (You might say that we have all this, but we won't have it if we lose this war).

You are saving money at interest for your future needs, or to educate your children.

You are helping to save the lives of our boys on the fighting fronts; you are helping to get this war over with, and there are many, many more things you do to help yourself and Country when you buy War Bonds.

Now, isn't this a bargain? What else can you buy that will give you so much for your money, and yet,

RETURN THAT MONEY TO YOU WITH INTEREST?

WHAT KIND OF BONDS SHOULD I BUY?

United States War Savings Bonds Series E is the Bond most bought by individuals. It pays $4.00 for every $3.00 invested at maturity date, which is 10 years from purchase date. It can be bought in $25, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000 denominations. You pay $18.75 for a $25 Bond; $37.50 for a $50 Bond; $75.00 for a $100 Bond, etc. This Bond can be redeemed after 60 days at purchase price, if necessary. There are six other types of Bonds for various types of purchasers, and your banker or merchant will be glad to explain about them to you if you are interested.

Now, Chilton County needs to raise $300,000.00 more in order to raise the set quota for the County; some counties have already raised their quota. Are we going to let Chilton County fall behind. Put every dollar you can spare into Bonds --- Help yourself by helping your Country.

Let's Put Chilton County Over The Top

BABY CAMPAIGN CONTINUES

some time during the day, then if you pick up any more subscriptions after that, you can turn them in and deposit those votes also. If you live in the country and will not be here for the close, be sure that your certificates and final subscriptions reach our office before the closing hour. It will not be necessary for you to be present to witness the close, if it is inconvenient for you to do so, however, we will be glad to have you if you can come.

The final bonus, and the one that will continue right up to the closing hour, is one of 5,000 extra, free votes that will be given (in addition to the regular schedule vote) on all one-year subscriptions that shall be turned in at our office up to the hour of closing; if you turn in a two-year subscription you will be given two bonuses—two years, of course, is the longest term subscription we will accept. This restriction is for the protection of our workers; it prevents anyone from taking out long-term subscriptions upon which a proportionately large vote would be given. We have provided every possible safeguard to make this a campaign where "a fair field and no favors" will be the guiding rule. There will be no hokus-pokus about this little baby affair of ours—the mothers and fathers who got out and hustled and secured the most subscriptions, are the ones who will carry off those fine prizes at the finish of this appealing campaign, that's the way it should, and will be, and don't let anyone try to tell you any different.

From the appearance of things at the present time, the race promises to be very close and you, who are working in the interest of some dear little honeybunch in the list of candidates, should give it's campaign every minute you possibly can between now and the closing hour. Two or three subscriptions might be the deciding factor in a tight competition like this one; you would feel mightily disappointed and humiliated, after it is over, should you discover that your own little sweetheart had missed winning a nice prize just because you neglected to secure a couple of subscriptions you could have gotten (and did not) thereby causing baby to lose out owing to your neglect.

So take yourself strictly to task and make up your mind you are going to indulge in hard and consistent campaigning from now until October 2nd and give baby's interests the very best that is in you—surely, that lovely little person deserves nothing less. Very little has been done on renewals from old subscribers — nearly all those you know, take our paper and in this particular emergency will be glad to give you a renewal for another year even though their subscription may be paid a short time in advance—this is their opportunity to do you and the baby a favor, and we know they will be glad to do so if you but ask them; try it and see if we are not right.

The voting as shown in the paper today, is the last one that will appear until we publish the final vote after the affair has been closed. This is the vote that will be turned over to the judges to which they will add the votes found in the ballot box; that will be your baby's total vote. No transferring of votes will be permitted.

The gentlemen who are to act as judges have not been selected as yet, but they will be soon and their names will be announced next week—they will be the sort that will meet your approval, we know.

All together now—let's give baby's interests the very best that is in us and work as we never have before for the prestige and glory of victory and then, if defeat should be our lot, we will have the satisfaction in knowing we did the very best we possibly could and because this is so, we will have no regrets.

Sunday, October 3rd, Is Rally Day At Clanton Methodist

Each Class at the Clanton Methodist Church will have a part on the program next Sunday morning when the Church observes Rally Day. Officers of the Church have been meeting for the past several weeks working out plans for the biggest day in the history of the Clanton Methodist Church and Sunday School.

Welcome ribbons and personal cards have been mailed out and distributed to members and friends in an effort to have all former members and workers and their friends and friends of the Church to be there on that day. No effort has been spared in getting them all back into the fold.

M. O. C. Lloyd, who is pastor, and Mrs. Lloyd, cordially invite and urge all members and friends who are not attending Sunday School elsewhere to be with them on that day.

CLANTON PILOTS MEET

The Clanton Pilot Club held their annual Ladies Night at the Methodist Church last Tuesday evening with 18 Pilots and 30 guests present.

The presidents of the ladies organization of Clanton were Club guests: Mr. F. N. Scott, representing the Baptist W.M.U.; Mrs J. Q. Wade, the Methodist W.S.C.S.; Mrs. Julius Burnett, the High School P.-T. A.; Mrs. Mark Tucker, the Clanton Grammar School P.-T. A.; Mrs. Luther Little, the Music Appreciation Club; Mrs. Jimmy Taylor, the Band Mothers' Organization; and Mrs. Ruth Waters, the Pilot Club. All reported on the activities of their clubs or organizations, respectively.

The program consisted of vocal selections rendered by Donna Blackketter, and violin selections by Lillian McKee, both being accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Stokley Porch.

Following the musical selections Miss Martha Burt delivered an inspiring adress on, "Woman's Place in the Modern World."

The meeting closed with the group singing, "America."

WAR BOND CAMPAIGN HEADQUARTERS SENDS OUT S O S

Clanton Comes To First Defeat In Three Seasons

Last Friday, September 24. our Tigers journeyed over to Selma for the first game of the season with only five lettermen on hand. The score ending 12 to 0 in favor of Selma.

First quarter Selma won the toss and choose to receive. Baker got off a nice kick deep in Selma territory, Daniels bringing it up to Selma's 30-yard line. Selma drove down to Clanton's twenty-yard line where they were held for downs.

Clanton then took the ball and soon rouled off a first down and later on got to Selma's 25-yard line when Peek, left tackle for Clanton, received an arm injury and had to leave the game. Cleckley replaced him at tackle.

There were no scores in the first quarter.

During most of the second quarter neither team got far with both teams having to exchange punts. With about two minutes to go in the second quarter, Clanton lost ten yards on a fumble. Then a pass by Seales was intercepted by Daniels on Clanton's 25-yard line setting up the touchdown play by Daniels who came off tackle for Selma's first touchdown. The pass for the extra point was incomplete.

Third quarter Clanton receives, Bean gets kickoff and returns to Clanton's 30-yard line. A long pass by Baker to Popwell bringing the ball up to Selma's 30-yard line, where Selma held Clanton for downs. Seales kicking into end zone. Selma got the ball on its 20, and made a first down, bringing the ball up to their 35, where Clanton held them for downs with Selma having to kick. Seales bringing back the punt to Clanton's 30, while a pass by Seales was intercepted, Selma had the ball on Clanton's 40-yard line, with the next play being Hafner coming over left tackle and then reverses his field and picks up his down field blocking and scores Selma's second touchdown. The kick for the point was blocked. Selma kicked off and Clanton had the ball on their 40, then the quarter ended.

At the beginning of the fourth quarter a few running plays by Clanton gained only six yards. Clanton kicks and then Selma made a first down with Clanton holding them on the 50-yard line. Selma kicks and Clanton had a good start as the game ended.

Next Friday night the Tigers meet Maplesville on the local field.

QUICK FREEZE PLANT PROPOSED FOR THE COUNTY

For some months the Clanton Kiwanis Club has been studying the possibilities of securing a Quick Freeze and Meat Curing Plant for Chilton County.. It was first thought that materials for construction could not be obtained until the end of the war, but the War Production Board recently approved the release of materials for 350 Cold Storage Plants in the United States. To qualify for W.P.B.. approval of a plant, a community must deposit rentals on at least 60 per cent of the proposed plant's lockers before filing applications. Since the proposed plant in Clanton is to have 400 lockers, W.P.B. requires 240 of these lockers to be rented to individual families before plans for the plant are sent in for approval. During the past three days 100 lockers have been rented and it is expected that the remaining lockers will be rented by the end of this week.

A locker is a storage cabinet containing about eight cubic feet. This is more space than the average home refrigerator contains. Lockers are to be located in a room where the temperature is kept at zero degrees Fahrenheit. This temperature keeps meats, fruits and vegetables frozen and fresh in the lockers.

Lockers are rented on an annual basis. A charge of $15.00 per year is to be made for each locker.

In connection with the plant, complete slaughtering and meat curing services are to be provided. It is estimated that it will cost about $2.00 to get a hog killed and dressed. A calf or cow will be killed and dressed for about $1.50 to $3.00, or for the hide of the animal. The meat will then be cured for about 3¢ per pound. Chickens will be killed, dressed and frozen for about 15c each. Meat can be stored after curing for a bin fee of about $3.00 per year.

Chilton County people will install and operate the plant. The Home Demonstration Agent has complete instructions for preparing, storing and cooking frozen foods.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS CHOSE OFFICERS AT THORSBY

The Queen Esther Sunday School Class of Thorsby Congregational Church chose its officers for the first semester of this year. They were:

President, Betty Brown; Vice-President, Virginia Bateman; Secretary, Christina Christiansen; Treasurer, Dionne Raybon; Assis[illegible] Loretta Petersen.

CARD OF THANKS

I want to take this means to thank every one who helped me or made it possible for me to receive my hearing aid. I would like to see every one and thank you, personally, but as that is impossible, I want to say here I thank every one of you from the depth of my heart for all you gave, whether it be great or small, and may God's richest blessings rest on each one is my prayer.

I can hear almost as well as anyone, and you can't imagine what a blessing it is after being deaf for over 20 years. I hear the sweetest singing and preaching. I have prayed a long time for God to restore my hearing, and my prayers have been answered and I say again, may God bless you all.—Mrs.. J. A. Dobbs.

MR. HERBERT E. COCHRAN

Mr. Hubert E. Cochran, age 64, died at his residence, Maplesville, September 24. Funeral services were held Sunday at 3:00 p.m. at Maplesville Methodist Church, conducted by Rev. J. R. Bearden and Rev. Hyman Atchison; interment in Maplesville Cemetery.

He is survived by his wife; one brother, Edward W. Cochran, of Oklahoma City; one sister, Mrs. Q. A. Griffin, of Tulia, Texas.

Pallbearers were: N. A. Jones, John Maples, Dr. Nix, C. E. Walpoe, Stanley Hayes and W. H. Walker.

Flower girls were: Helen McGee, Mary Bates, Martha Smith, Nell Smith, Jane Shanks, Marcelle Sough, Nina Gleaton, Miss Roper, Sara McCary and Betty Gandy.

Masons had charge at the grave.

Spigener Funeral Home was in charge of the body.

Dear Friends of Chilton County:

I am beginning to fear that we have started shouting before we are out of the woods in our War Loan Campaign. When I look at the $450,000.00 hat we have raised I feel like shouting, "Victory," but when I look at the $104,000.00 yet to be raised to make our quota I get in a pleading mood.

This morning I am looking straight at that $104,000.00 and sending out this SOS. We can fail when victory is in sight. We must go that last mile and buy that last bond if we are to have the joy of victory.

Now, for the sake of our Country, our precious heritage, our heroes who are giving their all and that freedom and righteousness we hope to pass on to future generations, let me plead with you who have not yet bought a bond and to you who could buy more bonds, to do it now, because this opportunity will close Saturday night, October 2. Then the time for Chilton County to measure up to its reputation and pride and patriotism, will have passed.

WE CANNOT BEAR THE STIGMA OF FAILURE.

J. C. PATTILLO,
Executive Chairman.

Clanton Opens Season With Maplesville Next Friday Night

The Chilton County Tigers lost their first football game last week in Selma in nearly three years. Coach Porch was satisfied with the showing the boys made. In view of the fact that several of the boys had never been in a football game before, and playing away from home, anyway, Selma won and that is that. Friday evening, October 1, the home boys go against the Maplesville lads, and a good game is in prospect.

Maplesville lost to Centreville last week, so this makes both these teams on even terms. Both will be out to achieve a victory. The kick-off is slated for 8:00 o'clock.

VERBENA HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The September meeting of the Verbena Home Demonstration Club was held at the home of Mrs. J. F. DuBose. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. M[illegible]. The Club sang, "America, the Beautiful." Mrs. DuBose read the 23rd Psalm, followed by the Lord's Prayer in concert. Mrs. J. H. Johnson gave two special musical numbers. All members present took part in the discussion of the sch[illegible].

In a short business session [illegible] were made and committees appointed to make the Club room ready for the next meeting, October 7th.

WILSON REUNION

On Sunday, September 26th, a large crowd of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wilson for a family reunion, honoring Pfc. Sam Wilson and Mrs. Sam Wilson, who before her marriage was Miss Olivia Gilliland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Shelley Gilliland, of Clanton Route 2.

Mr. Wilson and Miss Gilliland were happily married on Friday, September 24. Sam is home on a 10-day furlough.. He will leave Wednesday, September 30, to take up his duties in the Army at Little Fall, Minn. Mrs. Wilson will be at home with her father and mother while Mr. Wilson is away.

This was the first reunion of the Wilson family in history, and most all of the family were present to spend the day with grandfather and grandmother.

There was a bountiful dinner at noon. Uncle Green Mims graced the table, and everyone ate and really enjoyed themselves.

There were a great number of relatives present, as well as visitors.

The afternoon was spent talking and laughing and making pictures.

At a late hour in the afternoon everyone returned to their homes, hoping to meet again next year. All wished Pfc. Sam Wilson and Mrs. Wilson much happiness through their married life.—Mrs. Jodie Wilson.

TO YOUR Good Health

by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

MEAT AND PROTEINS

While the rationing of sugar, butter, tea and coffee caused considerable dismay, the rationing of meat has caused more concern than any other single food.

Dr. Barton

Most food experts will agree that not only is meat an important food from the standpoint of nitrogen or body building, but in the minds and the digestion of the majority of us, nothing quite satisfies the stomach and the appetite as does meat.

What then is likely to happen to the health of the individual and the nation if we cannot obtain all the meat we need? The reason that meat is so important to health and strength is because of its richness in protein and the protein of animal food—meat—is richer and is more completely digested and absorbed into the blood than is protein from vegetables.

However, there are two points that make us more satisfied to eat protein as furnished in fish and eggs (other animal proteins) and the proteins in vegetables, especially peas and beans. In Hygeia, the health magazine, Phoebe Mayo Walters, Corona, Calif., explains that while it is the protein in meat that is necessary to life, it is not the meat itself because other foods rich in protein may be made to do almost as well as meat in furnishing the necessary protein. Fish is one of those foods, as is also cheese in any form.

Other foods high in protein are those of the dry bean family—white, navy and kidney beans, soybeans, peanuts and peanut butter.

The second point is that there is no reason why we should buy the expensive cuts of meat, because there is no difference in the amount or quality in expensive or cheap cuts.

For years, physicians have been advising patients with thin blood to eat more of the gland meats—kidneys, liver, heart—which foods are not usually rationed.

Finally, there are food substitutes designed to resemble various common foods which are really rich in food value and are not rationed.

The thought then is that we should all eat our full ration of meat if we are well and about on our feet, eat more fish, eggs, cheese, and green and yellow vegetables. If, then, we feel that we want or need more meat, remember that it is the protein that the body needs and there are plenty of other foods that are rich in protein.

Infected Appendix A Constant Threat

The story is told of two British mining engineers about to go on a prospecting trip. Both were in excellent health but as they thought of their destination, its distance from civilization, they decided to enter a hospital and have the appendix removed before starting.

Most physicians would agree that these engineers were wise.

Further, physicians are agreed that while the appendix must have had some use in the body in prehistoric times, there is at present no definite use for it. The appendix is just a remnant or trace of a once useful organ that has not completely disappeared from man. It is a blind pouch that may rest or lie in various positions about the last part of the small and the beginning of the large intestine. It has its own blood supply and a closing or obstructive arrangement at its base. Even in health it is filled with infective material and it contains a large amount of lymphoid or spongy tissue (similar to tonsils and adenoids) which is particularly easy to infect.

Because there is "always" the chance of infection present, Drs. Boyce and Nelson believe that any attack of appendicitis should be considered and treated as a serious attack.

"The problem of acute appendicitis would be solved and its challenge met if the public could be taught and if physicians would remember (1) that any abdominal pain may be the first symptom of acute appendicitis; (2) that food, fluids and particularly purgatives should be withheld in every case of abdominal pain until it is definitely decided that acute appendicitis is not present, and (3) that prompt operation should be performed as soon as the physician is reasonably sure that acute appendicitis is present.

Snow Evidence

By VIC YARDMAN

Associated Newspapers.
WNU Features.

CONSTABLE TOM DRAKE of the Canadian police parked his car alongside the road.

The two men climbed over the snowbank made by the road plow and started across the field, following a double line of tracks. On both sides, save for the double line of foot-prints and a few deep impressions about two inches square, the snow lay in an unbroken blanket.

Presently they came to a clump of shrubbery. Behind it the footprints ended. There was a deep impression in the snow about the size of a man's body.

"This is where it happened all right," Drake said. He pointed to the foot-prints. "That set of prints there was made by Morrison as he approached. That other line, heading back the way we came, was made by him returning with Edwards' body across his shoulders. The impressions are deeper."

"It must have happened before last night's storm," Sam Bailey said. "Except for Morrison's, there isn't the sign of a foot-print."

Drake shook his head. "Morrison said when he found the body it was lying out in the open. If it had happened before the storm it would have been covered with snow, wouldn't it?"

Bailey scratched his head. "Seems logical. Still, how did Edwards himself get here without leaving any foot-prints?"

Both men looked puzzled. "Wait here," Drake said. He made a wide circle of the spot. All he found was several deep impressions, about two inches square, which he had observed when he first entered the field.

"Not a sign of a human footmark," he reported to Bailey. "I thought perhaps someone might have done some long-range shooting. Let's get back to the car."

"There's no one around here hates Edwards enough to want to kill him," Bailey observed. "It must have been a stranger."

"If there were any strangers around we'd have heard of it." Drake lighted a cigarette and puffed a few moments in silence. "Edwards has been having good luck this winter with his traps. There's a report that he brought in a silver fox. Times are hard, and men do strange things when the reward amounts to the profit a silver fox pelt would bring."

He was silent again. Bailey guessed he was recalling the names of men who might go so far as to commit murder for a silver fox pelt.

"Joe Lambert's wife is going to have a baby," Bailey hazarded. "He needs money bad."

"It wouldn't be Joe. He hasn't the courage."

Suddenly Bailey grinned. "Well, how about Nifty Shepp?" Nifty Shepp lived alone on the outskirts of the village, a lazy, shiftless, lovable sort who frittered away his time inventing worthless gadgets during the winter which he sold to tourists during the summer.

Suddenly Drake snapped his fingers. "By golly, I think I've got it!" He drew on his gloves and started the car.

"Got what? The murderer? Who was it?"

"Nifty."

Fifteen minutes later Drake stopped in front of the shack in which Edwards, the murdered victim, had lived. They went inside.

"He was sitting here at the table when it happened," Drake said. 'Those dark stains on the floor were made by blood." He flung open the back door and went out. "Just as I suspected," he said a moment later, re-entering the room. "Come on, we're going to call on Nifty."

It was ten miles to Nifty Shepp's place. The short northern day was drawing to a close when they reached it. A light showed in the cabin's window. "Go in and talk to him," Drake directed. "Keep him inside while I have a look around."

Ten minutes later Drake entered the kitchen where Bailey and Nifty Shepp were engaged in conversation. Nifty looked up in surprise at sight of Drake.

"Why, howdy, Tom. Didn't know you were here too. You been sittin' out there in the cold all this time?"

"No, Nifty, I haven't. I've been searching your barn. I found a pair of stilts in there, one of your inventions. Those stilts make an impression in the snow about two inches square. If you were carrying anything as heavy as a man while wearing them they'd sink pretty far down into the snow. I also found a trail that led off through your back lot toward Edwards'. Going that way it's only a couple of miles. We found the marks of stilts all around Edwards' body." Bailey, clamp the cuffs on him before he gets a notion to plug us too."

Long-Distance Walker

In 1868 Edward Weston walked 100 measured miles in Westchester county, New York, in 22 hours, 19 minutes and 10 seconds, and in 1870 the same distance in 21 hours and 38 minutes in a New York rink.

His most remarkable feat probably was his walk from New York to San Francisco (3,895 miles) in 1909 at the age of 70 in 104 days and seven hours, and his return trip the following year by a shorter route (3,600 miles) in 78 days.

A LONG mirror with a table at each side makes an ideal place to dress. Here you have it with the old mirror from the buffet described recently. The mirror is turned end-wise and the irregularities of the frame covered with cream colored curtains of unbleached muslin hung from a rod attached to the picture molding around the ceiling of the room.

But that is not the last of the old buffet. The turned legs are here made into lamps. The base of each is a square piece of one-inch lumber which is screwed through the center to the largest end of the leg piece. An electric fixture such as is often used in candle sticks is then inserted in a hole bored in the other end. The lamp shades and the butter-tub stool are covered with the cream colored muslin.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Fifty-three per cent of the cars on highways continue to waste rubber, for officials report that that number continue to be driven over 35 mph. A year ago 91 per cent of the cars traveled faster than the rubber conservation limit.

Kok-Sagyz, rubber-bearing Russian dandelion, was planted and grown in 100 different test localities in the U. S. last year. The B. F. Goodrich Company is aiding in this experiment.

If your tires show undue wear at the center of the tread, it is a signal that you are overinflating. This is as much a rubber waster as underinflation.

Is there a blueprint or plan for making menus? That's a question homemakers frequently put to the food experts. Yes, there is. Suppose you are given a list of foods to be included in your daily diets, a sort of general plan that you can adapt to every day's needs. Can you make out your menus? Here is the blueprint:

Group I. Green and yellow vegetables. At least one of each kind should be included daily to meet vitamin and mineral requirements of the diet.

Group II. At least one serving of oranges, grapefruit or tomatoes to get enough Vitamin C in the diet. A good time to get this requirement in is during breakfast—with the fruit.

Group III. Potatoes or other fruit and vegetables to add more minerals and vitamins to the diet.

Group IV. Milk or milk products. This may be in the form of milk (1 pint per day for adults, 1 quart for children), fresh or evaporated, and cheese.

Group V. Meat, poultry, fish, eggs or dried beans, peas, nuts or peanut butter. This group is needed to build and repair body tissue.

Group VI. Bread, flour and cereals are required to meet energy needs and the vitamin B needs of the body. Be sure that any of these that you use are whole-grain, enriched or restored. You would have to eat four times as much ordinary bread, for example, to get as much nutritional value as one loaf of enriched bread contains.

Group VII. Butter or fortified margarine. Use some of either every day to give energy and vitamin A.

That's the plan. Use food out of every group, every day.

The best way to divide the groups into three balanced meals will run something like this:

For breakfast: Citrus fruit, cereal, eggs, milk or beverage, toast.

For lunch or dinner: Meat (poultry or fish, etc.), vegetable in either group I or III, milk or milk products.

For dinner or supper: Meat, poultry or fish, vegetable or fruit from groups I, II, or III. Milk or milk product, and also bread and butter from groups VI and VII.

An easy way to plan the menus is to write down the foods and the corresponding number of the group of food from which it comes. If you do not use one or two of the groups during one meal, pick them up at the next. No chance for slips, here! Keep one eye on the plan and the other on the ration books while doing this and you can meet the requirements of both.

Now, here is some concrete help to stretch those red points:

Sausage and Succotash Pie.
(Serves 4 to 6)

- 1 pound pork sausage meat
- 3 cups cooked, dried or fresh lima beans
- 1½ to 2 cups cooked corn
- 2 tablespoons red pepper, chopped
- 2 tablespoons shortening
- 4 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups milk

Lightly fry sausage. Drain well. Combine with vegetables. Make white sauce by blending flour into melted shortening. Add milk slowly, stirring constantly. Cook until thickened. Season, then add to meat mixture. Pour into baking dish. Top with pastry. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) 30 to 40 minutes.

Pork and Apple Turnovers.
(Makes 4 to 6)

Combine 1 cup chopped apple with 1 cup chopped cooked pork. Roll pastry thin and cut in 6-inch squares. Heap half of square with pork and apple mixture. Fold over diagonally. Moisten edges and press together. Prick top. Bake in a hot oven 30 to 40 minutes.

These ham and asparagus cutlets give a new twist to congenial and favorite foods:

Stuffed Pancake Rolls, Ham and Asparagus Cutlets or Hamburgers are low in point-value but give plenty of zip and stick-to-the-ribs quality to your meals. Have them often to give variety to menus.

Ham and Asparagus Cutlets.
(Serves 6)

- 1½ cups cooked, chopped asparagus
- 1½ cups diced, boiled ham
- ½ cup fine bread crumbs
- 2 tablespoons shortening
- 4 tablespoons flour
- 1 cup milk

Mix asparagus with ham and crumbs. Melt shortening, blend in flour. Stir in milk. Cook until thick. Add to first mixture, season to taste. Chill. Shape mixture to resemble chops. Dip in crumbs, then egg diluted with water, again in crumbs. Heat enough fat in skillet to cover bottom of skillet generously. Fry cutlets slowly until golden brown. Serve with Cheese Sauce: Melt 2 tablespoons shortening, blend in 3 tablespoons flour, stir in 1½ cups milk. Add 1¼ cups grated cheese. Cook until cheese melts.

Stuffed Pancake Rolls.
(Serves 4 to 6)

- 2 cups flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1½ teaspoons baking powder
- 1 beaten egg
- 2 cups milk
- 2 tablespoons melted shortening
- 1½ cups chopped cooked lamb
- 1 cup leftover gravy
- ¼ cup grated cheese

Sift dry ingredients. Stir in egg, milk and shortening. Melt enough fat in skillet to cover bottom. Make 6 large thin pancakes 5 inches across. Brown on both sides. Mix meat with gravy. Heap meat in center of each pancake. Roll up. Sprinkle with cheese. Heat in oven until cheese melts.

Savory Cabbage.
(Serves 6)

Shred 1 small head of cabbage into 3 tablespoons of fat in a skillet, cover and cook slowly 15 minutes. Add 1 cup cubed salami or cervelat, salt and pepper and heat thoroughly.

Spinach.

Cook late spinach with bacon rind cut in snippets. Buying slab bacon with rind saves points.

Greens.

Chop 2 cups cooked greens with 1 tablespoon onion juice, 2 tablespoons horseradish, ¼ cup sour cream, salt and pepper. Serve on toast with crisp bacon.

Potato Salad.

Add 1 tablespoon ripe dill seeds to potato salad and serve cold with sliced tongue.

Lynn Says:

What they do: The basic seven food requirements are so made up as to take care of the body's demand for certain types of food.

For example, proteins, minerals and water are all essential to building torn parts of the body and keeping them in repair. They are needed for tissues, bones, muscles, blood and other fluids.

Energy for breathing, heart action, circulation of the blood, and other bodily functions is supplied by fuel foods—foods rich in fats and sugar.

To keep up the body's resistance to disease, to keep it in good running order, is the function of regulation and protective foods—these are the vitamins, minerals, water and roughage.

BOB HAWK, CBS quizmaster of "Thanks to the Yanks," manages to spend at least two nights a week performing for men in the armed services. When a camp calls for a show Hawk sends out a call to his many friends in the entertainment world and immediately a well-rounded show of varied acts organizes to help "Thanks to the Yanks." Bob, who taught junior high school English when he was 18, has broadcast everything from grand opera to wrestling matches — says his toughest assignment was giving a hole-by-hole description of a miniature golf tournament. He's never done better work than he's doing now for the men in the service.

Just 11 years ago Lucille Ball went to Hollywood as a show girl, to appear in Eddie Cantor's "Roman Scandals," along with 11 others. You'll see her, as a show girl, in "Meet the People"; she's climbed clear to the top of the ladder in the meantime. Right now people are crowding to see her in "Du Barry Was a Lady." She's the only one of the original twelve who's still in pictures.

Leatrice Joy Gilbert has been under contract to Metro for some time, but it's only now that she's going to get her chance—a role in "Kismet." She worked in summer stock last season, and if there's anything in heredity this daughter of Leatrice Joy and the late Jack Gilbert certainly ought to go far as an actress. Her father was one of Metro's big stars for years.

When Bob Hope got back from that trip that took him to England, Africa, Sicily and Iceland he wasn't sure whether he'd be able to return to the air September 21 or not—said Bing Crosby would pinch hit for him if he couldn't. He was pretty tired, but forgot that when he talked about his trip. "The greatest thing that ever happened to me," said he. And "Believe me, the programs we do from the States are going to mean more than ever to us now that we know what they mean to the men."

Last season hundreds of service men had to be turned away from the Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy shows because of lack of room. This year Bergen will put on a preview of the show, just as it goes on the air, plus added entertainment by Songstress Dale Evans and the cast, for service men on furlough in the Los Angeles area. So every Saturday night there'll be fun for soldiers, sailors and marines.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Carl Foss is dead. Carl, who a short time ago, you remember, was working here and could give from memory everybody's car tag number in town. He was killed in the Service of his Country, after having completed more than 25 successful missions over enemy territory. He was with Chennault's 14th Air Forces over Burma and Indo China. Carl's death will affect the people of Clanton and Chilton County deeply. He was very popular, and giving his life for ours will make him even more appreciated. He was typical of the strong, clean American youth that are dying each day on the battle fields of the world, giving their all for a cause that they believe is just.

Cecil Blow writes that he is in India. . . .The lines last week in Folks & Things about Ed Propst and Luther Kendricks should have read "good looking" motorists. . . .We'er very sorry that Ada Bennett, manager at Johnson's Fashion Shop, had to be taken to a Birmingham Hospital last Sunday morning, and sincerely hope that her stay there will be a short one. . . .Chilton County's First Horse Show was a big success and seems everyone who attended enjoyed it mightily. . . .Saturday night ends the News's Baby Campaign. If you aren't sure that you are far ahead, you had better get busy these last two or three days. Three hundred dollars arent given away every day in the week you know.

R. C. Williams is a patient man. Last evening we saw a young fellow, we will not say was inebriated, we will not even say he was intoxicated—he was drunk—walk up to R. C.'s candy box, try to open the door and pull the case, candy, cookies and several items, over on top of him on the pavement in front of the Service Station. As usual he didn't get a scratch, but the candy and cookie container is in one heck of a mess. As we said before, R. C. Williams is a patient man. Neither did he use profanity or lose his temper. He walked over to the man, picked him up, asked if he was hurt and told him to go and sit down before he did get hurt. A less patient man would have raised all manner of cain.

A Captain realized there was no hope for the sinking boat, and said, "Is there anyone among us who can pray?" A meek man stepped forward and said, "Yes Sir, I can pray." "Good," said the Captain, 'You start praying while the rest of us get life belts on. We're one short."

Battlefront of Sacrifice Is Urged Upon U. S. Women to Aid 3rd War Loan Driv

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The women of America are going al out to make a success of the Third War Loan Drive—to "Bac the Attack" to the limit. For weeks they have been organ to do their share toward raising the Treasury's unprecedente goal of 15 billion dollars in War Bond sales to non-bankin investors.

In order to lay the groundwork for this intensive organizatio far enough in advance of the drive, Miss Harriet Elliott, Asso ate Field Director of the War Finance Division, in charge women's activities, made a swing around the country duri July. Regional conferences were held in Atlanta, Dallas, Sa Francisco, Denver, Cleveland and Boston.

"Women have been called to the battlefronts of sacrifice at a time when their brains, energies and money are most needed," says Miss Elliott. " 'Buy Bonds—by sacrifice,' is the order of the day. If every woman in America would pledge herself to do without everything she possibly can, and carry out that pledge faithfully, she would make a genuine contribution to victory."

All groups of women are active in the drive. Many cities and counties are conducting Door-knocker canvasses and carrying out other promotional campaigns to see th every individual in these Unit States is reached to buy an ext $100 Bond in September. DON'T WASTE ELECTRICITY

An extra troop train or freight train loaded with tanks, guns, ammunition, and other war goods may mean the winning of a battle.

Each carload of fuel saved helps make this possible.

There is plenty of electric power for all war and essential civilian needs, but elimination of non-essential uses of indoor and outdoor lighting can help save fuel and transportation.

Bond purchased by Mrs. Oliver Duke to honor her son, Pvt. Benjamin Duke, who went down as a gunner on his plane over Germany.

Bond purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Grady Reynolds ($1,000.00) and dedicated to their son, Lt. (Jg) Morgan Reynolds, Advance Naval Base, Navy 145, Division G, in care Postmaster, San Francisco, California.

Lt. (Jg) Jean Johnson McCraney, the first Service girl in Chilton County and Clanton, to have the honor of first dedication bond. The bond was purchased by her mother, Mrs. N. S. Johnson. Lt. McCraney is now in Boston, and is serving her country as a nurse in the U.S.N.R.

The honor of the second Dedication Bond to a service girl went to Lt. Edna Erle Tucker. This tribute was a bond purchased by her father, Mr. Wiley Tucker, of Maplesville. Lt. Tucker is the first girl so honored in Maplesville.

Ladies On The Bond Wagon

The Minute Maids and their various committees did a swell job Saturday trying to put Chilton County over the top in its Third War Loan Campaign. The ladies worked early and late, beginning at 7:45 a.m. and finishing after 10:00 p.m. Our hats go off to them. They didn't miss a thing. They over reached the $50,000.00 mark with their bond wagon sales.

A $500.00 Bond was purchased by A. D. Edwards and dedicated it to his brother, Herman V. Edwards, who is somewhere in North Africa.

A $100.0 Bond was purchased by J. J. Edwards and dedicated it to his son, Herman V. Edwards.

If any dedication bonds were omitted or if any addresses were not given who wish letters written to boys in Service, the addresses must be turned in to Mr. Pattillo.

Bond dedicated by Diane Dennis, Route 2, to Pvt. Henry O. Grant, A. S.N. 34810927, 58 Training Group, 205 Squadron, Air Corps Technical School, Keesler Field, Miss.

Bond dedicated by Wayne Dennis, Route 2, to A-C Hubert Q. Kelley, 34th College T.D., LayFette College A-C, Easton, Penn., U. S. Army Air Forces.

Bond dedicated by S. A. Henley and Mrs. Mares S. Henley to Pfc. Arthur C. Henley, 396 T.S.S. Box 1316, Keesler Field, Miss.

Allied Heavy Bombers Roam Over Italy To Halt Flow of Nazi Reinforcements; Major Shift in Army Command Heralds New Blows Against European Fortress

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

ITALY:

Rome Is Goal

Salerno's beaches won, American and British troops turned to the northward, with Rome their immediate goal.

Having failed to throw the Allies back into the sea at Salerno, Gen. Albert Kesselring's German forces withdrew toward the Naples area, where they were expected to put up another stiff rearguard action in the mountainous terrain.

After sharp, brief attacks on Allied shipping at Salerno, German aircraft disappeared from the skies, and American and British bombers roamed over Italy at will. Seeking to halt the flow of German re-enforcements to the south, Allied planes ripped railroads and highways.

Reports from Naples told of the Nazis' destruction of the city, indicating that the German high command intends to ruin every facility that might be of use to occupying Allied forces.

Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark (background) tours Italian front with Gen. Harold Alexander, commander of Allied ground forces.

Flanking the Italian mainland, the islands of Sardinia and Corsica fell to Allied troops. In Corsica, Italian soldiers joined with "Free French" units in fighting to oust Nazi elements.

RUSSIA:

New Lines

With the Dnieper river in sight, the end of a long German retreat along the whole central and southern front in Russia neared. It is along the entire 750 miles of the broad, winding river that the Nazis evidently intend to make a final stand in Russia. Should the Germans fail to hold the Dnieper line, they would be compelled to fall back into Europe itself.

In the north, the Russians drove past Smolensk, threatening the Nazis' communications with Finland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. In this sector, the Reds were only 115 miles from the old Polish border.

Only in the extreme south did the Germans hold the Russians at long arm's length from the Dnieper. Evidently, the Nazis were bitterly resisting in the area so as to allow the escape of many German troops in the Crimean peninsula, which connects with the Russian mainland in this section.

Generals Form Union

Calling upon Germany to overthrow Hitler and establish a government having the confidence of the people and the strength to bring about peace, 100 former Nazi generals and other officers hooked up with the "Free German" group organized by Russia.

Captured at Stalingrad, the former Nazi commanders appealed to Germany to [illegible] end the senseless, futile war, which "might any day cause a national catastrophe." Germany today faces a worse isolation than in 1918, they contended.

Addition of the former Nazi militarists to the "Free German" committee undoubtedly was for the assurance of order it might promise in case of Germany's internal collapse. Russia's creation of the "Free German" committee has been seen as a move to incorporate the always potentially strong German nation into its own European order, independent of Anglo-American planning.

ALLIED CHIEF:

Marshall Named

Gen. George C. Marshall

Congress was working itself into a pother over rumors of Gen. George C. Marshall's removal as American chief of staff when it was reported that he has been named commander-in-chief of all American-British forces throughout the world.

According to the rumors that threw Washington into ferment, Marshall had clashed with British military authorities over the opening of a second front in Europe.

Report of his appointment as commander-in-chief of all Allied forces with control over the British army, however, seemed to spike the rumors. As American chief of staff, General Marshall was in charge of all army planning, of operations and supply, and his new post undoubtedly was to carry the same responsibilities.

Against Island Hopping

Even as air-borne Australian troops landed in northeastern New Guinea in another daring move to cut off the Japanese from supply bases, Gen. Douglas MacArthur re-emphasized the pattern of his strategic battle-plans in the Southwest Pacific.

Assailing the principle of "island hopping" — that is, taking one island after the other—General MacArthur declared: "Key points must, of course, be taken, but a wise choice of such will obviate the need for storming the mass of islands now in enemy possession . . . (which) is not my idea of how to end the war as soon and as cheaply as possible."

Replying to talk he would be shelved, Gen. MacArthur said: "I have no personal military ambitions whatsoever, and am perfectly content in such role as may be prescribed for me."

MANPOWER:

War Needs

Testifying before the senate military affairs committee on the question of drafting dads, Gen. George C. Marshall and Adm. Ernest J. King declared they were interested only on meeting the services' quota for 1,200,000 men by the end of the year.

According to the war manpower commission, 446,000 fathers will have to be inducted if the services' demands are to be met. Marshall and King left the problem of raising the men up to the WMC, but warned against lowering physical standards in reclassifying 4-F's, or of taking childless married men over 38.

In leading the fight against immediate induction of fathers, Senator Burton K. Wheeler sought to establish that production was exceeding requirements in certain lines, resulting in a waste of manpower which could be used to better advantage in other industries behind schedule. Wheeler also sought to probe claims that certain employers were overstaffing their concerns and raising costs to assure larger profits on contracts.

Distribute Production

Donald Nelson

While congress stewed over the whole manpower question, Chairman Donald Nelson of the war production board issued a directive ordering all war agencies not to place contracts in areas where labor shortages exist if they can be filled elsewhere.

In this connection, the WPB also declared that war contracts should be negotiated, with smaller firms being paid premiums to meet higher production costs, so that full use may be made of all manufacturing facilities.

In connection with curtailing employment in industries whose production exceeds needs, WPB announced that hereafter such employment would be cut in communities where there was a scarcity of labor in other essential lines.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

LEG: A brakeman on the Santa Fe railroad has been awarded $12,500 for the loss of his leg in an accident at Ellinwood, Kan. He had sued for $150,000.

MEXICO: The president of Mexico, Manuel Camacho, has signed an order freezing prices of basic foods, textiles, tires, gasoline and other essential articles.

FARM AWARD: Farmers who have achieved "exceptional" production records will be recognized by an "Agricultural Achievement award" to be presented by the War Foods administration to some farmer in each county. There is also an award for processors. State agricultural war boards are asked to make nominations.

POST-WAR PEACE:

Vote to Cooperate

The question of nationalism and internationalism came to the front in the house of representatives and both sides came off with honors even.

With congress' adoption of the Fulbright resolution, the internationalists won a point through the measure's provision calling for America's co-operation in joining with other nations in preserving world peace by any seemingly proper means.

On the other hand, the nationalists won a point, too, through the resolution's stipulation that congress must approve any plan for such American co-operation.

The bill went to the senate, where it faced strong opposition on the grounds that the house was trying to cut in on the senate's constitutional privilege of advising and consenting to foreign treaties.

WHEAT:

CCC Rations Stocks

Tightening of transportation is complicating the Commodity Credit corporation's distribution of its wheat stocks for feed. The same difficulty has interfered with the CCC's program for purchasing 15 million bushels of Canadian wheat weekly.

Because of the difficulties encountered, CCC has rationed wheat to buyers, with big operators formerly ordering 165,000 bushels being cut to 50,000.

As of September 11, the CCC reported, 57,483,457 bushels of new wheat were held in loan, compared with 144,038,388 at the same time last year. Some 1942 wheat also is being held in loan; CCC efforts to call these loans to replenish its stocks, however, probably would result in farmers offering the grain on the open market for sale above the loan price.

New Synthetic Tube

Add to scientific wonders this synthetic inner tube, called marvinol, and made from a new elasto-plastic. According to the manufacturers, the material in the tube is non-porous, eliminating the usual leakage of two pounds of air weekly in ordinary tubes. In addition, the new tube is fully reclaimable in case of a puncture or blowout.

U. S. NAVY:

Greatest in History

With 613 warships and 18,269 planes, the U. S. navy ranks as the greatest in world history. Since 1940, 333 combatant vessels and 15,567 planes of all types have been added in a multibillion dollar construction program.

In addition to the warships, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox disclosed that 1,274 mine and patrol craft have been built, along with 12,964 landing vessels and numerous other smaller boats.

Since the outbreak of war, the U. S. has lost 1 battleship, 4 aircraft carriers, 9 cruisers, 32 destroyers and 12 submarines, or a total of 58 warships.

FARM:

Manpower Wastage

Approximately 1,300,000 farm families are prevented from producing at their maximum because of a lack of financing, James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers union, declared.

Because they cannot get the credit for purchase of equipment and other facilities, Patton said, these families are producing below their level and thus wasting badly needed manpower. To help them increase production, Patton suggested creation of a billion-dollar loan program.

Another source of manpower wastage, Patton said, was the freezing of farm labor in most of the nation's 3,000 counties. Under provisions of public law 45, Patton pointed out, federal funds for recruiting and transporting farm labor from one area to another are advanced only on approval of the county agent.

POST-WAR:

Spending Seen

Sixty-four per cent of the peopl interviewed by the U. S. Chambe of Commerce plan to buy one or more major articles in the six months following the end of the war.

During this period, they intend to spend three billion dollars on automobiles; over one billion dollars on household appliances, chiefly radios and kitchen mixers; over 700 million dollars on household furnishings, and seven billion dollars on new homes.

NEW YORK.—Most of the Allied blows in China and Burma and India are being struck from the air. Lots of them will continue to be, a fact which steps up the importance of the U. S. Air Service command in that region and of Brig. Gen. Robert C. Oliver, its directing head.

Gen. Oliver Busy Readying Forces For Push on Japs

Oliver's job is to muster the supplies and men and equipment needed to maintain the Tenth and Chennault's swashbuckling Fourteenth, and all the other air forces now in the area or due there when the big push starts against the Japs. A year ago he had a half dozen men, a warehouse or so, a couple of trucks. Now his warehouses are all about, his trucks run in battalions and he counts his men in hundreds, even thousands.

Oliver is a thin, confident West Pointer, 41 years old. He weighs a scant 145 pounds, works 11 hours a day, seven days a week and is disarmingly friendly. When he notices a strange private he is likely to stroll over, ask the man's name, give his own and shake hands heartily.

Army-born, with a father who served in the medical corps during the Spanish-American war, he went first with the infantry after West Point, but finally settled down in the air force. His pilot score-sheet shows 3,600 hours in the air. Some of these were piled up early last year in North Africa, but he didn't down any Germans. His wife and son are living in Montgomery, Ala. It is a fine, quiet town to serve out the duration and the cocoanut cake sold in the community market will certainly please Robert Jr.

THE game of musical chairs which Hitler has been playing with his war chiefs through a series of setbacks in Africa and Russia, now sends Gen. Franz Halder to the hot seat. Late cables say that he is chief of staff again. He was tossed out last Christmastide for Kurt Zeitzler, the Nazi plug-ugly, a switch which would be paralleled here if General Marshall were ousted for a modern Quantrell. But now he is back, just in time to plug, if he can, the hole left by Italy's collapse.

Can Halder Hold All Comers Along Po?—$64 Question

Halder has a cheery smile and this, along with thick glasses, gives him a schoolmasterish air. But he is a soldier with 40 years training, the son of a general, and in his own right a sound strategist and a bold tactician. Hitler turned him out with a curt, "You may go," after failures in Russia, but it was Hitler's plan that failed, not Halder's.

Some people who toured pre-war Germany are fond of saying that the kindly Bavarians should not be counted among the toughest Nazis. But Halder is a Bavarian and though he was not tough enough for Hitler he left bitter memories all through the Ukraine.

The big question is whether he is tough enough to hold the region around the River Po in Northern Italy against the Allies. That is where he is expected to stand, although once again the plan is Hitler's, not his. On his own plan he would refuse battle until the lofty barrier of the Alps stood as his first line of defense instead of worrisomely at his back.

THE United Nations commission to draw up true bills against Axis war criminals will, beyond any doubt, let go with both barrels, as soon as possible, and that might be pretty soon. But now that Sir Cecil Hurst has been named Britain's accuser the culprits will, at least, have the cold comfort of knowing that the shooting is entirely legal.

Will Make Legal The Indictment of Axis War Culprits

Sir Cecil has been a lawyer for 50 years, just. For a long while he was legal advisor of the British foreign office and since 1929 has had a seat in The Hague court, succeeding Charles Evan Hughes; he was elected its president in 1933. But he is no dry-as-dust. Awhile back he was over here for some distinguished goings-on at Princeton.

A few Americans present were a mite squeamish about mentioning the remote but remembered trouble centering around the year 1776. Sir Cecil wasn't. He eased a ticklish moment by declaring cheerfully that Britain in that distant year, or thereabouts, had got a mighty good lesson, one which had helped her ever since with other colonies.

Seventy-three now, Sir Cecil supports the popular notion that an Englishman doesn't tear up his roots easily. He was born in Horsham. He still has his home there, though not the same one.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

JESUS AND THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 5:17-20; 19:16-22; John 5:39, 40.

GOLDEN TEXT—Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill.—Matthew 5:17.

With this lesson we begin a series of studies which should be of unusual value, a consideration of the Ten Commandments in the light of the teachings of Jesus, and other related New Testament passages.

It is appropriate to point out that, far from being outmoded, the Ten Commandments are really the basis of all moral law. They need a diligent restudy and re-emphasis in our day of disregard of moral standards.

As interpreted by the Lord Jesus and applied to our daily living, the truth of these commandments should be brought home to every boy and girl, man and woman in our Bible schools.

We learn here that our Lord did not come to set aside or destroy the law, but to fulfill it in the most complete way. But the gospel takes us a step beyond the law, and it is a great step, for we follow the One who is greater than the law.

I. Built on the Law (Matt. 5:17-20).

"The law of God is eternal, never to be abrogated, never set aside. Christ Himself, although we might properly say that He was in reality the Lawgiver and thus had power and authority over the law, indicated His purpose in coming to be that of giving the law its full meaning, not of destroying it. One could wish that those who profess to be His servants might have the same measure of regard for God's law. If they did, they obviously would not be so ready to ignore it, so quick to change it or explain it away, and far more ready to accept with their Master every "jot and tittle," that is, even the minutest detail of His Word.

Recognizing Christ as the fulfillment of the law should prepare one to manifest obedience to every moral precept through His grace.

II. More Than the Law (Matt. 19:16-22).

Obedience to the commandments brings a man up to the very entrance upon life, but to enter in, he must have more than the "things" of the law; he must have the Person who is "the Door" to eternal life.

The young man who came to Christ was rich. His mind was obsessed with things. He had made it his business to observe the law, and had done well (v. 20), but his soul was not satisfied. He thought one more "thing" to do would accomplish his purpose.

The general attitude of the man was commendable. He sensed his lack of the vital something which would remake his life. He came to the right one—the Lord Jesus—with his question.

His failure to go beyond the things of the law to a faith in Christ, however, showed that he loved his possessions more than he desired to follow the Lord.

Those in our day who are trying to please God and gain eternal blessedness by works, by doing things and keeping commandments, need to recognize that in Christianity we have the One who is more than the law. They need to look away from things to be done, to the great thing that was done once and for all on Calvary.

III. Greater Than the Law (John 5:39, 40).

The Scriptures are great because they bear witness to the Christ who can give life. But obviously the One to whom they bear witness is greater than they are.

Paul speaks of the law as a "schoolmaster to bring us to Christ" (Gal. 3:24). The picture is literally of a servant charged with bringing the child to school where he may learn the truth. So the law convicts man of sin, makes him conscious of his own utter inability to meet God's requirements, and makes him ready to turn to Christ in faith and repentance (Rom. 3:20).

These men of our Lord's time were very religious. They spent much of their time searching the Scriptures that they might find eternal life. But most of them failed to understand that the life they sought was in the One who stood before them—Jesus of Nazareth—and not in the letter of the law.

This has a vital bearing on the proper study of the lessons of this quarter. "The time has passed when men might seek life in the Scriptures apart from Jesus. Now that Jesus has come, life can be found only if the Scriptures lead one to Jesus.

"If our study of the Scriptures does not bring us to Christ, then it is vain indeed. For that reason we cannot study the Ten Commandments without turning constantly to Jesus as the One greater than the law" (Lesson Commentary)

See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former newspaper feature editor, has been inducted into the army and is nearing his completion of basic training at Fort Bragg, N. C. He has been classified as cook and in addition his failure to master some of the fundamentals of army training have resulted in considerable extra KP duty for him. He has also learned the finer points of "goldbricking" and "shooting the breeze." Hargrove has become editor of a section of the camp paper and these duties have kept him away from a lecture series. As we pick up the story, his sergeant is assigning him once more to KP for this infraction. Hargrove is trying to explain. He speaks:

CHAPTER XIV

"Sergeant, for days I round up news from battery reporters. There is always too much or too little. When there is too little, I have to write what is needed. When there is too much, I have to choose which battery reporter is going to horsewhip me for leaving his copy out."

"The chaplain is right up the street," the sergeant said.

"Then I have to edit all the copy, delete all classified military intelligence and take out all nasty cracks at first sergeants. Then I have to write headlines for all the stories and place them in whatever space I can find for them. Then I must draw everything up into pretty little pages. This is tedious and nerve-racking work."

"The chaplain will give you a sympathetic ear," the sergeant said. "I will give you only KP. Does anything you are saying relate to what we're talking about—why you weren't in the mess hall yesterday afternoon?"

"I was getting around to that, sergeant. On the day before the paper is issued, I have to go into Fayetteville to keep a careful watch over the printers, to see that they don't put Third Regiment news on the Fourth Regiment page. If I am not there, they may even mix headlines and put church notices under 'Service Club Activities.' It is necessary that I be there."

The sergeant coughed. "I feel for you, Private Hargrove; I deeply sympathize. I wouldn't think of putting you on KP—"

"You wouldn't?" I gasped eagerly.

"Don't interrupt," the sergeant barked. "As I was saying, I wouldn't think of putting you on KP—if you hadn't committed a breach of etiquette by failing to RSVP the invitaion. You didn't tell us you weren't coming. Or why."

* * *

I was dozing peacefully at my typewriter the other morning when there came a knock on my elbow and a bright young voice shouted "Hey!" at me. I looked up into the impish, cheerful, and unquenchably mischievous face of the boss' daughter, Miss Sidney Winkel, age four.

"Let's be reasonable, Pvt. Mulvehill," I said; "As you know, I am working on Capt. Winkle's sympathies to get a furlough."

Miss Winkel was dressed like the Navy and looked entirely too energetic for such a drizzly morning.

"I'm to be the Valentine," she said, "and Johnny's going to take my picture and you're to take me up to the Service Club and carry Johnny's things for him and wait for him to get there so you'd better put on your jacket and cap and let's go.

"I'm going to have my picture taken with Spud Parker," she added. Spud Parker is the general's son and is considered quite an eligible bachelor by the younger set.

"There's Tom in the cafeteria," she said. "Let's go see Tom."

Thomas James Montgomery Mulvehill, Pfc., was apparently making his morning rounds in search of news. He was, at the moment, engaged in his daily research in the Service Club's toast and coffee.

"Hello, sis," he said. "Hello, McGee. Pull up a chair. McGee, get the lady a drink. Something tall and cool. Such as a chocolate milk. What's the deal, sis?"

"I'm to be the Valentine," she said, "and Johnny's going to take my picture and old Hargrove has to take care of Johnny's stuff until Johnny comes and I don't like him anyway because he makes faces and sticks out his tongue and says sticks and snails and puppy-dog tails that's what little girls are made of and he's not my boy friend anyway."

"No punctuation," I said. I waggled my ears and stuck out my tongue at her.

"The next time I come," she said, "I'm going to bring some soap and every time he sticks out his tongue I'm going to put soap on it because it isn't nice to stick out your tongue." She emphasized her statement by paralyzing my wrist with her fist and sticking her tongue out at me.

"Let's have no unnecessary vibrations, McGee," said the Lieuthomas, looking up reproachfully over his glasses. "Coffee is five cents the cup." He beamed at her. She beamed back at him.

"I have seven boy friends," she said, raising one forefinger delicately and rubbing the other against it in a highly jeering gesture. "I have seven boy friends and you're not one of them and you're not anybody's boy friend." She hit me this time on the elbow and I made a horrible face at her.

"Myaaah," I said. "Who wants to be your boy friend anyway?"

"I wish you wouldn't blow smoke," she said. "It makes me cough and it's not nice to smoke anyway. Old cigarettes!"

I wearily crushed my last cigarette in the ash tray. "Women, the eternal reformer," I sighed. "It wasn't like this in the Old Army."

Miss Sidney Winkel took off her sailor cap and arranged her big red hair ribbon. "You're a nasty old thing and you're not nice like Johnny and Tom and Lieutenant Meek and Captain Wilson and all my other boy friends," she said. After a pause she added, airily, "And Major Long and Captain Quillen, too."

"Myaah," I sighed, wrinkling my nose more violently.

"Oh there's Johnny," she suddenly cried, "and he's going to take my picture and—" She tripped off with a bewitching smile for Bushemi and a running line of babble.

"No punctuation," I said to Mulvehill.

"It's a woman's world, McGee," he said, reaching for another slice of toast.

* * *

"Get him away from me, Bushemi!" roared Private Thomas James Montgomery Mulvehill. "He's got that gleam in his eye. Get him away!"

"You're just being difficult, Lieuthomas," I told him. "Just sit down and relax." The Lieuthomas laid his enormous frame on the bunk and started slapping his knees in utter despair.

"What kind of deal are you trying to swindle this time?" he asked.

"Let's be reasonable, Private Mulvehill," I said, patting him reassuringly on the shoulder. "As you know, I am now working on Captain Winkel's sympathies to get a furlough sometime in February . . . the first half of February."

"I know what's coming," he screamed. "And I won't do it! I can't do it!"

"Now, as you know, furloughs are laden with little expenses—necessary little expenses. To help me along with the load, Sergeant Sher and Private Bushemi have already made philanthropic little loans. I have your name on my honor roll here, Lieuthomas. What's the donation?"

The Mulvehill cringed and edged away. "What do you need—from me?"

"Well," I estimated, "I should say that ten dollars."

"Great gods and refugee children," he gasped. "Ten dollars he says yet! Why don't you ask me for my life's blood? Six dollars he owes me already and now he's asking—oh, I can't stand it! I can't stand it! Take him away!"

"My life's blood," he moaned. "Where's the six I lent you two months ago?"

"That was only five weeks ago," I reminded him gently, "and I've already paid two of that back. Three weeks ago I paid it back."

"Yeah," he protested, "but you borrowed it back the next day." He rose and paced the floor. "What are they doing to me? My life's blood they would draw from my veins? Thirty-six measly little dollars a month I make—and he wants ten dollars! Maybe I'm Winthrop Rockefeller I should lend out ten dollars a clip! Thirty-six dollars, and he wants half!"

"You see, Lieuthomas, a sad and work-worn creature—an Alice sit-by-the-fire whose only hope for the future is in the faint glimmering hope of a furlough. Day after day, week in and week out, I have worked my frail fingers to the shoulder blade to make things pleasant for you and Bushemi and Bishop. I have patched your quarrels with the mess sergeant. I have saved you from the terrible wrath of provoked Rebels. I have sat here at night, sewing buttons on my blouse so that you wouldn't have to wear it hanging open on your merry jaunts to town. Money could not pay for the things I have done for you and Bushemi. And now this. Ten dollars between me and spiritual starvation—and no ten dollars. How sharper than a serpent's tooth."

"Don't talk like that, Hargrove," he said, his voice cracking. "Put me down for ten."

* * *

There was a little note stuck in my typewriter when I came back from prowling for news. It looked like Private ("One-Shot") Bushemi's typing. "The stockholders of the Union of Hargrove's Creditors," it read, "will hold a business meeting this evening about seven o'clock in the latrine of Barracks No. 2, Headquarters Battery. Please be present or we will beat your head in."

It was the day before my furlough, so I got the general drift. The vultures who were contributors to the furlough would probably stand around frowning and figure out some sort of budget for my vacation. I could picture the blue-nosed demons slashing away at my enjoyment.

The meeting had an unexpectedly small attendance: Maury Sher, mess sergeant of Battery D of the Third and chairman of the ways and means committee of the Union; Private Bushemi, principal stockholder and president; and Private First Class Thomas James Montgomery Mulvehill, chaplain.

Private Mulvehill beamed. "Sergeant Hart sends his regrets. He has a heavy heavy in Lillington. He is with us in spirit, though."

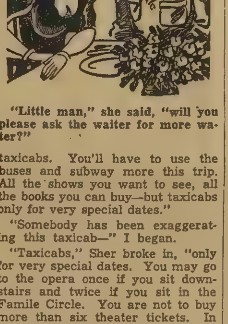
"Come in, drip," said Bushemi.

Sergeant Sher got down to business. "I've got to hand it to you, son," he said. "Gone through this much of the month and still haven't tried to get any of your furlough money back from the chaplain! We're all proud of you."

"Shucks," I blushed. "'Twern't nothin'. I was able to bum a cigarette here and there."

"McGee," said Mulvehill, clearing his throat, "you leave tomorrow for New York, where there are many snares to trap the unwary. Don't buy any gold watches in the park or any stolen furs anywhere. You know, I presume, about buying the Brooklyn Bridge."

"Now, we don't have any restrictions about the way you use your money," said Bushemi. "Only last time you spent too much money on taxicabs. You'll have to use the buses and subway more this trip. All the shows you want to see, all the books you can buy—but taxicabs only for very special dates."



"Little man," she said, "will you please ask the waiter for more water?"

"Somebody has been exaggerating this taxicab—" I began.

"Taxicabs," Sher broke in, "only for very special dates. You may go to the opera once if you sit downstairs and twice if you sit in the Famile Circle. You are not to buy more than six theater tickets. In uniform, you can see all the movies you want for two bits each."

"And be conservative in tipping the waiters," said Mulvehill, tapping his glasses on the window sill. "Very conservative. Short-change them, if necessary."

"Tell him about the budget," said Bushemi, with unnecessary impatience.

"As the matter stands on the furlough deal," said Sher, "you owe Bushemi 22 dollars, me 10, Mulvehill 10, Hart 10. That's 52 dollars. Counting the ten you'll wire Bushemi for before the week's over, it's 62. With what money we have taken from you and given to the chaplain during the past few weeks, you should make out all right."

"Must I be treated as a child?" I asked.

"When you get back broke, McGee," said Mulvehill, "you are not to eat breakfast at the Service Club. You are not to take out any post exchange books. You will get your cigarettes from Sergeant Sher, who will ration them out to you as per budget."

* * *

Sergeant Sher, Private Bushemi, and the other members of the Union of Hargrove's Creditors would have been quite pleased at the sight. Instead of spending their money lavishly on taxicab sightseeing trips and expensive shows, I was dining quietly in a conservative grillroom with the Redhead. We weren't even discussing ways to spend their hard-earned money.

"Little man," she said, "will you please ask the waiter for more water?"

"I beg your pardon," he said, rather unctuously. "There is a fifteen million gallon shortage in water at this very instant. On the other hand, madame, all supply ships to Great Britain use Scotch whisky as ballast for the return trip. Perhaps madame would like a glass of Scotch whisky?"

The Redhead lifted an eyebrow.

"I wonder," she said, "what they use in the finger bowls here—rubbing alcohol? I do not want Scotch whisky. I want water."

"It is as madame wishes," the waiter said, bowing from the knees. He walked away and returned again to lean against a post. The Redhead drummed her fingers on the tablecloth.

"Don't be afraid of him," said the Redhead. "Call his bluff."

Nation to Be Active Factor In Post-War Peace Plans

Majority of American People Ask Participation In International Organization to Maintain Harmony.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

Slowly the pattern of America's post-war plans are taking shape, but only the pattern.

When congress returned, it was evident that no matter how much disagreement there might be as to the details of the role the United States will play in the post-war world, the people have registered one idea: they want to take part in some kind of an international organization to maintain peace.

The same opinion turned up in the conversation of three members of congress of widely differing political sentiments with whom I talked shortly after they returned. Speaker Sam Rayburn told me that the one phrase which received the most applause in the speeches he made in the Southwest was when he said that the United States must do a man's job for peace.

Two leading Republican senators expressed the same idea, namely, that "the people seem to be of one mind" that America must join in some kind of international effort after the war to maintain peace.

The disagreements in congress are chiefly a difference in degree and represent a discussion, for the most part, over details that nobody expects congress to decide in advance anyhow.

Of course, there are two things which make for lack of harmony; one is the natural desire of each political party to criticize the other in a campaign year; the other is the effort of small groups to get over their own particular ideas.

Secretary of State Hull, in his speech of September 12, made it plain that the administration was in favor of an international organization which would agree to use force to maintain peace—implying that the United States would offer its armed forces in collaboration with other nations to stop aggression. He went further on the subject than any official so far but there has been a feeling on the part of many members of congress that the people would support such a policy.

Pooling of Resources

Meanwhile, the public has gradually come to the realization that Winston Churchill, as the king's first minister with plenary powers, and President Roosevelt, as commander-in-chief and, therefore, with similar authority, have agreed that the United States and Britain will pool their military resources not only until the fighting ends, but until the emergency is ended. They will do this merely by continuing the committee of joint chiefs of staff.

They have made it plain that they consider the emergency, or as an official spokesman for the United States described it, "a period of transition," will not end until the last peace treaties are signed. In other words, the United States and Great Britain intend, as long as the emergency exists, to take part in an organization to establish and maintain the peace by means of what amounts to a military alliance between the two nations.

Prime Minister Churchill was ready to sign a written agreement which would include Britain's pledge to remain our ally and continue the war with us until Japan was beaten—that much he told the newsmen—and he added, the President had said it was not necessary, that his word was good enough. Presumably, the written agreement would have included the continuation of the joint committee of the chiefs of staff, too. But written or unwritten, such a pact now exists.

It is, therefore, clear that the President intends, if he remains in office, to maintain an interim arrangement which will keep this country an active factor in world affairs to the point where its policies will be supported by military action. This will be of indefinite length, as Churchill put it, until it can be shown that a better arrangement, including all nations, can be found to supplant it.

In one sense, therefore, it is less important what decision the congress or the administration makes right now as to its foreign policy since there will be plenty of time for the people to become fully acquainted with the whole situation during the "transition period" when two of the strongest nations remain united. The important thing, of course, is to obtain the co-operation of the third most powerful nation, Russia.

And that is what is on the fire right now. Until we know a little more about Russia's views and intentions, it will be impossible to make a detailed plan for the post-war world.

Battle of Italy Beginning of End

As I write these lines, the startled moon has just slipped behind a jagged curtain of clouds, like a transport sliding under the protecting cloak of a smoke screen.

That comparison leaps to my mind because all day I have been following, as you have and as closely as either of us could, the progress of the greatest military undertaking which an American army has attempted in this war—the battle of Italy. For the battle of Italy is the storming of the very portals of the Reich, the outer rim, it is true, but nonetheless, the first breastworks of Hitler's inner fortress.

Here, for the first time, American soldiers, hardened on the harsh sands of Africa and the cruel hills of Sicily, meet the guardsmen of the Nazi citadel. Not a bi-colored army, diluted by a half-hearted ally, Italy, but dogged German fighters defending the gateway to their own, their native land.

The end of the beginning has ended, the beginning of the end has begun. And we who have watched every sign and every signal as the curtain between what we thought and what we knew was lifted, realize how little we and the world can guess of the inner and complicated workings of this great war machine.

As the armies of the Allies attack the enemy citadel—the leaders of the Allies, Roosevelt and Churchill, plan a new edifice.

The invasion of Sicily and the invasion of Italy were planned at Casablanca where, for 24 hours, the few newsmen who were permitted to know, kept the secret of the meeting itself. Beside the historic waters of the St. Lawrence, in the citadel at Quebec, the marching orders were sealed while we, newsmen waited, blinded and deafened to all but the most general ideas.

What are those marching orders? Some other startled moon will tell.

Civilian Defense Proves Its Worth

As Germany begins the defense of her inner fortress and the once-feared Luftwaffe has been converted from an offensive to a defensive machine the problem of keeping up the morale of Civilian Defense in this country is a difficult one. It would be foolhardy to lie down on the job now for history has shown that frequently fierce and bitter conflicts grow out of victories and until the last shot is fired and after that, it isn't safe to desert the ramparts.

Recently the value of civilian defense training was proved in a manner which received very little recognition outside of the immediate vicinity. When the Congressional Limited, the crack train that runs between New York and Washington, was wrecked in Philadelphia, when the Twentieth Century Limited, another crack train between Chicago and New York, was wrecked, and when a hotel burned in Houston, Texas, the civilian defense organization proved its mettle. On all three occasions, invaluable service was rendered by these unselfish men and women who have so long answered mock alarms and gone on duty for practice drills.

It was definitely shown that in the case of the wreck of the Congressional Limited and in the Houston fire lives were actually saved by the defense workers. In Philadelphia a group of air raid wardens meeting near the scene of the wreck were the first to arrive on the scene.

In a short time 7,500 trained workers were at work assisting police and helping the rescue. So effectively did they handle the traffic that in spite of the great crowds, lanes were kept open so that all injured persons not actually pinned in the wreck had been removed to hospitals within 35 or 40 minutes.

Proving that participation in cooperative activities pays members of the Isabella F.F.A. and farmers of the Community have saved an estimated $426.00 during the past fertilizer season by buying 142 tons of fertilizer cooperatively.

Three years ago last Spring as a result of an evening school at Isabella, conducted by J. H. Camp, local F.F.A. advisor, 12 farmers bought fertilizer cooperatively. Last year and this year an additional 29 were added bringing the total number buying fertilizer cooperatively to 41.

In addition to buying fertilizer these farmers have at some time or other during the three years, bought feeds, winter legume seed, seed oats, fruit trees, and other crop seed cooperatively. At the present time they are buying vetch, Austrian peas, superphosphate, and seed oats cooperatively.—J. H. Camp.

What's Doing At Isabella High

Isabella started off her football season with a 14 to 0 setback by the boys from Hurt Military School in Montgomery. The first sensational play of the game came early in the first quarter when a Hurt player broke loose around left end for a 43-yard run, only to be stopped by an Isabella player on the 10-yard line. However, the Mustangs were unable to hold their opponents, who succeeded in scoring before the period ended.

The next scoring was made in the third period when Hurt, on another of their double reverse plays, ran up the field to the touchdown line. A pass was then good for the extra point.

Only one penalty was inflicted during the game—that against Hurt for being outside. Referees were McGee and Conway.

Students assembled in the auditorium Thursday for the first chapel program of the year. Brief talks to the group were made by Rev. Helms, visiting pastor at the revival meeting which was running last week at the Isabella Methodist Church, and Rev. C. E. Avinger, pastor of the Church.

Cheerleaders were elected for the football season at the assembly. Girls elected for cheerleaders were: Mary Ann Oden, Evelyn Owens, and Elizabeth Jones. These girls "did their stuff" at the game Friday night.

MARS HILL

We had a good crowd out for Sunday School and preaching Sunday. We invite all the visitors to come and be with us again.

We are having a special meeting at the church next Thursday night. This is important. We urge all members who can to come.

Mr. Martis Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Scott, left Saturday for the Army.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Scott of Birmingham spent the week end with home folks.

Mrs. Myrtle Langston is on the sick list. We do hope for her a speedy recovery.

Several from here attended a good singing at Center Hill Sunday.

Pvt. Russell L. Scott, son of Mrs. Holsombeck, is now stationed at Camp Barkley, Texas.—Reporter.

MUSIC APPRECIATION CLUB

On Tuesday afternoon, September 21st, the Music Appreciation Club was entertained by Mrs. Luther Little, with Mrs. Tom Searcy as co-hostess. This meeting was the first of the new club season. Mrs. Little was installed as president and Mrs. Bob Oglesby as corresponding secretary at an impressive ceremony, conducted by Mrs. Grady Heflin.

During the year the program will be devoted to a study of the music of the Allied Nations. Miss Lillian McKee gave a most interesting paper on Chinese music and played an old Chinese tune on the violin, illustrating some of the dominant characteristics of Chinese music.

During the social hour the hostess served a refreshing beverage and cookies. The meeting was well attended, and the enthusiasm indicates a splendid year for the Club.

Bond Drive Reaches $576,940.00

LL COUNTIES OF TATE FILL QUOTAS

Every county in Alabama met its ota in the Third War Loan Camgn, rolling up sales of $119,300,000 h many more millions yet to be perted officially.

Alabama has certainly done a magicant job in the Third War Loan," d State War Finance Committee airman Ed Leigh McMillan, "and know the fact that not one single nty failed to measure up to what s asked of it is going to win naal recognition for Alabama."

We Alabamians can look proudly o the eyes of our fighting men now tell them that we, too, are in the ht, that we have 'Backed the Atk,' " Mr. McMillan said.

Alabamians, in the traditional spir- have invested unstintingly of their llars, going beyond the quota set them in response to their coun's call for funds.

Such a record as Alabama has de in the Third War Loan could have been possible without the p of hundreds of groups and thouds of people. On behalf of the n and women now in uniform, I sh to thank every person in Alama who had a part in rolling up the te's magnificant total of Bond purses so that we here at home could our full share to "Back the Atk.' "

CHILTON COUNTY WENT OVER BOND QUOTA $22,940.00

Dear People of Chilton County:

It is indeed gratifying to the War Finance Committee for Chilton County to know that the patriotic citizens of the county have retained their fine reputation of responding generously to the call of our great country by buying bonds in an amount greater than the quota given us in the recent Third War Loan Drive. Our quota was $554,000.00, and we actually bought $576,940.00, thus exceeding our quota by $22,940.00.

I wish I might have space to name everyone who devoted their time and efforts and who bought bonds so liberally to make our great success by over buying the largest amount of bonds that this county has ever been asked to buy. I believe that everybody in the county made some contribution to this cause. There are many whose outstanding effort and whole-hearted devotion deserve special mention, and it is the unanimous expression of the entire committee that I say everything done by everyone has the utmost appreciation of the committee.

J. C. PATTILLO,
County Chairman of the War Finance Committee.

HIGH SCHOOL P.-T. A. TO MEET NEXT TUESDAY

The High School Parent-Teachers Association will meet next Tuesday, October 12th, at 4 o'clock at the High School. Be sure and be there, all you parents, and see what you can do to help the teachers in teaching your child.

"TIGERS" TO MEET ISABELLA FRIDAY NIGHT

Friday night, October 8, at 8:00, the Clanton Tigers will meet Isabella High on the local field.

Last Friday night the "Tigers" scored a very nice game with Maplesville, scores being 27-0. What's to keep them from doing the same with Isabella All are invited to come. Lets back our team.—H. C.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL P.-T. A. MET TUESDAY AFTERNOON

The Grammar School P.-T. A. was called to order Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock by the president, Mrs. Mark L. Tucker. There was a splendid attendance and everyone enjoyed the musical program rendered by the children of the music classes, also the devotional message brought by Mrs Martin and the splendid talk on "Delinquency" by Mr Patterson Hicks.

The meeting was concluded with the room count, honors going to Mrs Searcy and the Fourth Grade.. The meeting adjourned to the lunch room where the hospitality committee and social chairman served refreshments.

CHILTON COUNTY HORSE SHOW WELL ATTENDED

Hundreds of horse lovers crowded the Chilton County High School Athletic Field last Wednesday evening to see Clanton's first Horse Show. It was a brilliant affair with all the trimmings as some 60 or 70 fine horses contested for ribbons and cash prizes.

This Horse Show, according to spokesmen of the Clanton Pilot and Clanton Kiwanis Clubs, sponsors of the show, was only the beginning of big Horse Shows to be held annually here. Representatives of both Clubs and the Plantation Saddle Horse Association deeply thank all who worked so hard and contributed so much to the success of this first show. It was a big success financially and as a booster of morale and civic progressiveness.

HOW BIG IS YOUR HEART?

The National War Fund has done a wonderful job with the money raised in 1942 for the needy in war torn Europe. Thousands upon thousands of destitute people of foreign lands were saved from starvation by the money raised and distributed through the local and national War Fund.

How grand it must have felt to those innocent people to receive aid from a country so far away, in their darkest hour.

But, we must remember that such help cannot continue unless the National War Fund quotas are met. THIS WE KNOW WILL BE DONE IN OUR COUNTY AND STATE.

You need not dig for information as to just what National War Fund has meant to your boy, or your neighbor's boy.. Just ask him the next time he comes home on furlough, or better still, write him and ask what the USO means to him.

THANKS, MR. DURWOOD BROADHEAD

October, 1943, finds the Red Cross Surgical Dressings Center at Clanton in operation a year.. During this time several have been thoughtful of the ladies who serve there, but perhaps it isn't generally known just how thoughtful Mr. Durwood Broadhead has been on many occasions. In addition to this, Mr. Broadhead has furnished the lights and water free of charge to the Surgical Dressings Center, throughout the entire period.

The ladies wis hto take this opportunity to express their tahnks to Mr. Broadhead. His fine spirit of service and generosity is deeply appreciated.

TO PREACH AT METHODIST

Dr. Stanley Frazer, the District Superintendent, will preach at the Methodist Church Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock. The last and fourth quarterly conference will be held after the services.—O. C. Lloyd, Pastor.

LADIES THANK THOSE WHO HELPED IN 3RD WAR LOAN DRIVE

With the Third War Loan ended, the people of Chilton County feel quite jubilant, that in being given the happy privilege to serve their country, by "Backing the Attack," they went over the top.

The women's division of Chilton County, under the leadership of Mrs. Hugh Jones, Chairman of Chilton County, backed up their slogan: "We did it before and we'll do it again." They were given a big job to do and they matched it with their patriotism, serving early and late.

Mrs. Rip Burnett served tirelessly at the Peoples Savings Bank. Mrs. Omar Reynolds, Mrs. John Mullins, Mrs. Grover Walker, Mrs. Frank Scott, Mrs. Hance Alred, Mrs. Ed Mullins, Mrs. Grady Reynolds, Mrs. Lee Smith, Mrs. John Higgins, Mrs. Joe Mullins, Mrs. Bob Oglesby, Mrs. Dick Hayes, members of the Committee, did a swell job. Some of them served several days a week.

To these, the Street Captains, the Study Club Members, Mrs. Howard at Thorsby, Mrs. DeRamus at Verbena, Mrs. Lowery, North Clanton, Mrs. Lowe, South Clanton, Mrs. Littlejohn, Jemison, Mrs. Hayes, Maplesville, and others throughout the County who helped in the final count of the Third War Loan Campaign. Our Congratulations.

CLANTON METHODIST CHURCH

The Clanton Methodist Church W. S.C.S. met in the church parlor Monday afternoon with pretty good attendance. Mrs. Horton Walker in the chair. Mrs. O. C. Lloyd gave a very impressive devotional and Mrs. Omar Reynolds with the Missionary program. After business was discussed and attended to, all were dismissed with prayer.

BOY CONFESSES TO KILLING MRS. MAGGIE VERA WILSON

After considerable grilling by officers, Harold Evans, 17, of Isabella Community, confessed to running his car over and killing Mrs. Maggie Vera Wilson Thursday morning, September 16th, nine miles west of Clanton on Maplesville highway. The young man said that he saw her sitting in the road when he was about fifteen feet from her, but that he made no attempt to miss her, but dragged her some sixty feet up the hill. He was driving a Ford car and said he was going about 30 miles per hour. He said he did not stop after the woman became dislodged from underneath the car. He has been released on $500 bond.

Other arrests by Sheriff J. A. Nivens and his deputies during the past week include: Vagrancy, one white man; driving while intoxicated, one white man; reckless driving, one white man.

CLASS OF EXPRESSION OPENED RECENTLY

Mrs. Sara T. Parnell has opened a Class of Expression in Clanton and Maplesville.

A number of leading children make up this class. Miss Vicky Ray Searcy, Louise Golden, Margaret Foshee, Martha Sorrel, Linda Wade, Martha Jean Stewart, Jean Thompson, Martha Bell, Margaret Ann Henry, Annie Laurie Chambers, Donna Blackketter, Jerry Studdard and Norville Simpson.

These pupils will be making their public appearances in the near future and their progress will be watched with interest.

Mrs. Parnell majored in speech at Huntingdon College, Montgomery, and was a pupil of Miss Florence Pass in Birmingham. She is very talented in this field of work and has a very promising future. She is now teaching at the Maplesville High School.

A series of programs and recitals have been planned for this year to be given the public.

NAL VOTE IN BABY OMPETITION GIVEN

aturday, last, marked the close of appealing little Baby Competition d ended several weeks of intense mpaigning to determine the wins in this splendid feature, which attracted publis interest as noth- else of a like nature that has been ducted in this section of the state many years.

The first prize winner turned up in person of lovely little Patricia n Traywick, daughter of Mr. and s. C. C. Traywick, Clanton. Folwing her, and equally as sweet and able were Carolyn DeVaughn, dauter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Deughn, Route 3., Clanton, as second ze winner; Harold Douglas Gillid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Shelly Gillid, Route 3, Clanton, third prize ner; Gary Kenneth Mims, son of . and Mrs. J. C. Mims, Route 2, anton, was fourth; Emma Jean nce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Vance, Route 3, Clanton, was fifth; d Laura Ann Dennis, daughter of . and Mrs. I. A. Dennis, was sixth. There were a number of other dar- little candidates who missed wing a prize by very narrow margins d their parents are deserving of ecial praise for the splendid showing their baby made in the face of the fiercest kind of competition.

The race itself, proved a very interesting and spirited one, and the winning of a prize was the result of hard, consistent campaigning on the part of the parents of the little ones who proved successful. Several of the little contestants who had occupied prominent positions all through the early stages of the race, failed to keep up the pace, utterly, during the final and deciding period and were beaten when it looked as if they had almost held the fate of that big first prize right in the middle of their sweet little hand. Well, all couldn't be winners, that's a fact, but the parents of the little sweethearts that lost, should have no regrets. They worked in a glorious cause—the interest of a sweet little baby, not for any financial gain as the real incentive for their efforts, rather for love of a darling little atom of humanity that a kind, providence had seen fit to favor them with; the financial part of it was desirable, of course, but what we mean is, that the money involved was not the real impelling motive.

Unfortunately, in all affairs of this sort, there must, necesarily, be the losers and no one regrets it more than the publishers of this newspaper, however, they all had the same chance—

RECENT BRIDE FETED IN JEMISON

Mrs. Cecil Martin (Evelyn Cooper) was honored with a miscellaneous shower Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Marvin W. Headley. Mesdames George Naish, Charlie Glass and Miss Melba Patton were co-hostesses. Autumn flowers were used throughout the home and a color scheme of pink and white was carried out in decorations, refreshments and favors.

Guests were greeted by Mrs. Headley and presented to the receiving line composed of the honoree, Mrs. John Cooper, her mother, and Mrs. A. V. Martin, mother of the groom.

Miss Mary James Patton registered guests in the bride's book.

Miss Melba Patton presented the program. Miss Mary Clements gave a reading and a group of girls presented several musical numbers. After the contests Misses Nina Headley and Ruth Glass received in the gift room.

Serving in the dining room were: Misses Eloise Naish, Mary Faye Glass, Louise Cooper and Barbara Hayman. The table was spread with a lace cloth and centered with a crystal basket of pink and white roses and burning tapers.

The many lovely gifts showed the esteem in which the honoree is held. There were about fifty guests included in this courtesy for Mrs. Martin.

MACEDONIA BAPTIST CHURCH NO. 1

We were indeed glad to have the Veazeys from Birmingham at Macedonia Sunday. There was a good number present for Sunday school.

Sunday evening will be our regular singing afternoon at Macedonia. The singing will start at 2:00 o'clock. The public is cordially invited.

There will be a cemetery cleaning at this church on Friday week, October 15th. Every one who is interested in this cemetery, please don't forget the time and be present, and bring tools to work with.

We have elected new officers in B.Y.P.U. for the coming year. They are: President, Mr. Pratt Crumpton; Devotional Leader, Mrs. Pratt Crumpton; Secretary, Betty Ann Jones; Bible Readers Leader, Francis Kincaid; Group Captain No. 1, Monroe Kincaid; Group Captain No. 2, Roy Rasberry.

Mrs. J. D. Hayes is still Junior Leader. Let's all cooperate with our new leaders and make our B.Y.P.U. a success.—Reporter.

Cecil Thompson, with the U.S.N., has just returned to camp after having spent a nine-day furlough in Clanton with his family.

A SUCCESS

There were some very proud students in the Senior I Class at Maplesville High School Thursday, September 30, when we found that we had succeeded in our War Bond Drive. The quota was $500.00. We all worked hard Wednesday afternoon selling and buying bonds and tamps. Thursday we had grand results for our total was $1,086.50. We plan to do a better job for our Country if we have another drive before Victory comes.

During our drive Mr. Henry Riffe of Maplesville purchased a bond which he dedicated to his son in the Service, Sgt. Perry R. Riffe, 34393350, 536 Bomb. Sq. AAB, Pocatello, Idaho.

CHILTON COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL HONORS MEN MEN IN SERVICE

At their special assembly for the Third Victory Bond Drive this morning the student body of Chilton County High School held a very impressive service for all former students of their school who are now serving in the armed forces all over the world. A Bit Rattled, at That

There had been a little fire in a small hotel, and everyone had come running out in bathrobes and whatnot. One guest joined the group watching the blaze and kidded them on their excitement.

"Why, there was nothing to be excited about," he remarked. "I took my time dressing, lit a cigarette, didn't like the knot in my necktie, so tied it over again—that's how cool I was."

"Swell," commented a bystander, "but why didn't you put your pants on?"

Not Dehydrated?

Washington Digest

Manpower-Draft Situation Is Nation's No. 1 Problem

Political Shadows Darken Vital Issues Confronting Every Family; National Service Act Subject of Debate.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Today, a whole year stands between election day and the capital but the shadow of coming events cast their shadows before them. Like the dark patches on the ground when scudding clouds cross the sun, the Washington scene is flecked with politics.

And there are issues this time which reach right into every home, touch the family where there are men and women of fighting or working age, reach into the larder and the ice box. It is hard for anyone to see these issues clearly because of the shadow of politics.

There is the draft, the manpower question closely interwoven with it, there is food, its production, its distribution, rationing and prices.

It takes a keen eye to see where merit ends and politics begins.

When Senator Wheeler, fathering the deferment of draft for pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, said the defeat of his measure would be a blow at morale and the nation's children, there was no reason to believe that he was insincere. Certainly there was no insincerity about the army and navy heads who opposed the measure, explaining that there were just so many men of fighting age and physique and that a certain job had to be done.

But to a reporter who has been reporting the doings of mice and men for more than a quarter of a century, I could not help suspecting some of the folk who battled over this legislation. What a juicy morsel it was for the vote-getter! True, the Wheeler bill aimed to exempt those who, with no foreknowledge of war, produced families without a thought that babies, to quote the ancient wheeze, like weatherstrips, could keep them out of the draft. But what about other fathers, quite as Pearl Harborish in their paternity whose offspring sprang after the deadline simply because time or opportunity had lingered?

President's Views

There was no doubt what the President thought when he talked about men with children who were doing no useful thing and who might, if they wished immunity from military service, easily get into a war industry. They, one opponent of the Wheeler bill said, were told that they had no responsibility in the war effort, at home or at the front.

Of course, this argument would not hold if the National Service act, that nightmare of politicians, were passed. The army wants it, Senator Austin and Representative Wadsworth who introduced it, and their followers want it—the White House has never spoken but of late is silent when it is "said to be willing."

Now politics, long before the election winds started blowing, has dulled men's minds on that subject. Manpower Commissioner McNutt has been willing but not emphatic. Perhaps you never read the contents of a recent statement issued through the Office of War Information from the Manpower commission. I have treasured it and want to quote its first sentences:

"Better utilization of our work force is the primary means of getting the manpower needed to supply productive establishments of the nation." (You and I can understand that, despite the fine four and five-syllable derivatives.)

"Labor reserves in shortage areas have been exhausted and the common lack of community services and facilities in such areas usually makes it impossible or undesirable to bring in more workers." (Also quite understandable, on a little thought, but would it make you rush out and hunt for a defense job?)

"Where there has been rapid mobilization of manpower, utilization is not always at its highest level. This is not necessarily a reflection on employers. When a plant has expanded its labor force several times, examples of ineffective use of manpower are certain to follow."

There is a careful exposition of the situation for you! Now what could the man who wrote that be running for? Somewhere where there were a lot of toes to be stepped on, it would seem, for he certainly was pussyfooting among the polysyllabics.

Situation Is Serious

And yet the manpower situation is serious. It is so serious that it has long worried War Mobilization Director Byrnes. Indeed, that is why he called on his friend, Bernard Baruch, the unofficial elder statesman of the administration, to advise him. Baruch advised him all right, not wisely perhaps, from a political standpoint, and too well for the sensitive olfactory nerve of Republican Senator Vandenberg (who used to be a newspaper man himself). The wily Michigander scented a rodent. Had he not, you might never have heard Baruch's words of wisdom.

Among other things, Mr. Baruch commented on hoarding labor. I had heard of that subject in indignant letters from the wives of workers who wrote that their husbands were paid to loaf. And Senator Wheeler made similar charges and recalled that Senator Truman and his doughty investigators had found a lot of hoarding of labor with (as Wheeler put it) "employees falling over each other" and being paid for on the cost-plus basis.

Testimony before congress had insisted that there were no cost-plus contracts under which labor hoarding would be profitable.

That was when Vandenberg arose and waved the Baruch report which he had demanded and finally received from Mr. Byrnes.

Mr. Vandenberg read Mr. Baruch's words on the subject of cost-plus:

"The government pays all the costs, whatever they are. Since the government is footing the bill, there is no incentive for the manufacturers to economize in the use of material, facilities or labor. More workers are hired than needed. Workers stand idle—it costs the manufacturer nothing. Much labor is wasted."

Political Breezes

This is only one item in the long and forthright document which has had considerable publicity. Perhaps it might have been neglected if it had not been blown into the public's face by the political breezes stirred up by Mr. Vandenberg. Perhaps Mr. Vandenberg might not have generated those breezes if Mr. Baruch had not been pretty critical of government agencies that competed for power; perhaps Mr. Baruch would not have been so frank if he had not thought that, as he requested, the report was not for publication.

Mr. Byrnes, when he sent the document to "Dear Van" at the latter's insistence, said that it was not intended for other than private use but that it was "a splendid argument in favor of action taken by the War Mobilization committee" (in regard to the labor situation on the West coast) and he requested that it be placed in the Congressional Record, which it was.

And so there it was for all to see with Mr. Baruch, presumably still the best of democratic pals but also the severest of critics, lambasting jealous government agencies and calling manufacturers "manufacturers" and not "productive establishments" and apologizing for nobody, business men or bureaucrats.

Thus the political breezes blow, sometimes in one direction, sometimes in another, though, of course, in election years the "outs" usually blow the loudest. They are the prosecuting attorney, and the "ins" are the defense.

However, there is this satisfaction, blow where it will, it is an ill wind that blows nobody good.

Diary of a Broadcaster

The other day, at the President's usual press and radio conference, I was interrupted, for Fala, the President's scotty, walked out between the forest of legs and made one of the most thorough trouser-cuff inspections I had ever seen.

Unfortunately, I had on one of those liberty suits with no cuffs so he started to pass me by and I had to engage him in conversation to get his attention at all.

What he said was not to be attributed—I can only say that I learned from authoritative Scotch circles that the newspaper and radio fraternity displayed a lot of scents.

WHY TAKE HARSH LAXATIVES?

Simple Fresh Fruit Drink Makes Purgatives Unnecessary for Most People

Here's a way to overcome constipation without harsh laxatives. Drink juice of 1 Sunkist Lemon in a glass of water first thing on arising.

Most people find this all they need—stimulates normal bowel action day after day!

Lemon and water is good for you. Lemons are among the richest sources of vitamin C, which combats fatigue, helps resist colds and infections. They supply valuable amounts of vitamins B₁ and P. They pep up appetite. They alkalinize, aid digestion. Lemon and water has a fresh tang too—clears the mouth, wakes you up, starts you going.

Try this grand wake-up drink 10 mornings. See if it doesn't help you! Use California Sunkist Lemons.

IMPORTANT FOR GROWERS OF VETCH, WINTER PEAS, CLOVERS

Here are typical reports from farmers who inoculate legumes with NITRAGIN:

"My Austrian peas inoculated with NITRAGIN were a good stand, grew fast and made a good yield. The uninoculated side of the field made poor growth and was yellow all season."

"I always inoculate vetch, clovers and peas with NITRAGIN. It is mighty cheap crop insurance."

"My neighbor tells me it made the difference of no crop and a successful crop."

"I increased peanut yields 10 bushels per acre."

Wedding Salute

It has lately become known that when Warsaw, Poland, suffered its heaviest bombing by German planes several years ago, more weddings were performed than any other day in the city's long history.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Heat and friction are the greatest enemies of rubber. Tire treads wear out five times as fast in a temperature of 100 degrees as when the thermometer registers 40 degrees.

Rubber previously used for garden hose will provide for tires on carriages of 8,500 "75's" and 6,800 37-mm. anti-aircraft guns and 600 pontons for Army bridges.

Samuel Peal was granted the first rubber patent in England in 1791. It covered the waterproofing of leather, cotton, linen, etc.

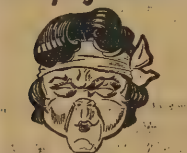
When Your "Innards" are Crying the Blues



WHEN CONSTIPATION makes you feel punk as the dickens, brings on stomach upset, sour taste, gassy discomfort, take Dr. Caldwell's famous medicine to quickly pull the trigger on lazy "innards", and help you feel bright and chipper again.

DR. CALDWELL'S is the wonderful senna laxative contained in good old Syrup Pepsin to make it so easy to take.

MANY DOCTORS use pepsin preparations in prescriptions to make the medicine more palatable and agreeable to take. So be sure your laxative is contained in Syrup Pepsin.

INSIST ON DR. CALDWELL'S—the favorite of millions for 50 years, and feel that wholesome relief from constipation. Even finicky children love it. Caution: take only as directed on the label.

NEW YORK.—In any newspaper shop you can always get an argument, of no interest to laymen, about the value of schools of journalism. Some say "Yes!" Some say, "No!" with asterisks.

This Realist Will Dish Us Bad News As Well as Good

The yes-men currently have an Exhibit A. This is placid, sober Palmer Hoyt, domestic director of the Office of War Information, who has wangled the army and navy into a corner from which, it seems, they will have to give out faster, whether news is good or bad.

Hoyt went to a school of journalism and in 12 years rose on the excellent Portland Oregonian to be its publisher. He rose from copy reader.

Back in 1922 Hoyt was a sports correspondent and a student. He was also just married, brave fellow! Matrimony and matriculation at the University of Oregon had followed a stretch in the AEF. There he had shrewdly sidestepped a lieutenant's bars which were not so hard to get, for a sergeant major's chevrons.

When the school of journalism had done its best he went on to the Oregonian and zoomed. By 1938 he had that publisher post, plus two sons, and lots of influence in Sigma Delta Chi. Americans, he believes, can take bad news with good. He means to give it to them, whichever.

GEN. DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER pauses briefly to pin decorations on two of his top aviation officers, and lean, taciturn and hard-bitten Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz finds himself with a new honor for his collection, that of the Legion of Merit. He already had the DSC and the DFC.

Again We Honor Chief of Our Air Force in Europe

He won the DSC during World War I when he was a major in the 31st aero squadron of the AEF. In September, 1918, after a tour of duty as an instructor in the American Aviation school at Issoudon, France, he was ordered back to the United States. Before he left, he wanted one last whack at the Germans and he got it. In a terrific air battle over St. Mihiel he brought down three enemy planes. The decoration followed.

He obtained the DFC through a peacetime exploit. Back in 1929 when endurance flights were in vogue, he kept his plane, the Question Mark, aloft over Los Angeles just a few hours short of a full week.

General Spaatz has been flying ever since 1916, just two years after he was commissioned at West Point. He spent those two years with the infantry out in Hawaii. After World War I he was made head of Kelly Field, Texas. He has gained rank as he went along. He is 52.

His latest award is for the organization work he did as chief of the American air force in the European theater, a post which he was assigned in July, 1942. The Germans of late have been learning to their horror just what a swell job that was.

GEN. SERGEJ INGR, commander-in-chief of the Czechoslovak army, has a broad, kindly face with sad eyes. Yet in his broadcast to the homeland he cries: "Beat them, kill them, leave none alive!" Referring to the coming day of uprising he says, "Everyone should look around now for the most appropriate weapon to harm the Germans most. If there is no firearm at hand, any other kind of weapon that cuts, stabs or hits should be prepared and hidden."

Czech Army Chief Utters Fierce Old Hussite Battle Cry

The general's career makes his righteous wrath sufficiently plain and quite understandable. Born in Moravia, into Austrian oppression, Ingr began fighting Germans in the First World war. He was a lad of 20 when he fled from Austria to enlist in the Serbian division at Odessa, Russia. Later he joined the Czechoslovak army, organized in Russia, and received the rank of a lieutenant of infantry. After Russia faded out in 1917, he found his way to France and served as company commander in a Czechoslovak regiment there. He was 24 when the happy year 1918 brought his country its freedom.

Shortly thereafter he returned to the new republic to enter its war college. He was 44 years of age when the sad year 1938 saw the flourishing republic ruthlessly dismembered. By that time he had risen to be commander of the army staff, and he took an active part in organizing the resistance. Again he made his way to France, and after the evacuation, returned to England. Now, within the Czechoslovak national committee he is minister of national defense and commander-in-chief of all Czechoslovakian ground and air forces.

Bring Out Bean Pots for Guest Dinners!
(See Recipe Below)

Company Nights

You may be on a strict ration budget, but it isn't necessary to ration hospitality if you plan the food and entertainment wisely. Food and pleasant conversation shared with friends make the long, cool nights, and work-filled days easier to share. Plan soon to have someone over for you can do it with today's recipes without stretching the ration or budget book out of joint.

Dishes should be hearty enough to satisfy any man-sized appetites you encounter, but pretty enough to draw compliments, too. Have things easy to fix so that you can have plenty of time to take part in the social activities of the evening.

Enlist the help of the children in setting up the tables, polishing silverware and glasses. They'll like doing it and it will ease the load on you.

Baked beans are grand for fall entertaining and they really make those points go a long way. They certainly answer the need for heartiness to satisfy appetites fanned by the coolness in the air, and when served in attractive casseroles with gay table background, they answer the beauty requirement.

If you make the beans yourself, a little pork goes a long way when it travels with other such savory foods as mustard, molasses, brown sugar, tomato sauce and vinegar.

Home Baked Beans.
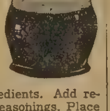
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups navy beans
¼ pound fat salt pork
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon dry mustard
2 tablespoons molasses
1 small onion, quartered
½ cup catsup, if desired



Wash beans. Cover with water and soak them overnight. Cook slowly until the skins burst or until just tender. Drain, reserving liquor. Place half the beans in bean pot or casserole. Bury a slice of pork in beans and another slice in the remaining ingredients. Add remaining beans and seasonings. Place remaining salt pork over the top. Cover with bean liquor. Cover and bake in a slow oven (250 to 300 degrees) 6 to 8 hours. If necessary, add more liquid.

Individual bean pots make serving simpler. The beans may be baked in small pots, or, if desired, baked in a large pot, ladled out into small pots before serving.

Relax your taut nerves and forget war worries by serving a delicious decaffeinated coffee—hot or cold. If making the coffee in a percolator, it needs slightly longer to bring out the full, rich coffee flavor.

Boston brown bread is the traditional accompaniment for baked beans. Slice it very thin, spread with butter or cream cheese, whichever suits your palate best.

Lynn Says:

Point Savers: Discarding leftovers is waste, for they can make many a meal, and a nice one. Use leftover meats or poultry and a combination of vegetables, and tuck that under a flaky pie-crust for a wonderful meat saver. Remember pie crust is packed with energy value because of the shortening.

Try high quality shortening for making pastry. It is fresh and sweet, doesn't have to be kept in the refrigerator and is of a nice texture to blend with flour.

To roll pie dough thin, cover board with a heavy muslin, and rolling pin with a child's white sock.

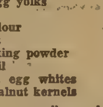
Another dish worthy of consideration on cool nights for entertaining is this ground meat pie—that serves six with just a pound of meat:

Hamburger Pie.
(Serves 6)

1 medium-sized onion, chopped
1 pound ground beef
Salt and pepper
2½ cups green beans
1 can condensed tomato soup
5 medium-sized potatoes, cooked
⅓ cup warm milk
1 beaten egg
Salt and pepper

Brown onion in hot fat; add milk and seasonings. Brown. Add beans and soup. Pour into a greased casserole. Mash potatoes, add milk, egg and seasonings. Spoon in mounds over meat. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 30 minutes.



A waffle supper is another way of entertaining which can be inexpensive and consume only a few points. There are loads of things to do with waffles—either for main course or desserts. Make plain waffles and serve them with creamed chicken or leftover veal creamed with mushrooms. For desserts, try them with berries or fruit or a combination of ice cream and fruit or berries.

Walnuts in waffles make them taste wonderfully good. Serve a few tender, sizzling link sausages with these for a particularly tempting late evening snack:

Walnut Waffles.
(Makes 4 to 6 waffles)

2 well-beaten egg yolks
1½ cups milk
2 cups pastry flour
¼ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
6 tablespoons oil
2 stiffly beaten egg whites
1 cup broken walnut kernels

Combine beaten egg yolks and milk. Add flour sifted together with salt and baking powder, then add oil. Beat until smooth, fold in egg whites and nuts. Bake in ungreased waffle iron.

As meat shortages become more acute, cereals are once more taking their place in the American diet. Spaghetti, macaroni, noodles, etc., all belong to the cereal family and may be used admirably for meat stretchers and substitutes. Combine them with one of the complete protein foods such as meat or cheese and you have a very satisfying, filling dish. Here's a dish fortified with grated cheese and another protein food, eggs:

Baked Eggs on Spaghetti.
(Serves 8)

1½ cups spaghetti
2 tablespoons butter or substitute
4 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
1 cup American-style grated cheese
8 eggs
Buttered crumbs

Cook spaghetti in 4 quarts boiling salted water until tender. Drain. Add melted butter. Add flour and salt mixed thoroughly. Pour in milk gradually. Cook, stirring constantly until thick. Add cheese and blend. Mix with spaghetti. Pour into shallow, greased baking dish. Break eggs onto spaghetti, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and salt. Bake in a slow oven (300 degrees) about 30 minutes or until eggs are cooked.

Russ Government Early Sponsored Rifle Practice

Russia has millions of civilian sharpshooters today because, in recent years, she wisely urged and helped her people to take up rifle practice, says Collier's. Numerous ranges were set up and guns supplied; and men who did not undergo training were considered unpatriotic. In the year 1938 alone, more than 6,000,000 men, women and boys won marksmanship badges.

QUESTION: Much electricity used in Alabama comes from hydro-electric generating plants. How can smaller use of it save fuel, transportation, equipment and materials?

ANSWER: Reduced use of electricity is desired even in areas where the electric power supply comes from hydro-electric plants. Electricity not used in these areas can be sent over the wires to areas where fuel and transportation problems are most critical, so

HARVEST YOUR PULPWOOD NOW and BEAT the TAXES and The AXIS

It is going to take "blood, sweat and tears" to win this war, and Alabama farmers who have access to woodland are urged to invest their "sweat" and spare time now in harvesting pulpwood which is so badly needed in every branch of the armed services.

Not only is the cutting of pulpwood essential to the war effort but it will help you meet those mounting taxes this Fall.

The Gulf States Paper Corporation needs thousands of cords from your county, and cash buyers are ready to purchase every log that you can cut.

CUT PULPWOOD FOR VICTORY!

Guess you heard it too. Harley Calloway from Beat 10 is a sure thing to run for County Commissioner next Spring. He will try for the place held by Mr. Monroe Parrish in the Fourth District. Don't say we didn't tell you.

Here is a fine example of serving your country and your own cause without a thought of credit in return. Week before last the News run a half page advertisement headed, "How Good Is Your Judgment." It was sponsoring War Bonds and urging folks to go out and invest their money where it would help them as well as their country. The half page didn't carry a signature of any kind. Those paying for the space chose to omit their names. What they were after was selling Bonds. Well, we choose to tell who the patriotic citizens were, so here they are: Yellow Front Store, The Klinner Furniture Company, Clanton Laundry, Bell Hardware, City Grocery, Big Four Hardware, Upchurch Drug Co., Minshew Candy Company and Teel Service Station.

Wash Jones, who is stationed at Mitchell Field is a lucky stiff. He got to see the first game of the World Series Tuesday afternoon. Wash says if he wasn't working for his rich Uncle he probably never would have seen a World Series Game. He also says he is looking for a furlough in November and hopes to see all his old friends again.

We think the nice bouquet given to Mrs. Mullins and Mrs. Gore last Sunday at Sunday School, when the Methodists celebrated their "Back to Sunday School Day," was just dandy. They certainly deserved it. But how about L. J. Stewart a bouquet too. He works untiringly week in and week out and we think he was neglected. Even if it isn't any of our business.

Guess you heard about the lady and gentleman who had a wreck on the Main Street the other day. The young lady got out of her car and claimed fault for the whole thing. "Nonsense," said the man driving the other car, "It was all my fault." "I saw you coming two blocks away and should have had sense enough to turn down a side street."

Bob White, the Sweet Potato King, really grows them. Whilst browsing around in Clyde Mims Store the other day we ran across a few of Bob's potatoes, and they were whoppers. Chilton County's Horse Show enjoyed a capacity crowd last Wednesday evening at the High School Athletic Field. That is the first part of the show did. The later it got the fewer spectators there were. However, even at that there was a goodly crowd who remained until the end. Everybody who did attend was in high praise of the Show the following day. Seems they didn't think that Clanton and Chilton County could pull so fine a Horse Show. Credit of course goes to the Pilot and Kiwanis Club members and a number of our leading citizens, who contributed their bit to a worthwhile civic affair. They proved this: There WILL be an annual Chilton County Horse Show.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allied Drive in Italy Gathers Speed As German Forces Face Encirclement; Aerial Blows Hit Japs in New Guinea; Battle Lines Drawn for Subsidy Fight

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

This picturesque chapel in an American military cemetery on Guadalcanal in the Solomons was designed by natives. Chaplains Oliver Grotefund (left) of Detroit, Mich., and John O'Niel of Boston, Mass., are shown conducting first service.

ITALY:

Take Big Air Base

Clinging stubbornly to the mountainous terrain, German small artillery and machine gunners slowed the progress of Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's advancing Fifth army in the Naples area.

The whole German line facing the Fifth army, however, was in danger of encirclement, following the British Eighth army's capture of Foggia, 80 miles to the northeast. With the British threatening their rear, the Nazis could continue to hold out only so long as it would take Montgomery's men to cross the mountains and get behind their backs. Thus, a slow and bloody German withdrawal up the Italian mainland loomed.

Possession of Foggia gave the Allies a network of airfields from which they could blast southern Germany and the Balkans. From Foggia, Munich is 500 miles, Vienna with its airplane factories 465 miles, and the Ploesti oil fields of Rumania 580 miles.

Feet in Both Camps

King Victor Emmanuel

With the restoration of Fascism in northern Italy under German auspices and the reported recognition of King Victor Emmanuel's government as a partner by the Allies, Italy apparently has stuck a foot in both camps.

Although the U. S. and Britain have refused to accept King Victor Emmanuel's government as an ally, they would welcome its assistance in helping throw the Germans from Italy, and thus give it rank as a military rather than a political partner. King Victor Emmanuel's government has been anxious to enter the Allied camp as a military partner, hoping that its co-operation would promote better peace terms for it.

Meanwhile, Benito Mussolini has been active in reforming his fallen Fascist regime in the north with German support. The Duce expects to raise an army to fight alongside of the Nazis again, and he has promised to abolish the monarchy and establish a republican government in which the people, rather than the king, would have the final voice.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:

On Move Again

Continuing Gen. Douglas MacArthur's policy of striking directly at enemy bases, Allied troops moved farther up the northeastern coastline of New Guinea to strike at the Japanese shipping port of Madang from the rear.

As the Allied forces worked their way up the Markham Valley toward Madang, other units bore down on Finschafen, the important sea and air base which lay encircled from three sides. Australian troops landed by sea to the north of the Jap base encountered bitter resistance.

Despite heavy attacks by Jap bombers, more American troops were put ashore on Vella Lavella island in the Solomons. Reinforcement of the U. S. garrison there further tightened the noose around the last Jap holding of Kolambangara island in the area.

DRAFT:

Eye U. S. Employees

Sen. Josiah Bailey

With Sen. Burton K. Wheeler's bill for the deferment of fathers doomed, Sen. Josiah Bailey proposed another measure which would require the induction of all draft-age single or childless married men now on the government payroll who did not switch to essential work.

Senator Bailey's bill also provided for the transfer of all physically fit army and navy commissioned officers between 18 and 38 years of age from noncombatant duty in Washington, D. C., to actual fighting.

In recent testimony before congressional committees, it was estimated that approximately 650,000 single and childless married men were on the government payroll. Opponents of the dads' draft insist that all eligible men from this group should be taken by the services before fathers are called. A bill drawn by Sen. Robert Taft would first draft all dads under 30 years of age.

Workers Needed

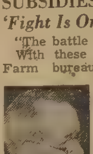
Declaring that in 1943 the civilian employment has remained below the level reached last year by 1,300,000, the army's industrial personnel director, James P. Mitchell, said the nation was faced with increasing the efficiency of the present labor force, or of drafting workers from non-essential to essential occupations.

Manpower is poorly distributed, Mitchell said, so that while there is adequate labor throughout the country, there are acute shortages in some areas and surpluses in others.

Mitchell urged that more consideration be given to the employment of women, stating that they compose the chief source of manpower remaining in the nation.

SUBSIDIES:

'Fight Is On'



Edward A. O'Neal

"The battle is on!"

With these words the American Farm bureau president, Edward A. O'Neal, declared that agricultural organizations would back up the congressional farm bloc's opposition to subsidies for the decrease of consumer food costs.

The battle lines were drawn following reports that efforts would be made to increase the Commodity Credit corporation's operating fund by at least 250 million dollars, to continue the crop loan program and initiate subsidy payments to producers, particularly to vegetable growers. Authority also would be sought to allow the CCC to resell produce at a loss.

Strong criticism was directed in congress at the government's announced plan for subsidizing dairymen between 25 and 50 cents per hundred pounds of milk for increased feed costs. It was felt prices should be determined by production costs.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

STEEL: Production of ingot steel recently touched a new peak at 100.8 per cent of theoretical capacity. The old record was 100.6 per cent. This means 1,756,900 net tons a week.

* * *

LIBERTY SHIPS: American merchant vessels chartered to foreign nations will all be of the comparatively slow Liberty ship class, it was reported.

PANT CUFF: Canadians can have cuffs on their pants again. The dominion government believes that supplies of wool from Australia will be larger.

* * *

CARDINALS: Billy Southworth, who has led the St. Louis Cardinals to two pennants, will continue as manager next year, according to club officials.

COAL:

Rationing Possible

John L. Lewis

As the OPA drew up plans for possible coal rationing, John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers and Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes' office found themselves in disagreement on the nation's supply.

A UMW spokesman declared that shortages of some by - product coals used by industry may exist, but production from other mines would more than make up for such scarcity. On the other hand, Ickes' office said weekly production would have to be increased if total supplies for the year were to approximate estimated needs of 600 million tons. It was said any increase was questionable in view of the constant loss of miners to other industries.

RATION POINTS:

Increased Sharply

Because of declining production, the office of price administration has raised the point value of butter from 12 to 16 points, the total allotment of red points per person each week. At the same time increases in points on nine items, and reductions in four others were announced.

The following increases have been ordered, based on the No. 2 size can: Apricots, from 27 to 36 points; red sour cherries, 14 to 25; other cherries, 14 to 23; figs, 13 to 21; grapefruit juice, 10 to 18; plums and prunes, 7 to 15 points. Grape juice was raised from 3 to 6 points a quart. Asparagus and mushrooms also were elevated in point value.

Reductions were ordered for canned green or wax beans, down from 10 to 8 points for the No. 2 can; corn, from 16 to 13, except for whole kernel vacuum-packed, which went down fro 20 to 18 points. Dried peas and lentils have been placed on the unrationed list.

OPA:

Dealers Licensed

Only farmers, fishermen and government agencies are exempt from federal licensing following an OPA order that all persons or concerns selling services or commodities under price controls are required to have licenses.

Most wholesalers and all retailers automatically were licensed, and the recent order was designed to take in canners, meat packers, auctioneers, brokers and other agents.

Licenses of operators found guilty of price control violations can be suspended for as long as 12 months.

NAZIS AND JAPS:

Strength Greater

Gen. H. H. Arnold

". . . Recent victories have failed to affect in any vital degree the strength of the enemy . . ." With these words Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson summed up statements of Gen. George C. Marshall, Gen. H. H. Arnold and Maj. Gen. George V. Strong to a gathering of ranking industrialists, labor leaders and newspaper executives.

As chief of military intelligence, General Strong revealed that the Nazis now have three times as many combat divisions as they had when they invaded Poland, and their domination of conquered countries has given them a labor force of 35 million workers. Despite recent heavy losses, the Nazis' air force exceeds its pre-war strength.

Japan can call upon four million soldiers for action, General Strong said, and, like the Nazis, her conquests have given her a vast pool of manpower and natural resources,

RUSSIA:

Last Ditch

The Dnieper river reached, the Nazis dug into its western banks in an attempt to throw back the charging Russian armies.

Failure to hold the line along the 750-mile Dnieper river would compel the Nazis to withdraw to prepared defenses on the 1939 pre-war boundaries.

No sooner had the Nazis reached the broad Dnieper, however, than Russian units forced their way across the river at several points, and paratroopers were dropped behind the German lines on the west bank. The Nazis sought to wipe out these detachments before they could establish footholds.

In the oil rich Caucasus, the last German troops were thrown out, relieving the threat to the Russian fuel supply. In all the Reds have regained over 300,000 miles of the territory overrun by the Nazis.

REAL ESTATE:

Enjoying Boomlet

Rising selling prices in 87 per cent of all cities in the country, and increased sales in 71 per cent, distinguish the current real-estate market.

Realty is in greatest demand in cities with war-time industrial activity, and buyers' interest has not been dampened by ceilings on rentals. Inquiries for business properties have decreased because of goods shortages.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

WHEN Jose Iturbi heard that Morton Gould and Alec Templeton were to appear on the same radio program he said "You may rest assured that you will hear every type of music from Bach to boogie and Wagner to woogie!" Which is about what happens on the "Carnival" program each Wednesday night. Gould, composer, conductor, pianist and arranger, has written music that has been played by orchestras from that of Toscanini to that of Glenn Miller. Templeton appears with leading symphony orchestras, and also plays boogie - woogie piano. Musically there's practically nothing they can't do—but their weakness is improvisations!

Dick Jones, the new "Henry Aldrich," has entered Hackley school at Terrytown, N. Y., and whenever a phone call comes there for Dick the other boys call out, as "Mrs. Aldrich" does on the air—"Hen-reee! HENRY ALDRICH!"

Hollywood has plenty of "technical experts," but when Samuel Bronston, producing "Jack London" for United Artists, wanted a man who knew all about seals and how they are caught he had to search the San Pedro waterfront. Sven Hugo Borg, Swedish actor who was Greta Garbo's interpreter when she first landed in Hollywood, went along to help. P. S.—They got their man.

Following sneak previews of "Lady in the Dark," in which he co-stars with Ginger Rogers, Ray Milland was given a new seven-year contract, without options, by Paramount.

"Holy Matrimony" brings us Monte Wooley and Gracie Fields in such a good picture that 20th Century-Fox executives ought to do nothing else but try to find another suitable story for them. It's based on Arnold Bennett's "Buried Alive." Miss Fields made a tour of British, North African and Sicilian army and navy camps during the summer; she'll have her own radio program this fall.

For the first time in her screen career Joan Fontaine will do an imitation, in "Frenchman's Creek." But nobody will be able to tell whether it's a good one or not, for the lady whom the talented Joan imitates is—Nell Gwynn!

Parks Johnson and Warren Hull have been a bit dazed since they staged a "Vox Pop" from the Laurinburg-Maxton Air Base, Maxton, N. C., where airborne troops are trained. They learned that the individual airborne soldier carries almost as many items as a department store, and learns how to do more things than any motion picture actor ever dreamed of.

Gracie Allen returns to the Metro lot after a two-year absence to play a comedy role in "Two Sisters and a Sailor," and also to introduce on the screen the "One Finger Piano Concerto" which she played at Carnegie Hall and the Hollywood Bowl.

For every screen scrape he gets into John Garfield uses the flat black automatic pistol he first used in "Blackwell's Island," made when he arrived in Hollywood. He has "killed" ten men with it. "It's my character gun," says he. "It's the right type for me." Latest use is in "The Fallen Sparrow," the RKO drama of espionage, in which he makes love to Maureen O'Hara, Martha O'Driscoll and Patricia Morison, and goes gunning for Walter Slezak. The gun works just as well whether he's the villain or the hero.

ODDS AND ENDS—Harry Conover's Cover Girls are aiming to blanket the movie lots; five have won movie contracts and three others have screen commitments . . . One of the "Crime Doctor" regulars, Walter Greaza, now doubling into Elmer Rice's play, "A New Life," has received movie offers from three studios . . . United Artists' "The Girl From Leningrad" has had a change of title; it's now "Russian Girl" . . . When Jean Arthur reported for her guest appearance on the first Charlie McCarthy show this fall, Charlie gave her a necklace of bear claws which he had bought her in Newfoundland.

Household Hints

For safe storing, mattresses should be covered, then hung or placed on a flat surface with no more than one mattress on top of another, in a dry, well-ventilated space.

Do not wash eggs. Washing destroys the protective film that keeps out air and sun.

Uncooked meat should be lightly covered with waxed paper before storing in refrigerator. Place right under the freezing unit and maintain temperature at 33 to 37 degrees. Wipe meat with a damp cloth before cooking. Ground meat should be used promptly.

A cork when soaked in hot water—even if it is a little too large—will fit a bottle readily.

Make an oilcloth cover for your ironing board to cover it when not in use; also use the cover when brushing and sponging garments.

Never add soda when cooking vegetables, because it destroys those precious vitamins, B1 and C. Cook vegetables quickly and they will retain their bright color.

Admirals may be admirable, but that isn't where the word comes from. It comes from an old Arabic word "amir-al" meaning "commander of." That's what the Admiral is, the top-ranking officer in the Navy. Top-ranking cigarette with our Navy men is Camel—the favorite, too with men in the Army, Marines, and Coast Guard, according to actual sales records from their service stores. THERE is a knack about selecting the right thing from the assortment of junk in Mother's attic or a second hand furniture store. Here is a rocker not at all quaint but just awkward to have around.

Off come the rockers and on go a set of casters and a seat cushion to make it the right height. That will make it useful but still no beauty. A remnant of flowered chintz will cover the cushion and the objectionable part of the carved back. "REGULAR" AGAIN AFTER 2 WEEKS!

"Cereal Brought Relief from Long Siege of Purgatives!"

Here's a sincere, unsolicited letter every disappointed "doser" will want to read:

"I was a sufferer from common constipation. Took pills or medicines of some kind, but got no lasting relief. Finally, I tried KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. Have been eating it about 2 weeks now, and have stopped taking pills and things. My bowels move regularly every day. I am a KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN eater from now on!" Mr. Burl Brown, Warren, Ark.

How do scientists explain KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN'S gentle-acting, amazing relief, so familiar to thousands? Simply thus: Lack of certain cellulosic elements in the diet is a common cause of constipation. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's richest sources of these elements—which help the intestinal flora lighten and fluff up the contents of the colon, for easy, natural elimination. Not a purgative, that robs the system of water. Not "roughage" that acts by "sweeping you out"! ALL-BRAN is a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

Eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if it doesn't give you the relief you've dreamed of. Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

DON'T LET CONSTIPATION SLOW YOU UP

● When bowels are sluggish and you feel irritable, headachy, do as millions do—chew FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Simply chew FEEN-A-MINT before you go to bed, taking only in accordance with package directions—sleep without being disturbed. Next morning gentle, thorough relief, helping you feel swell again. Try FEEN-A-MINT. Tastes good, is handy and economical. A generous family supply FEEN-A-MINT costs only 10¢

See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former feature editor of a North Carolina newspaper, has been inducted into the army and is near the end of his basic training at Fort Bragg. He has been classified as a cook and in addition his failure to master some of the fundamentals of army life have resulted in considerable extra KP duty. Thus he is thoroughly familiar with the Company kitchen and its workings. He has also learned the finer points of "goldbricking." He is editor of a section of the camp paper. As we pick up the story, Hargrove is entertaining "the Redhead" at dinner. She is having trouble getting the waiter to bring her a glass of water and Hargrove speaks:

CHAPTER XV

"Ahem," I said. He stopped humming a little tune with which he had engaged himself, and he looked at me with kindly curiosity. "Ahem," I repeated. "Are you the waiter with the water for my daughter?"

He turned on a tight, polite little smile. "The water, monsieur, will be forthcoming. I have sent my friend Charles for the water."

* * *

The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor this afternoon came as stunning news to the men at Fort Bragg. There had been a rumor, one day a couple of months ago, that Germany had declared war on the United States to beat us to the draw, and since it was merely a rumor, there was no confirmation or denial over the radio all day long. That supposed news back then had been taken with a philosophic shrug and the thought, "Well, it's what we've been expecting."

This today caused a different war feeling. It was not what we had been expecting. To the soldiers here, whose only attention to the newspapers is a quick glance at the headlines, it was startling and dreadful.

The men who heard the news announcement over the radio this afternoon at the Service Club were, for the most part, new to the Army, with less than a month of training behind them. Their first feeling of outrage gave way to the awful fear that they would be sent away, green and untrained and helpless, within a week.

The rumor mill began operation immediately. New York and Fort Bragg will be bombed within the month, the rumors said. Probably, by that time, all of us will be in Hawaii or Russia or Persia or Africa. Green and untrained and helpless. This business of teaching a man for thirteen weeks in a replacement center will be dispensed with, now that war is upon us. You're a civilian one day and a rookie member of a seasoned fighting outfit the next.

Except for a few for whom the radio held a terrible fascination the men thought first of communicating with their families, their friends, their sweethearts. They immediately went for writing materials and for the two public telephones of the club. Almost all of the 64,000 men of Fort Bragg were trying to reach their homes through the eight trunk lines which ran out of the pitifully overburdened little telephone exchange in Fayetteville.

Miss Ethel Walker, who was acting as senior hostess for the Replacement Center's Service Club, had planned an entertainment program for the evening, but when she looked out at the tension in the social hall, she despaired. She telephoned her boss, Major Herston M. Cooper, the special services officer.

"There's no use trying to put on the show tonight," she said. "Shall I cancel it? And may I turn off the radio?"

"If it's a good program, keep it," said the major. "And by all means leave the radio on. Just hang on; I'll be there in five minutes."

The major, a former criminologist and schoolteacher in Birmingham, was a lean and mischievous-looking infantry officer with a gift of gab and a camaraderie with the enlisted men. He sauntered into the Service Club, noised it about that he was going to talk, and hooked up the public address microphone.

"Here it comes," said an unhappy acting corporal. "Here comes the higher brass, to tell us the worst."

The major cleared his throat and looked over the crowd which gathered about him. "I know that this is your Service Club," he said, "and I'm a staff officer barging in on you. Before I was an officer, I was an enlisted man. And, as an enlisted man, I've done more KP than any man in this room."

A little of the tension passed and the major lapsed into one of his conveniently absent-minded rambles. "In fact, I went on KP every time they inspected my rifle. Couldn't keep the thing clean."

He paused. "The main thing that has us worrying this afternoon is the very same thing we're being trained to protect. It's what they call the American Way—and they spell it with capitals.

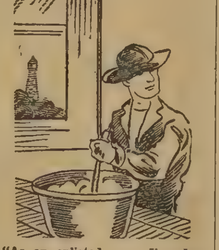
"I have my own ideas about the American Way. I think the American Way is shown in you boys whose parents paid school taxes so that you could know what it was to cut hooky. It's shown in the men who pay two dollars to see a wrestling match, not to watch the wrestlers but to boo the referee. It's the good old go-to-hell American spirit and you can't find it anywhere but here.

"You and I both, when we were called into the Army, brought our homes with us. We've been thinking less about war than about getting back home after a while—back to our girls and our wives and our civilian jobs.

"Well, we know now where we stand and we don't have to worry about whether we're in for a long stretch or a short vacation. That should be cleared up now. We know that we've got only one job now and we haven't time to worry about the one at home.

"You're worrying because you're not prepared soldiers, you're not ready to fight yet. When the time comes for you to go, you'll be ready. You'll have your fundamental training before you leave the Replacement Center.

"Spending your duty hours at work and your leisure hours at worry—that's no good. That's what the enemy wants for you."



"As an enlisted man, I've done more KP than any man in this room," said the major.

"I guess that's all, boys."

He turned to leave the microphone, but returned as if he had suddenly remembered something.

"The regular variety show will go on tonight at eight o'clock," he said.

They come and they go from the Replacement Center more quickly now, or perhaps it merely seems that they do. The training cycles have not been cut down much, but the turnover of men seems greater. Perhaps it's just that we notice the arrivals and departures more, now that war has given them grimness.

We call the train—the one that brings in recruits and takes out soldiers—the Shanghai Express. The term probably was used first by some disgruntled soldier who put into it the bitterness of a difficult transition from civilian to soldier. Now the term is used with a certain tender fondness by the permanent personnel of the Center, we who watch the men come and go.

The melancholy moan of a train whistle is heard in the distance of the night and a sergeant clicks his teeth wistfully. "Here she comes, boys," he says. "Here comes the Shanghai Express." The sound of the whistle identifies all that touches the heart of a soldier.

There was a group of new men coming in this morning, down at the railroad siding. Their new uniforms hung strangely upon them, conspicuous and uncertain and uncomfortable—new uniforms on new soldiers.

They were frightened and ill at ease, these men. A week ago they had been civilians and the prospect of the Army had probably hung over some of them like a Damoclean sword. They had been told, by well-meaning friends, that the Army wouldn't be so bad once they got used to it. The Army will make you or break you, they had been told. The Army really isn't as bad as it's painted, they had heard. All of this, in a diabolically suggestive way, had opened conjectures to terrify the most indomitable.

This morning, they still hadn't had time to get over their fears. They still had no idea of what Army life was going to be like. Most of all and first of all, they wondered; "What sort of place is this we're coming into?"

Their spirits were still at their lowest point — past, present, or future.

The Replacement Center band, led by wizened little Master Sergeant Knowles, was there to greet them with a welcome that might dispel from them the feeling that they were cattle being shipped into the fort on consignment. First there were the conventional but stirring military marches, the "Caisson Song" and all the rest. And then there was a sly and corny rendition of the "Tiger Rag," a friendly musical wink that said, "Take it easy, brother."

Just as their arrival marks an emotional ebb, their departure is the flood tide. The men who came in a few weeks ago, green and terrified, leave now as soldiers. The corporal whom they dreaded then is now just a jerk who's bucking for sergeant. Although they are glad that they have been trained with other men on the same level here, the training center which was first a vast and awful place is now just a training center, all right in its way—for rookies. They themselves have outgrown their kindergarten.

The band is at the railroad siding, this time to see them off with a flourish. They pay more atention to the band this time. They know the "Caisson Song." They know their own Replacement Center Marching Song, composed by one of their number, a quiet little ex-music teacher named Harvey Bosell. They hum the tune as they go aboard.

They see the commanding general standing on the side lines with his aide. He is no longer an ogre out of Washington who might, for all they know, have the power of life and death over them to administer it at a whim. He is the commanding general, a good soldier and a good fellow, and it was damned white of him to come down to see them off.

They board the train and they sit waiting for it to take them to their permanent Army post and their part in the war.

As a special favor and for old time's sake, the band swings slowly into the song that is the voice of their nostalgia, "The Sidewalks of New York," Yankee or Rebel, Minnesotan or Navadan, they love that song.

You can see their faces tightening a little, and a gentle melancholy look come into their eyes as the trombone wails beneath the current of the music. Their melancholy is melancholy with a shrug now. Home and whatever else was dearest to them a few months ago are still dear, but a soldier has to push them into the background when there's a war to be fought.

With the music still playing, the train pulls slowly out and Sergeant Knowles waves it goodby with his baton.

An old sergeant, kept in the Replacement Center to train the men whose fathers fought with him a generation ago, stands on the side and watches them with a firm, proud look.

"Give 'em hell, boys," he shouts behind them. "Give 'em hell!"

REVERENCE FOR GOD

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:3-7; Matthew 4:10; 6:9; John 4:23, 24.

GOLDEN TEXT—God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.—John 4:24.

The first three commandments bring man into the presence of God, where he is taught how to worship God in spirit and in truth.

"The first commandment (Exod. 20:3) bids us worship God exclusively; the second (vv. 4-6) bids us worship Him spiritually. The first commandment forbids us to worship false gods; the second forbids us to worship the true God under false forms" (Farrar). The third commandment (v. 7) indicates that true worship will deal reverently with the name of God.

Israel had lived among the Egyptians, a people known for their worship of images, and were about to enter into Canaan where there were many false gods. The Lord was therefore careful not only to forbid the worship of other gods, but also to forbid the making of images of any kind, whether they represented the many gods of heathendom, or were attempts to symbolize the true God.

I. The Command to Worship (Exod. 20:3-7).

God first claims the entire devotion of man. If He is Jehovah, the Lord God, it is obvious that there can be no other god before Him. He is a personal God (v. 2) with whom it is possible for man to have fellowship. He must come first in our thought and our love.

The second commandment expressly forbids idolatry in any form. The injunction is twofold. (1) Men are forbidden to make any material likeness which to them represents a being to be worshiped. It matters not whether it be an image or what men believe God to be like, or the image of an angelic being, a heavenly body, in fact, "anything that is in the heaven above," or on the earth—such as a man or animal; or under the water—such as a fish. (2) If such objects have been made either by ourselves or others we may not bow down to them, nor render any service to them. Let us all examine our religious ceremonies and practices in the light of God's commandment.

Observe that obedience to this command brings rich blessing to "thousands" (v. 6), whereas disobedience is a curse not only to the man who disobeys, but also to his descendants.

The careless, vain or irreverent use of God's name is forbidden (v. 7). How common that practice is today, even among Christian people. If we do not actually use His name, we use some slang expression which stands for His name.

Now we turn to two passages from the Gospel of Matthew to see how Jesus practiced these commandments.

II. The Example of Christ (Matt. 4:10; 6:9).

To the temptation of Satan, offering rich reward for an act of worship to himself, Jesus gave prompt and effective reply by quoting Deuteronomy 6:13. Thus He gave His approval to the command that all our worship and service is to be given to God.

This spirit shows itself in the reverent devotion of the prayer (6:9) which Jesus taught His disciples. The name of God is to be hallowed—that is, to be regarded as holy. No one set a higher example of that than our Lord. Himself God, He was obedient to the Father, even unto death, always doing those things which pleased Him and honored His name (John 8:29; Phil. 2:8).

III. The Manner of True Worship (John 4:23, 24).

God is to be worshiped in spirit and in truth, not in dead formalism or by empty ritual. There must be reality in such devotion.

One would suppose that a truth so obvious and vital would long since have completely saturated the life of the church as well as of the individual believer. "God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."

Even today, countless men and women still believe that worship has something to do with place (vv. 20, 21) or race (v. 22) or some other external device or formula. What a pity, when the gracious and delightful way to worship is through personal spiritual communion between God and man.

Deadening formalism is not our only enemy. There is the powerless preachment of modernism—and in all honesty must we not admit that even some so-called fundamentalism has in many respects lost the true spirit of the faith for which it rightly contends.

We see then that the commandment of God regarding reverence is not just a law on a faded page in an ancient manuscript. It is a living, vital reality, operative today.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

FINAL COUNT IN BABY COMPETITION

it was a "fair field and no favorites" throughout all the various stages of the campaign, so we know the ones who lost, will accept the results in the spirit of true sportsmanship for which all Americans are noted.

While the race was on of the keenest sort, the best of feeling seemed to prevail at all times. They all seemed to go on the theory that "I would love to win that first prize, but if I don't, I hope it will be to the one who proves the better man," that's the spirit that was in evidence, and we might add—it speaks volumes for the good breeding and social tastes of those who took part in this interesting little baby affair.

In writing finis to this fine little campaign, we wish to take this opportunity to express our grateful appreciation to all those, who in any manner, helped in making this the splendid success it has been. Particularly does this apply to the many generous people of this section whose liberal, and ready response to the solicitation of our workers, was so necessary to the success of the campaign —without their cooperation, it would have been all impossible

We also wish to thank the gentlemen who acted as judges in making the final count, then coming to our office to announce the winners. Their prompt and efficient service was greatly appreciated by the parents and friends of the little ones concerned, and who were anxiously awaiting their decisions: thanks, kind sirs, and many of them.

The names of all the little ones finishing the race and their final vote, will be found elsewhere in today's issue.

CORP. HENRY E. WILKINS

WAS HOME RECENTLY

Corp. Henry E. Wilkins was home recently visiting his wife, the former Miss Louise Chambers, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Wilkins, of Verbena, Ala. He has spent four months overseas, and is now stationed at 287th, Part Co. T. C., Fort Lawton, Wash.

"Tigers" Trounce Isabella 51-6

Last Friday night Clanton steamrolled Isabella by the score of 51 to 6 on the local gridiron.

Touchdowns were made by Popwell, Seales, Bean, Payton and Wade.

First quarter Popwell and Bean scored on end rounds. Second quarter Payton, Seales and Wade scored, the first half ending 32 to 0. Second half Popwell, Payton and Wade went over for the touchdowns. Grooms for Isabella caught a pass to rack up 6 points, but failed to get the extra point. Because of Kenneth Smith's withdrawal from the team, Irwin Kennedy, Buddy Wade and Willie Payton have been fighting for the right half position. At this position, Wade playing was just as impressive.

This week Centreville of Bibb County will play Clanton on the local field.

Last year Centreville was undefeated, untied and unscored on until they met Clanton. Clanton took the game at Centreville 18 to 0.

PILOT CLUB MET

The Pilot Club met at the home of Miss Illa Mae Bean, with Miss May Denson as co-hostess. It was a business meeting, and after the discussion of past and future work in hand, refreshments were served, which was enjoyed very much.

HIGH SCHOOL P-T. A. MET

The Chilton County High School Parent-Teachers Association was called to order Tuesday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the High School Gymnasium by the President, Mrs. J. C. Burnett, who presented Rev. O. C. Lloyd as the devotional messenger for the afternoon.

Following the devotional and prayer, Mrs. Burnett asked Mrs. Omar Reynolds to read the minutes and conducted the business session, after which she turned the meeting over to the program chairman, Mrs. Joe Mullins. Mrs. Mullins introduced Prof. Hicks as her co-chairman, who had helped plan the program for the day, which included Miss Barton and a group of pupils in a most delightful and entertaining play, entitled, "The Lamp Went Out."

Miss Burt of the Welfare Department was the guest speaker on the program, and brought a very appealing talk on the "Child and the Home."

The meeting was dismissed by the President.

CHURCH NOTICE

Preaching Sunday morning at Walnut Creek, 11:00 a.m. There will not be any night preaching service at Walnut Creek. Sunday morning at the 11:00 o'clock hour will be the last preaching service that I will hold there before Annual Conference. We are now on our last round this month to all our churches.

We will preach at Lime Springs Sunday afternoon at 3:00 p.m. This, too, is our last preaching service before Annual Conference.—Rev. Reese Farnell.

ALL-OUT-FOR-VICTORY SCRAP DRIVE TO START OCTOBER 22ND HERE

T. L. Williams Made County Chairman; 585,000 Pounds Set As County Quota

Uncle Sam needs more scrap. On October 18th an All-Out-For-Victory Tour will start at Birmingham, making stops at three strategically located cities in the State each day for the two weeks following. This tour is being conducted by the U. S. Army in cooperation with the Alabama Salvage Committee in behalf the newly intensified scrap drive, which is to run through November 15th. Traveling with the Victory Tour will be wounded veterans recently returned home, who will tell of actual battle experiences. An interesting display of guns and other Army equipment will be shown at the meetings. Army officers traveling with the Victory Tour will explain the use of the equipment and interview the veterans.

The Victory Tour will reach Clanton on October 22nd at 3:00 o'clock, and will be at the Chilton County High School Athletic Field. The School will turn out at that time for the occasion. The public is cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Kudzu Seed Are Important---Connell

Want to help save kudzu seed? There'll be a market for them. Why?

In 1936 the CCC Camp planted 2.6 acres on some steep, rather badly washed land which was a part of the farm of C. C. Cofer. This kudzu was cultivated in 1936 with peas interplanted from which enough return was obtained to cover labor and taxes. In 1938, '39 and '40 being a little skeptical about mowing kudzu the field was used for temporary grazing. The field was cut for hay in 1941 with a satisfactory yield. In 1942 before plants became active, basic slag was applied and the field thoroughly disked. A decided improvement in growth was noted and the field which adjoins the pasture was again used for grazing.

This year on June 25 the field was mowed for hay and the yield was 5,005 pounds, and this week from cutting made October 8, Mr. Cofer put 4,620 pounds of prime quality hay in his barn—a yield of 3,700 pounds per acre. Charging all labor and fertilizer which have been expended on this field since 1936 this year's hay crop cost Mr. Cofer about $10 per ton—and has had three years grazing and another year's hay crop to pay the taxes and interest on land value—and he has a piece of land that will enable him to put quality hay in his barn at a cost of about $4.50 per ton, or that can be concerted to cultivation with the high yields expected from the best "new ground."

See Brooks Connell or R. W. Williamson in the County Agent Building about saving the seed.

BONDS BOUGHT DURING DRIVE TO BE DEDICATED

Bond bought by Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Haggard and dedicated $100 to Mrs. Haggard's brother, Pfc. Carlos L. Owen, 1862 M. Depot Co. (Det.) A. P. O. 523, in care Postmaster, New York, N. Y.

Bond bought by Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Haggard and dedicated $150 to Mr. Haggard's cousin, John K. Brown CM 2-c, 120th Const. Batt., Fleet P. O., New York, N. Y.

Bond bought by Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Hampton and dedicated $500 to their son, James L. Hampton, S 2-c 500 Howard Street, in care Fleet Records Office. San Francisco, Calif.

Two Bonds bought by Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Watson and dedicated to their son, ($200.00,) Pvt. Theron C. Watson, ASN 34814558, T.R. H., 3rd Reg., C.R.T.C. Barracks 548, Fort Riley, Kan.

In connection with the campaign which was carried on here Saturday last, with the sale of War Bonds—Mrs. Esther Smoke purchased a $100 bond in honor of her three brothers who are in the service, and whom, incidentally, are all home together on a furlough.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Headley bought a $100 bond in honor of Bernice L. Vance, who is serving in Australia, also Bernice's father purchased one of like denomination, dedicating it to his son.

This looks like a graceful gesture to make in honor of those boys who are fighting so bravely for their country, and it would seem like a wholesome tribute to their sacrifices if others of us would follow suite.

Rev. D. W. Shepherd, the new pastor at large, will preach at Archers Chapel Saturday night at 7:30. Every one is urged to come.

War Ration Book 4 Issued In County Oct. 27, 28, 29

Every person in Chilton County will want to apply for his or her War Ration Book Number 4 at one of the schools listed below on October 27, 28, or 29, between one and five o'clock in the afternoon. To be eligible for Book 4, a person must present his Book 3 at the school. The applicant must also fill out an application blank. It is hoped that these applications can be distributed through the schools before the registration dates. According to an announcement from the superintendent's office, the following schools will issue Book Number 4:

Alabama Mills, Baker, Chilton County High, Clanton Grammar, Collins Chapel, Concord, Cooper, Enterprise, Isabella, Jemison, Maplesville, Mt. Pleasant, Stanton, Thomas, Thorsby, Union Grove, Verbena, Vermont, Clanton Colored, Chilton County Training.

Complete instructions have not been received by the Local War Price and Ration Board, but it is hoped that all materials will be delivered in time to give complete instructions next week. Watch next week's papers for detailed instructions, but mark your calendar and be ready to register at a school on October 27, 28, or 29, from one to five o'clock in the afternoon.

SELMA HORSE SHOW ON OCTOBER 14TH

Local Young Lady To Act As Sponsor

Miss Sarah Dean Smith, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H Lohren Smith of Clanton, will be "Miss Clanton" at the Selma Round-Up Horse Show, where she will serve as sponsor

The Selma Horse Show on October 14th will bring to a grand climax the Fall circuit of the Plantation Saddle Horse Association. This Association was organized in the Fall of 1942 for the promotion of good saddle horses. In order to better promote these saddle horses and to provide some method whereby the owners could show them, it was decided to have local Horse Shows in various participating communities, which communities would have to be eligible under the rules of the Association.

The leadership of the Plantation Saddle Horse Association has been in the able hands of J. Bruce Henderson, of Miller's Ferry, as President. He reports that an excellent Horse Show has already been held in Camden, Thomaston, Hayneville and Clanton. This is the first Horse Show which has ever been held in two of these communities, namely, Hayneville and Clanton.

The afternoon Horse Show in Selma, beginning at 2:00 p.m. on October 14th, at Rowell Athletic Field, will be the same type show as held in the other communities. Entry blanks have already been sent out, and if anyone has not yet received such blanks, they should get in touch with Archibald T. Reeves, Box 485, Selma, Alabama.

The Grand Championship or Round-up Show will be held on the same day at 8:00 p.m., Rowell Athletic Field, in Selma. This is a show which anyone, even though not a horse lover, would enjoy seeing. As far as the walking horses are concerned, they will be composed of the 1st, 2nd and 3rd prize winners in all the other shows in this Circuit. However, there will also be Children's Horsemanship, Three-gaited, Five-Gaited and Fine Harness Classes eligible to anyone, even though they have not participated in the other shows. This will be the greatest Horse Show in Alabama, and the people of Selma are looking forward to great entertainment for visitors.

This Selma Show is the grand round-up for the Horse Shows in the Circuit, sponsored by the Plantation Saddle Horse Association of America, Inc. It will be a show which will exceed the fine performance of the past Selma Horse Shows. Over $700 in prize money will be distributed during the Selma Horse Show, and there will be classes available for every horse, no matter what type he may be.

APPLICATIONS WANTED FOR ECONOMIST

An Economist, at a salary of $3,200 a year, is needed for duty in Atlanta, Ga. This announcement was made today by Reese G. Mullins, Secretary of the Local Civil Service Board at Clanton, Ala. All persons who feel that they are qualified for this job are urged to file an application. These applications must be on file with the Fifth Civil Service Region, New Post Office Building, Atlanta 3, Ga., not later than October 18.

SGT. ERNEST T. WILLIAMS

BUYS BONDS AS WELL AS SERVES IN THE ARMED FORCES

Sgt. Ernest Williams, who is stationed in England is not only doing his bit in the armed forces of his Country but is also buying War Bonds. In the recent drive he instructed his parents at Verbena to buy three $500 Bonds and two $100 Bonds. In the Second War Bond Drive he bought a $500 War Bond also. Sgt. Williams was inducted in February, 1942, and sent to Keesler Field for his basic training. He finished at the Air Corps Technical School and received his diploma June 2nd, 1942. He was then sent to Salt Lake City, Utah, and several other camps before being sent to England in September of last year. Sgt. Williams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Williams of Verbena.

Schools Of County To Name Bomber And Three Fighters

Chilton County School children will have the chance of a lifetime beginning October 11th, when the drive opens for War Bonds and Stamps in the schools of the County.

Lasting approximately three weeks and closing October 29th, the four highest ranking schools in the County will get to name the planes. The ones with the highest ratio will name the bomber and three next largest will get to name the three fighter planes. The competition is expected to be keen and every boy and girl is needed to get behind his or her school and sell those bonds and stamps to put his school out ahead. Every school has a chance as the amount will be counted according to the number of Bonds and Stamps sold. Here a few of the most important rules as furnished by the Superintendent of Education, Mr. Delos Culp:

3. Percentage of bond and stamp sales counts; amounts do not. For example, if a school has 200 enrolled and makes 180 Individual bond or stamp sales during the contest period, that school's mark would be 90 percent; if a school with an enrollment of 50 made 50 individual sales its score would be 100 percent. (Although amounts of sales do not count in the contest, please keep a record of total sales to report as a matter of interest.)

4. If more than one sale of bonds or stamps is made to one individual during the same day, only ONE sale can be counted. One individual may buy a stamp every day of the contest and count as many sales if he wishes

5. A report must be made to the Education Office not later than November 3. The report must be a certified statement from the principal of the school giving the following: (a) Name and address of school, (b) Number of children enrolled, (c) Number of individual bond or stamp sales made during the period, (d) Percentage of sales compared to enrollment (100 times the sales divided by the enrollment), (e) The total amount of sales, (f) A CHOSEN NAME FOR A BOMBER AND A FIGHTER.

HOMECOMING IN HONOR OF SGT. CALVIN JONES

Sgt. Calvin Jones, at home on a furlough for the first time in seven years, will be honored with a homecoming at the home of Auburn Jones next Sunday, October 17th. Sgt. Jones has been stationed in Alaska for the past two and one-half years. All of his friends and relatives are cordially invited to visit him at the reunion next Sunday.

COTTON GINNING REPORT

Census report shows that 8,811 bales of cotton were ginned in Chilton County from the crop of 1943 prior to October 1, as compared with 4,418 bales for the crop of 1942.

Report of Quarterly Conference, Clanton Methodist Church

Report of the Women's Society of Christian Service given at the Quarterly Conference of the Clanton Methodist Church on October 10, 1943:

To the Fourth Quarterly Conference,
Dr. Stanley Frazer, Dist. Supt.

The work of the Woman's Society of Christian Service in all of its phases has gone forward with most gratifying results in the year, 1943.

The financial status is excellent. Each of the four circles pledged to give $100. This total of $400 was budgeted as follows: $175 to conference; $75 to Christian Social Relations Activities; $75 to local church and parsonage activities and $75 to incidentals. The conference fund of $43.85 per quarter has been paid in full and on time for the three foregoing quarters. All financial obligations have been met promptly.

A Service Flag and honor roll have been placed in the church. The circles sponsored the purchase of 120 new Methodist hymnals, paying for about two-thirds of the number. Funds have been allocated for the purchase of an electric hot water heater to be placed in the parsonage. The circles put flowers in the auditorium and prepare the communion service. The sick and bereaved are remembered with flowers, gifts and notes.

The State Conference in Selma was attended by five members.

Refreshments were provided and served to the children and guests attending the Vacation Bible School on the last evening.

Supplies were sent to the settlement home at Mt. Vernon.

Twenty-five dollars has been given to the Crippled Children's Association.

All programs and study courses have been conducted with good attendance and marked interests. A representative number subscribe to the two monthly magazines: THE WORLD OUTLOOK and THE WOMAN'S WORLD. These magazines are used for program material in the circle meetings. The prescribed literature has been used for the regular first Monday meetings. About 70 copies of the UPPER ROOM are distributed quarterly.

The Spiritual Life Committee joined with the pastor in a study of E. Stanley Jones's ABUNDANT LIVING, held at the prayer meeting service on Tuesday evenings. About 30 copies of the book were bought by members and friends.

On the fourth Tuesdays in March the WSCS in cooperation with the pastor presented a mission study course on Latin America. The respective circles served light refreshments after the meetings. A fine study and a delightful social hour was experienced. A total of 184 registered during the series.

On the third Mondays the mission study committee has used a book entitled, THE BIBLE AND OUR TIMES. This course has been completed.

At the regular business meeting on Monday, October 4th, it was voted to complete the financial year before the pastor goes to conference. Also on the third Monday in October at a spend-the-day at the church another mission study will be conducted, using WE, WHO ARE AMERICA, by Kenneth D. Miller. Then the week of prayer will be observed on October 25-28th. A drive is on to secure clothing for the Good Will Industries in Montgomery. Several under-privileged children are being furnished school books and essential clothing. The WSCS is acting as general chairman of a committee making arrangements for serving 75 to 100 lunches at the crippled children's clinic on October 29th.

A splendid year, rich with accomplishment and permeated by a beautiful spirit of interest and cooperation is the joyous harvest of the WSCS as 1943 draws to a close.

Respectively submitted,
MRS. HORTON WALKER,
President Woman's Society of Christian Service.
Compiled by: Mrs. Joseph J. Mullins.

BROWN SERVICE OFFICE TO BE OPEN ON SATURDAY AFTERNOONS

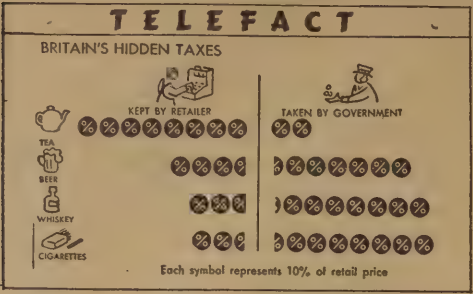
Starting Saturday, October 18th, next, the office of the Brown Service Insurance Company will be open on Saturday afternoon for the convenience of policy holders who wish to transact business at that time. Heretofore the office has been closed on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons. From this date the office will be open Saturday but closed on Monday afternoon. Please keep this in mind when coming to pay your premiums. —Adv.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Steady Allied Drives in All Sectors Continue to Keep Axis on Defensive; Congress Studies Higher Tax Levies; AFL Sets Postwar Goals for Unions

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



British taxes on some items are interesting in the light of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau's request for 10½ billion dollars of new revenue, part of which would be raised by taxation of goods.

FORTRESS EUROPE:
Allies at Walls

With the big battle yet to come, Allied forces sparred with the Nazis all along the outer wall of Fortress Europe.

In Italy, the Americans and British moved slowly northward toward Rome through stubborn Nazi rearguard action. Entrenched in the rugged terrain, the Germans held back Allied troops with mortar and machine-gun fire, only giving up their ground to move to new positions when Clark and Montgomery brought up superior concentrations of artillery and men.

In an attempt to draw out the German fleet for a fight, British and American naval units raided the Nazis' shipping center of Bodoe in northern Norway. But the German fleet refused to be lured into the trap.

In the Aegean sea, the Nazis recaptured the islands of Kos and Leros, which serve as bases from which an invasion fleet moving into Greece can be shelled and bombed.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:
Madang Next

Holding the initiative, Allied forces moved swiftly up the northeastern coast of New Guinea, to clean out remaining Jap air and sea bases in this area of Australasia.

Latest Allied goal was Madang, another of the strong points which the Japanese established to harass any force attempting to move northward by sea or land. Driving forward through tropical country, the Allies neared the first ring of Madang's defenses, apparently manned by a medium-sized garrison, of the type being sacrificed by the enemy command in brief holding engagements.

Pressed in by superior Allied forces in the central Solomons, the Japs were evacuating the island of Kolambangara and moving their troops to the north by barge. Although the Japs moved the barges by night, concentrations were discovered along the shores by day, and these were peppered by Allied fliers.

LABOR:
AFL Meets

William Green

Labor's goal after the war will be the establishment of free, democratic trade unions in all countries, AFL President William Green declared in opening the 63rd annual convention of the American Federation of Labor in Boston.

Survival of the free enterprise system in the U. S. will depend upon American business' ability to provide employment after the war, Green said. Unless production is stimulated, the people will lose confidence in business leadership, he declared, and turn to government.

The need for 15 million homes after the war will afford one means of providing employment for seven million workers for many years, Green said.

Chief interest of the convention was the AFL's action on John L. Lewis' application for re-entrance of the United Mine Workers into the organization. Although bitterly opposed by some factions, there were indications the path might be cleared for accepting Lewis through further negotiations.

TAXES:
Ask for More

Henry Morgenthau

To add to present collections of 38 billion dollars, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau asked congress to raise an additional 10½ billion dollars in new taxes.

Morgenthau proposed raising 6½ billion dollars by increasing personal income taxes and cutting exemptions for dependents. To bring in another 1 billion, 100 million dollars, corporation taxes would be boosted.

The remainder of the money would be raised by sharply increasing taxes on tobacco, liquor, amusements and luxuries. New taxes would be placed on candy, chewing gum, soft drinks and greeting cards. Morgenthau also recommended broadening of the social security program to include practically all workers and provide temporary disability and hospitalization benefits.

On hearing Morgenthau's proposals, Rep. Robert Doughton said: "I do not see at this time how we can make the full increases requested."

DRAFT:
Senate Acts

With Sen. Burton Wheeler's bill to defer the drafting of fathers until January 1 doomed, the senate acted on a substitute measure of Sen. Josiah Bailey, designed to tighten grounds for deferment of government employees, and providing for the appointment of a commission to re-examine physical standards so as to permit use of many present 4F's.

Senator Bailey's bill also included a proposal of Sen. Robert Taft, under which no deferment could be granted unless the appeals board of the district where the employer makes the request gives its approval.

Although the majority of the draft boards held off the induction of fathers until congress acted on the issue, dads were being called in some instances. All told, 446,000 were supposed to be drafted by January 1 under the services' announced plans. However, the senate debate revealed that many more may be drafted because of navy demands.

WHEAT:
Restrict Feed

Commodity Credit corporation sales of wheat to feed mixers must be used for dairy cows and laying hens only, the War Food administration announced. At the same time, the WFA said "an effort is being made to discourage the feeding of market hogs to weights in excess of 200 pounds, or of beef cattle beyond fair to good finish."

To aid in relieving the eastern feed shortage, CCC revealed it was seeking to import wheat from South America, with the amount to be brought in determined by the shipping available. No corn could be imported, CCC said, because drouth has crippled the crop.

To encourage the accumulation of a larger country corn inventory by butyl alcohol and butyl acetate producers, OPA redefined a bushel of corn as of 56 pounds weight and 15.5 per cent moisture. Since the price of the chemicals had been tied to a base cost of a bushel of corn, high moisture content failed to reflect true margins.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

SPENDING: Higher individual incomes resulting from the war boom have boosted sales of various luxuries, a survey by the Northwestern National Life Insurance company shows. The figures reveal that sales of "quality" women's dresses have risen 60 per cent above a year ago, furs 66 per cent, jewelry 35 per cent, playing cards, 56 per cent, and cigarettes 17 per cent.

AUTOS: Dealers in new automobiles will have to sell to customers holding certificates on a "first-come-first-served basis" hereafter, according to an Office of Price Administration ruling.

FAMINE: Great Britain will send part of its scanty grain supply to India to relieve a famine in the Bengal region, Lord Woolton, British minister of food, stated recently.

Sees City's End

Frank Lloyd Wright

Because the automobile, airplane and helicopter will reduce travel time, more and more people will abandon congested cities and move to outlying districts, says Frank Lloyd Wright, one of the foremost leaders in the development of modern architecture.

The home of the future will contain much glass to permit sunshine and light, Wright says, and each one will have a little farm.

Smoke will be eliminated through the development of modern heating systems, Wright predicts, and the entire country will be electrified.

HOGS:
Reach Ceiling

On the first day price ceilings on live hogs went into effect in the Chicago stockyards, virtually all classes of pigs brought producers the $14.75 a hundred pounds top.

Buyers paid $14.75 for good 170 to 500 pounders and good sows from 300 to 450 pounds. Good 140 to 160 pounders and 475 to 700 pound sows brought from $14.50 to $14.75.

In all, 20 major markets received 87,000 hogs on the first day of the price ceiling, 51,000 below the preceding week. In Chicago, the lighter receipts were reflected in a general price rise, resulting in almost the same return for all grades.

RUSSIA:
'Hold Line'—Hitler

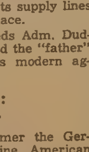
Flying to the Nazis' Dnieper river defense line, Adolf Hitler addressed his generals in these words: "Here I am, and here I shall stand."

As Hitler spoke, the last of the German rear-guards were falling back to the new lines, and the Russians encountered stiff resistance as they approached the Nazis' main positions. Driving rain further impeded the Reds' march.

Finland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania were included in the Nazis' new defense line. Except for a stretch in the north and one in the south, the new line was anchored on the west bank of the Dnieper river.

Broad along most of its course, with steep western banks, the Dnieper offers strong means of resistance. The Germans have massed artillery on these western banks to shell Russians concentrating for attack.

BRITISH NAVY:
New Chief



Sir A. B. Cunningham

To tough, 59-year-old Admiral Andrew Browne Cunningham went Great Britain's most responsible fighting assignment, first sea lord and chief of naval staff.

Cunningham's appointment followed the Italian fleet's surrender to the Allies after it had been driven to cover by superior British forces under his command. An old navy man, Cunningham served in the Mediterranean during the First World war, and in the South Atlantic waters during the Boer war.

To Cunningham will fall the responsibility for operating the great naval armada upon which Britain depends for keeping its supply lines open, in war and peace.

Cunningham succeeds Adm. Dudley Pound, often called the "father" of the British navy's modern aggressive tactics.

BOMB EUROPE:
Hit Nazi Industry

Continuing to hammer the German industrial machine, American Flying Fortresses struck Frankfort in a daylight raid, using high level precision methods to pick out and destroy production areas. Twelve hours later, a huge British force followed up the attack, dropping 500 tons of bombs, and leaving many sections of the big city burning. Motors, chemicals and tires are manufactured there.

Other targets in western and northern Germany were also assaulted by Fortresses and Liberators, one force disrupting installations at the Nazi-held air base at St. Dizier, France. All flights were escorted by P-47 Thunderbolts, and all reported meeting violent opposition.

Because the Germans have massed anti-aircraft guns around industrial installations and concentrated on fighter plane production, bombings of Europe have become more difficult, it has been revealed.

OIL:
More From Others

Nations with surplus stocks of petroleum should be encouraged to increase production and thereby forestall the depletion of the United States' reserves, a group of western senators and representatives whose states are facing reductions in gasoline rations declared. Mexico and Venezuela in particular were mentioned as countries that could increase their outputs of crude oil substantially.

Doug and Dai

By R. H. WILKINSON

Associated Newspapers. WNU Features.

DOUG PAYNTER came into the dining room and saw his wife's pocketbook lying conspicuously in the bowl on the table which she used for a centerpiece. He picked it up and opened it. Bills and loose change were stuffed carelessly inside.

Doug's mouth set grimly. He stalked into the bedroom where Dai was sititng at her dressing table arranging her hair.

"How many times have I spoken to you about leaving your pocketbook lying around in plain sight?"

Dai inserted the last pin in her chestnut brown hair. "A thousand at least," she replied brightly. "Would you mind not bothering me now, darling. I'm in a frightful hurry." She selected a cerise dress from the closet and dropped it over her head.

A white line appeared around Doug's mouth. "Dai, this is the end."

"The end of what, darling?"

"My endurance. I can't put up with it any longer. Your carelessness, I mean."

"Oh, for heaven's sake, Doug!"

"I'm quite serious, Dai. If I were a rich man it would be different. It wouldn't matter if ten or twelve dollars were stolen."

"Stolen? Oh, Doug, that is funy! I've never had a cent stolen from me in my life."

"Abe Firbush had never been hit by an automobile until last week. Now he's dead."

"Oh, for heaven's sake!"

"You can stand there and say 'for heaven's sake' from now till Doom's day. I'm finished."

She looked up suddenly, her eyes wide. "Finished? Doug, you're not serious. Not just because I left—"

"It isn't just what happened today. It's ever day, all the time. Not only leaving your pocketbook around, but carelessness in everything you do."

She stared at him, seeing for the first time the grimness in his eyes, the white line about his mouth. "Very well, Doug," she said quietly. "If that's the way you want it."

It wasn't as easy as he expected it would be. Before two days had passed Doug decided he'd rather have Dai back with all her careless habits than anything in the world. But pride and stubbornness forbade him calling her up. If he had thought that she might get in touch with him, beg his forgiveness, promise to do better in the future, he was bitterly disappointed.

He looked at his watch. Four forty-five. In fifteen minutes he would be through work. He would leave for home. Home! A rooming house on Blossom street. A lonely dinner in a near-by restaurant. He sighed deeply and picked up the evening paper. Almost instantly his eye fell on an item on the front page.

"Occupants of Apartment House Robbed by Masked Bandits. More than three thousand dollars taken from residents of 184 Astor street."

"Good heavens!" Doug sat bolt upright. That was his address. Dai must have been one of the victims. A horrible fear gripped him. He seized the phone, dialed his insurance company. "Hello, Joe? This is Doug Paynter. Did my wife cash in some insurance policies with you today? She did? Oh, Lord! Well, thanks. So long."

He rang the bell of the apartment. After a long time he heard a step. Then the door opened. It was Dai. Obviously she had been crying.

"Dai!"

"Oh, Doug!"

He took her into his arms, holding her close, talking to her comfortingly. "I got here as soon as I could, honey. I just read it in the paper. You poor kid."

"Read what in the paper, Doug?" She sniffled.

"About the robbery," he said, handing her his handkerchief.

"Oh, that." She blew her nose vigorously. "It was pretty awful."

"Did they get it all—all the insurance money?"

She shook her head and stuffed the handkerchief back into the pocket of his coat. "They didn't get any." She smiled at him. "They didn't look in the right places. You see, when I got home with the money I dropped it in the bowl on the dining-room table and neither of the bandits thought to look there. The police officer who came to investigate said I was awfully clever, because thieves never look in the most obvious places. Oh, Doug, you do love me, don't you? You are coming back? And you'll never leave me again, will you?"

Doug took a deep breath. "Yes, yes and no," he said and kissed her.

Old King Cole

Old King Cole, legendary character of nursery lore, ruled a town in eastern England appropriately named Colchester. Although the name does not memorialize the Falstaffian figure, Colchester has named one of the massive bastions of the old Roman wall Colkynge's Castle.

The history of Colchester may be traced to the Roman occupation of Britain. Among the early Britons it was known as Caer Colun, which, in the era of the Angles and Saxons, was changed to Colne Caester. Colchester is in normal times a garrison town. It is 52 miles from London.

NEW YORK.—On the other side of Boston from the selective North Shore lies Quincy, the shipyard town. It was there that Capt. Giles Chester Stedman first learned about tides, salt tang, and ships. He's never strayed far from the sea since. Even now in his job of commandant of cadets at the United States Merchant Marine academy, the Annapolis of the merchant marine, at Kings Point, L. I., he's close to the blue reaches of Long Island sound. The Kings Point school has been turning out officers to run the ships that get supplies to the fighters at the war fronts for a year now, and the cadets have learned navigation and discipline from a master.

Merchant Marine Cadets Taught Sea Tricks by Master

Captain Stedman was just short of 20 when the United States entered World War I and he quickly left his native Quincy for the deck of the coast guard cutter Ossipee. From August, 1917, to January, 1919, he was on the hazardous patrol between Gibraltar and the British Isles. Back in America, he took a few marine engineering courses at Massachusetts Tech and speedily returned to sea, this time in the merchant marine.

His heroic part in the rescue of 28 men from an Italian freighter in an October gale in 1925 skyrocketed him to fame and the chief officership of the then queenly Leviathan.

SPRUILLE BRADEN was a handsome bucko when he found himself a girl behind an aristocratic grille in Chile and courted her for all the world like the old Doug Fairbanks in a seven-reel thriller. Now he is too fat to be romantic, but he has all his youthful assurance as he tells Americans in Cuba not to monkey with the island's political machinery.

Our Cuban Envoy Has Considerable Job, Heft, Family

Braden is our ambassador to Cuba. It is like him to have a top-flight diplomatic job. So far as the records go he has been second rate only once. At Yale, when he tried football, he was fair to middlin' but no more. Elkhorn, Mont., had failed to train him properly either for blocking or rushing. But after he became a graduate mining engineer in 1914 he led the field.

He was 20 then. A year later he had his charming bride in that southern land of tranquil mornings where "the mountains get out of the map." A few years after he had enough copper and oil to come back and swing against home-grown competition. Here he made more money out of rugs, real estate, steam shovels, and in his early forties could afford to become President Roosevelt's roving envoy in Latin America. This took him from a handsome estate at Riverdale-on-the-Hudson but the rewards probably compensated. Shortly he was minister to Colombia, then ambassador, and now he and his family are in Havana. It is a considerable family, and may explain his considerable weight. Five children, plus diplomatic chores, doubtless leave him no time for the handball that used to sweat his girth down.

COLONEL William Tudor Gardiner has seen plenty of action and encountered plenty of excitement in his 51 years, but nothing to top his exploit with Brig. Gen. Maxwell Taylor, which the North African censor now passes on to the public. Outwitting the Germans to confer with Marshal Badoglio in Rome just as our forces were about to invade the Italian coast at Salerno involved all the mechanics of an old fashioned melodrama, and a few new ones, too.

Maine Folks Are Justly Proud of Colonel Gardiner

The residents of Maine reading the news throw out their chests a bit, for the Gardiners are Maine folk from way back and have a town named after them. What's more Tudor Gardiner is an ex-governor of theirs, having been elected twice at the head of the Republican ticket, in 1928 and again in 1930. The fishermen and lobster men between Boothbay Harbor and Penobscot Bay still chuckle at the way he startled them when he went campaigning in a yawl; sailing in with the tide out of a fog to sit atop a fish trap and talk politics.

Despite his Maine ancestry, Colonel Gardiner is actually a native of Massachusetts, his father having been a Boston lawyer and suburban Newton claiming him. At Groton young Tudor was football captain and senior prefect, which is way above par with the aristocratic Grotties. At Harvard he won fame at tackle until a badly shattered arm suffered in the Princeton game of 1911, his sophomore year, ended his gridiron career and turned him into a varsity stroke oar. He earned a law degree from Harvard back in 1917.

AS PLEASING and gay as finding a real four-leaf clover—this pretty apron with the applique of green clover leaves. A bit more than half-a-yard of material will serve for the apron—scraps of light and dark dotted or figured green materials make the easily appliqued leaves. Use the paler green shade for the waistband. Use organdie for a "party" apron—muslin, percale or unbleached muslin for an everyday apron.

● You can't see legume bacteria. If you could, you wouldn't know whether they were good or bad. But there is one sure way to get plenty of good and effective inoculating bacteria . . . just ask for NITRAGIN when you buy. NITRAGIN is the oldest and most widely used legume inoculant. For over forty years, farmers have used it to get bigger yields of legumes and build soil fertility. It costs only a few cents an acre but frequently boosts yields of vetch, winter peas, clovers, alfalfa, soy beans and other legumes up to 50% and more. Get NITRAGIN where you buy your seed. CHAPTER I

High up on the long hill they called the Saddle Back, behind the ranch and the county road, the boy sat his horse, facing east, his eyes dazzled by the rising sun.

The snug, huddled roofs of the ranch house, way below him, began to be red instead of just dark; and the spidery arms of the windmill in the gorge glinted and twinkled. They were smiling back at the sun.

"Good morning, mister!" shouted Ken, swinging his arm in salute; and the chunky brown mare he rode gave a wild leap.

To keep his seat, riding bareback as he was, he clapped his heels into her sides, and she leaped again, this time with her head down. Stiff-legged and with arched back she landed; and then bucked.

Once, twice, three times; and Ken was off, slung under her nose, hanging on to the reins.

She backed away and pulled to get free, braced like a dog tugging at a man's trouser leg.

She jerked her head viciously from side to side. Ken's teeth set in anger. "If you break another bridle—"

This thought made him crafty and his voice fell to a coaxing note. "Now Cigarette—be a good girl—thatsa baby—good girl—"

Ken got warily to his feet and went to her head, still talking soothingly but with insulting words.

"D'you think I'd ever ride a ornery old plug like you if I had a horse of my own like Howard's?"

The frown faded from his face and his eyes took on a dreamy look. "If I had a colt—"

He had been saying that for a long time. Sometimes he said it in his sleep at night. It was the first thing he had thought when he got to the ranch three days ago. He said it or thought it every time he saw his brother riding Highboy. And when he looked at his father, the longing in his eyes was for that—for a colt of his own.

He must get on Cigarette again.

First he had an apology to make. In all fairness, he must tell Cigarette that the fault had been his own. He had put his heels into her.

He knew exactly what his father would say if he told him about it.

"Cigarette bucked and tossed me."

"What did you do? Put your heels into her?"

"Yes, sir."

He and Howard had to say Yes, sir, and No, sir, to their father because he had been an Army officer before he had the ranch, and believed in respect and discipline.

He took hold of her withers and back, jumped and pulled, landed well up against her, held stiffly there by his arms, then carefully swung his blue-trousered leg over; and slowly, just like his father, settled to her back, legs hanging straight down.

Cigarette was calm. He tightened his rein, squeezed the calves of his legs a little, and she moved off.

One of the exciting things about coming up from school in Laramie to the summer vacation at the ranch, was the weather. Always something doing. Winds and rainbows and calm sunny days, then an electric storm; or frosts or even blizzards. People said it was because of the eight thousand foot altitude.

He put his head back and sucked in the smell of the cleanness and the greenness and the snow and the windiness—all so sharp and heavenly.

This was what he had been waiting for. All through the last unbearable months of school, the endless classes, the examinations—

At this an uncomfortable feeling gripped him. His and Howard's report cards had arrived in yesterday's mail with a letter from the Principal of the school addressed to their father, Captain McLaughlin. And McLaughlin had slung them on the desk with some papers and bills to open later. By the time Ken got back to breakfast surely his father would have opened them. There was that examination — Ken knew he hadn't done very well—

He wondered what time it was now. He looked down at the ranch. It wouldn't be long before breakfast. Everybody was awake. Going downstairs, his mother would call, "Time to get up, boys!" His father was sitting up in bed with his hair rumpled, pajamas rumpled, hand reaching out for a cigarette.

Gosh—if his father had read the reports! And that wasn't all, there was the saddle blanket too, the lost saddle blanket.

He turned from looking at the ranch house and let his eyes sweep the hillside. Saddle blanket, saddle blanket—every time he asked his father for a colt, McLaughlin said, I'll give you one when you deserve one.

A jack rabbit sprang up almost underfoot. Cigarette jumped, but Ken sat tight, and as the rabbit sailed away, he gave a yell and chased after.

Cigarette loved a good run.

Leaning back as Rob McLaughlin had taught his boys to do, feet forward and out, reins free, Ken rode like a steeple chaser.

Rabbit, pony and boy disappeared over the crest of the Saddle Back.

Nell McLaughlin pulled the drop-leaf cherry table out from the corner, opened the leaves so that it would comfortably accommodate four people and flung a red-checked cloth over it.

The roomy kitchen was full of bright sunshine from the windows which opened on the front terrace. It made squares of gold on the painted apple-green floor; and in front of sink and stove and baking table there were hooked oval rugs with gay flower patterns. A little brown cat sat by the stove washing her face.

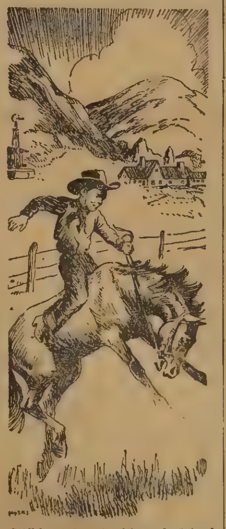
Neither motherhood nor the hard living at the ranch had deprived Nell of her figure or her maidenliness. At thirty-seven, she looked not much older than when she had won a silver cup, at Bryn Mawr, for being the best all-round athlete of her class.

Of medium height, with a long slender waist, her curves were held where they belonged by trained muscles, and, as she walked, there was a lightness about her which came partly from natural vigor and partly from the way her narrow head lifted from the shoulders to face whatever was to be faced, a danger, a storm, a loved one, a hope or a fear.

Ken was late to breakfast.

Coming in, he looked first at his father to see if he had opened the report cards.

Then he said, "Good-morning, Mother, good-morning, Dad," pulled out the one empty chair—a green-painted ladder-back chair with seat woven of rawhide thongs—and sat down. His heart was beating hard because his father's face had its glaring look and Howard was smug. Howard always got good marks.



Stiff-legged and with arched back she landed.

McLaughlin picked up a card and a letter which was lying open beside his place. "I suppose it will be no surprise to you to hear that you have not been promoted," he said. "You might like to see your marks."

He tossed the card over to Ken.

Nell McLaughlin handed Ken a blue bowl full of oatmeal covered with cream and brown sugar and said, "Let him eat his breakfast first," but Ken took the card and tried to focus his eyes upon it. He hated so to look, it was hard to see anything at all.

While he studied it there was a silence, Howard eating his bacon and smiling. Nell's face was troubled. She looked down, buttering her toast.

Ken read his marks through and finally came to the English examination.

He looked up and met his father's eye.

McLaughlin leaned forward. "Just as a matter of curiosity," he said, "how do you go about it to get a zero in an examination? Forty in history? Seventeen in arithmetic! But a zero! Just as one man to another, what goes on in your head?"

Ken had no answer. His face burned, and he bent over his plate and began on his oatmeal.

"Fortunately," he said reaching for a match, "there are almost two and a half months before school begins again. You'll do an hour a day on your lessons all through the summer to make up this work."

Nell McLaughlin saw Ken wince as if something had actually hurt him, and his eyes went to the wide-open window with a despairing look.

"Well," said McLaughlin, his voice like the crack of a whip. "Speak up. What have you got to say for yourself?"

"I dunno," answered Ken.

"What were you doing in that English exam? What were the questions you missed?"

"We were supposed to write a composition."

"What did you write?"

"I didn't get started."

"Didn't write a word?"

Ken shook his head.

"Couldn't you think of anything?"

"Yes, I had it all planned. I was going to write the story about how you lost your polo mare. How the Albino stole her from Banner—" Ken's eyes went to his father's. "We could write anything we wanted, it had to be at least two pages—"

"Well, what happened to you?"

"I—I—got to thinking about it. Thinking about Gypsy and the Albino—and what it was like, when he took her away—where he took her to—and all the wild horses in his band—and where they were all that time. All of that. I thought there was time, I thought the hour had just begun, and then the bell rang—"

There was a knock at the back door and McLaughlin shouted, "Come in."

Gus, the Swedish foreman, came in, carrying his big felt hat in his hand. His thickset body bent in a sort of bow aimed respectfully at Nell, and he looked first of all at her as he said, "Gude mornin', Missus," and then, "Mornin', Boss."

He did not come clear into the room, but propped himself by a hand on the door jamb, leaning there in his shy manner, a little smile like a child's turning up the corners of his mouth. His round pink face was framed in a mop of tight gray curls.

"What's today, Boss?"

Weather always entered into the plans. So before McLaughlin answered, he glanced out the window, noting the clear deep blue of the sky, and that the big white cumulous clouds were sailing across at a rapid pace.

Finally he said as if to himself, not looking at Gus, "A good day to move the horses."

"Ja, Boss. It's time de horses were off de meadows. De grass is growin an we should have water on 'em soon."

Howard couldn't keep still. "Could I help you move 'em this year, Dad?"

Ken didn't ask because he had no hope.

McLaughlin turned to look at Howard, but he wasn't thinking of him and did not answer. He smoked and Gus waited. At last he said, "Yes. We've got a month before Frontier Days. I've got to get four of the older horses in shape to rent for the Rodeo. That means fool proof. And those three-year-olds will have to be broken. I can't let them go any longer."

"Ja, Boss."

"And catch up Shorty and saddle him for me. I'll be up at the stables in a half hour or less."

"Ja, Boss."

Gus went out.

McLaughlin put down his pipe and pulled his coffee cup towards him. There was a moment's silence, then Howard asked Ken, "What horse did you ride this morning, Ken?"

"Cigarette."

McLaughlin looked up. "You've been riding Cigarette?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you manage to catch her and tie her up without her breaking anything?"

"No, sir."

"What did she break, a bridle?"

"No — that is — not today. She broke a bridle yesterday."

"What did she break today?"

"The metal catch on the halter rope."

McLaughlin paused a moment and looked down at his small son. "You're going to have to buck up, Ken. I don't know what to do with you. You never have your wits about you. Always wool-gathering. You lose a saddle blanket the first time you go riding—"

"But I found it again—"

"Yes, found the blanket and lost your horse. Trouble is, you don't try."

"I do try."

"I'd like to see some proof of it. Come, Howard. You can ride with me as far as the meadows and open the gates."

Ken pushed his chair back too. "Can't I help?"

"Certainly not. You have your study to do. Every morning right after breakfast. Remember that."

McLaughlin's scarred boots and heavy spurs clattered across the kitchen floor. Howard strode after, nobly refraining from casting a patronizing glance at Ken.

Three-Nation Agreement Essential to World Peace

Evidence Points to Existence of Conciliatory Atmosphere Between U. S., Russia and England; Common Sense Pact Necessary.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Through the past days, Washington has been anxiously watching a very trying, very delicate and difficult operation — the attempt to break in a stubborn three-horse team which has never pulled together before.

The difficult journey toward an understanding to be reached by personal conversations across the table between Britain, the United States and Russia has begun. Following perhaps secret tripartite conferences between representatives of the three nations is the planned meeting of the heads of the three foreign offices. Questions frankly discussed with unsolved problems left open (if plans don't go amiss) will then be taken up between Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill personally.

It is a tremendous undertaking. This three-horse team has never run in harness together before. America has never been harnessed at all; Soviet Russia has had only one short and violent experience—that with Germany—which ended in disaster; and as for Britain, she is accustomed to being lead-horse; therefore, a lot of patience will be needed to hitch all three abreast.

There is a whole library of documentation to prove that an all-for-one, one-for-all agreement among these three nations is impossible. But it must be remembered that there were 13 powerful reasons once why a United States of America was impossible too.

The present goal is not the formation of a triple alliance. The present problem is simply to get a common sense agreement between three nations without which a post-war situation is bound to arise which Prime Minister Churchill described as "confusion." And when he used that word, he made a new high for English understatement. Few doubt that he meant war.

Arguments Against

As I said, there are plenty of reasons, which can be cited why the United States and Britain and Russia cannot possibly agree but there are other reasons why they can.

There are two things which stand out in most people's minds as evidences that Stalin is not playing ball now and doesn't want to. One is the recurrent complaint in the official Russian press and earlier statements by Stalin himself to the effect that Russia is decidedly displeased with the Allies for not having built a second front by invading Europe from the British Isles. The other is the Moscow sponsorship of a Free Germany committee which appears to hold out better terms to Germany than unconditional surrender which the Allies demand.

Recently, I talked with a military man who suggested that perhaps the call for a second front after the invasion of Italy was part of an agreement with the Allies to confuse Germany. Churchill has said that he was assured by Stalin, when the Russian drive began this summer, that the Russians were confident that they could withstand German attack. As things have turned out, the Germans have not been able to counterattack. They have ordered a general retreat. It was admitted by military experts at first that this is a planned and orderly retreat. After the invasion of Italy, the Germans admitted that it was a general retreat. Now it looks like a rout. In other words, the creation of the "third front" in the Mediterranean has forced the Germans to give up the idea of attempting a counter-offensive. But since the slender hope of Hitler lies in dissension among the United Nations, why should Russia let him know that she was satisfied with any Allied action?

Free Germany Committee

As to the Free Germany committee, Russia itself has not made any direct official statement concerning it, has not officially backed up its program. It is composed of German prisoners in Russia who demand of their fellow-countrymen that Germany get rid of her present rulers and surrender. That in itself is something everyone wants to see. How much short of unconditional surrender that is, certainly is open to friendly discussion. We know that it worked in regard to the Italian surrender terms.

Now, what are the main propositions which Britain, America and Russia do not see eye to eye?

In the first place, there is the question of "spheres of influence"—the Balkans, the Middle East, the Mediterranean.

I have been told by persons presuming to speak with authority, that Russia suggested the creation of the Mediterranean commission, a body made up of representatives from Moscow, London and Washington, meeting on equal terms. That commission, whoever thought it up, was agreed upon. Historically, Britain has always refused Russia any hand in Mediterranean affairs. That would seem to be a step forward and even before the commission could start functioning, Russia was allowed to have her say concerning the terms of the Italian surrender. Agreement was reached as to the terms.

That would seem to indicate that a conciliatory atmosphere has been created in advance. Unless Russia is absolutely unwilling to make compromises, we can expect reciprocation when the questions of the Balkans and the Middle East arise, where there have always been similar conflict of interests.

The Baltic States

Another very sensitive question is the difference of opinion as to the treatment of the small nations which lie on Russia's western frontiers, notably the Baltic states. It is said that Russia feels that as soon as the German armies are driven back into the Reich, these border states, especially Lithuania and Estonia, a part of Poland and perhaps a part of Rumania (we leave the others aside for the moment, including Finland) are an integral part of Russia.

The United States, on the other hand, has always stood for the rights of small nations, for self-determination. Of course, Russia argues that plebiscites which indicate a desire to join the Soviet Republics have already been taken in part of the territory and if they were taken again, they would show the same results. That they express the will of the Nationals is denied by representatives of these countries in Washington.

Great Britain leans toward an acceptance of Russia's views however. The point has yet to be settled with the United States.

An additional point, which is really the one which has always caused suspicion on the part of Britain and America, is the question of communist propaganda spread by Russia for the purpose of overthrowing all capitalist governments. This is balanced by the fear on the part of Russia that capitalist governments are bent on destroying her as a communist state.

This is a tough one admittedly but not beyond the solution by honest men. Nor do honest men despair of its settlement.

Post-War Russia

From a purely cynical and material standpoint, it can be argued that post-war Russians will not attempt any move against Britain or America, either from within by propaganda and intrigue or from without by military attack because they will be an exhausted nation when the war is over. Competent observers believe it will take several generations for Russia to recover. Therefore, Russia's chief advantage will be gained by co-operation with other nations rather than by threats of aggression. To some degree, that also applies to Britain. Unquestionably, the United States will emerge from the war the greatest military power in the world. Only a combination of powers could defeat her. There rests, then, the moral responsibility on America of wise and generous use of her power—noblesse oblige.

This, I admit, is the bright side of the medal. But until the attempts toward tripartite discussion and agreement have utterly failed, there is no reason why the medal should not be presented, shiny side up.

One thing a soldier is afraid of is a display of emotion. That's why his slang so often sounds derogatory. For example, he refers to the silver eagles on his colonel's shoulder straps as "buzzards." But when he speaks of his favorite cigarette, he says: "Camels." They're first with men in the Army as well as with Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen. (According to actual sales records in service men's stores.) And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

CAN'T HELP YOU, SOLDIER!

(A plain-spoken, powerful editorial which appeared a few days ago in THE TALLADEGA DAILY HOME when Talladega County's war loan campaign was lagging):

Can't help you, soldier!

They shot your guts out at Salerno, but what difference does that make to us? We're doing all right, and after all, somebody has to get killed when there's a war going on.

Can't help you, soldier!

They led you, screaming, out of a New Guinea jungle with both eyes shot out. It's too bad, but fighting is your business. Our business is to keep the home fires burning. We'll pay you a pension when you get home.

Can't help you, soldier!

You got a bayonet through your throat in Africa and you bled like a stuck hog until you died. Sure, you guys are making sacrifices, but so are we. After all, there isn't any college football to go to this year. Chewing gum is scarce. We can't go driving on Sunday afternoon like we used to.

Can't help you, soldier!

Yau had to take it too long and you turned into a sobbing, blubbering wreck, your mind shattered forever. You'll get home some day, and we'll have a nice institution ready for you. We'll try to forget the look in your wife's eyes when she first sees you.

Can't help you, soldier!

You're grave, now, with a wooden cross and a battered helmet hanging from it. It's too late to do anything about it. We'll make pretty speeches when it's all over and we'll get out the flags every Armistice Day. Maybe you'll understand why we couldn't buy war bonds. Maybe God will. You see, the income tax has been pretty heavy and there have been so many drives and all that. . .

Maybe, some day, we can forget that you held out an appealing hand and that we, the people of Talladega, said by our actions more plainly than words could do.

Can't help you, soldier!

Alabama War Chest Appeal Set To Start Next Tuesday

Seventeen War Agencies to Share In National War Fund of $125,000,000

"Give Once to All who Fight for Freedom!"

With this battle cry, Alabama's War Chest will be launched simultaneously in this and every county of the state next Tuesday, October 19th.

In this one annual appeal, Alabama's War Chest will seek contributions to seventeen war service and relief agencies that provide home comforts for men in our armed forces and distribute food, clothing and medical supplies among the war ravaged peoples of our Allied nations.

In those communities and counties in Alabama that have Community Chests, the Alabama War Chest campaign is being combined with the campaign for local welfare agencies, which are rendering a vital wartime service on the home front.

To bring unity of purpose into wartime philanthropy, eliminate separate appeals and insure the distribution of donations according to the need, the seventeen great national organizations, dedicated to humanitarian service, have this year been banded together in the National War Fund with which the Alabama War Chest is affiliated. The National War Fund is officially endorsed by the President, and has the backing of the Government, business leaders throughout the Nation, the CIO, the American Federation of Labor, United Mine Workers, and other labor organizations.

Through appeals, like Alabama's War Chest, in every state this month, the National War Fund is seeking a fund of $125,000,000, of which Alabama's part is $1,176,314 or less than 1% of the national goal.

Budget figures issued this week by the National War Fund show that of the $125,000,000 needed, $61,227,000 has been allocated to the USO, which makes "a home away from home" for men in our armed forces; $4,125,000 to the United Seamen's Service, which aids men of our Merchant Marine, and $2,320,000 to the War Prisoners Aid which sends food packages and recreational supplies to war prisoners of all nations, including American boys. United Nations Relief Agencies, whose services have heretofore b[illegible] by separate appeals, w[illegible] 40,099,000 and Refugee R[illegible] and the United States Com[illegible] for the Care of European C[illegible] $3,621 [illegible]. A contingent fun[illegible] set up to meet need[illegible] arise out of changing war conditions. The beneficiary war service agencies are: USO (United Service Organizations), United Seamen's Service, War Prisoners Aid, Belgian War Relief Society, British War Relief Society, French Relief Fund, Friends of Luxembourg, Greek War Relief Association, Norwegian Relief, Polish War Relief, Queen Wilhelmina Fund, Russian War Relief, United China Relief, United Czechoslovak Relief, United Yugoslav Relief Fund, Refugee Relief Trustees, and the U. S. Committee for the Care of European Children.

Here in our own county, a War Chest Campaign Committee, which has been weeks in the making, is organized and ready to begin solicitation of subscriptions. Every citizen in the county will be given the opportunity to make his or her subscription, campaign leaders stated on the eve of the appeal. Those not reached by volunteer workers are urged to bring or send their donations to campaign headquarters and to give as much to all the seventeen agencies as they would give if each agency made its separate appeal for needed funds.

In a joint statement issued this week, War Chest appeal leaders A. Key Foster and J. Frank Rushton, Jr., emphasized the urgency of the appeal and voiced confidence that every county of the state would raise its quota.

"Over and above the very practical economies of the Alabama War Chest and National War Fund—the saving in time and manpower of having one appeal once a year for seventeen agencies instead of seventeen different drives—there is this underlying purpose which concerns every Alabama family who has a loved one in the service," their statement said:

"Every dollar given to the Alabama War Chest helps pave the way for victory. By your gift, your purchase of food, clothing and medical supplies you send with our Army, now standing at the boundaries of enslaved Axis nations, the story that we are a merciful people. And by that story of that mercy, you save the life or limb of some American boy."

"It is not half enough to say that by the charity of war relief agencies we made the conquest of North Africa and Sicily easier.

"As our armies swept forward in North Africa and the story of aid and food preceded them, door after door which had been locked against them was flung open. Boy after boy from America who faced those doors came out alive and unscathed whereas the Ge[illegible]ans marching through towards Alexandria sprinkled the desert sa[illegible]h the life's blood of their cho[illegible]s.

"When the Ala[illegible] War Chest appeal starts next [illegible]ay, we shall all throw our ener[illegible] into a task that by the very errand of mercy which it represents shall hasten victory. And by hastening that victory shall bring our American armies back home to the glorious country for which they fight, there to live in peace with their fellow men. The War Chest is our job. It is one in which we cannot fail, for none of us will take a chance on failing America."

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT US

By BEN

Esther Mims has just returned from a long visit with her husband, Melvin, who is stationed somewhere in New Jersey. She is still trying to determine whether Melvin is in the Army or in heaven. He was given a pass each night she was there to stay with her and both Sundays he spent the entire day with her. According to Esther he even missed a five-mile hike with full field pack the day that she left so that he could see her to the train—who said the Army was tough? But anyway, the good news is that Melvin is doing fine, looking fine and satisfied. Except for the fact that he is away from home and friends—he might even like it.

'Tis true we keep our nose too close to the grindstone to see and hear many things, but seems strange that we have not heard one word about the Mayor's race next year. Could there, or couldn't there, be a single candidate on the horizon for this important office.

The soldiers in far countries have unique ways of telling their families where they are. Putting it in a letter of course would bring the censor's pencil quickly through it and all the family would see would be a big black line where the name was. This week comes the cutiest yet. Una Powell received a letter from her brother somewhere over there directing her to look on a certain page of The Chilton County News of a certain date and in a certain column and asked how she liked it.. Well, there it was plain as day just where Cecil was, and just where he directed her to look. It's as simple as that, if you're smart.

The Rural Mail Carriers are already starting their campaign to get folks living on the routes to buy their stamps in quantity and to stamp their own letters before placing them in the mail boxes to be picked up by the Carriers. Each year especially around Christmas the Carriers work late into the night most nights just sorting the letters and placing stamps on them. This is not a part of their job. They are merely doing it as a favor to the party mailing the letter It is the individual's job to buy the stamp and put them on his own personal mail. Remember to buy your own stamps this year. The Mail Carriers have a big a job enough to do if they take care of their own mail carrying.

The Smith Brothers were in town Saturday, Paul, Billy and Dan. Billy is a Corporal now. He is stationed at Keesler Field, Miss. He is looking fine and apparently the Army has done him no harm. . .Folks are still wondering whether it was the horse or Dr. Parrish who was shying away from the pretty girls at the Horse Show the other night. . .Pvt. Jack Morton, son of Mrs Lillie W Morton, over at Plantersville was reported killed in action week before last. . . Did Red Glasscock, Assistant County Agent, buy some beautiful calves last week? You should see them. They will be parceled out to the 4-H Club members and play a return engagement in next SCprings's 4-H Club Calf Show.

George White, who for many years has been a faithful employee of Mrs Lande and The Leader here, was at home the past week end on a 3-day pass. And by the way George was limping pretty bad on a sore leg, from marching. George stopped at the News office to say, hello, and as usual we put the question to him just how he liked the Army. George returned, "Well, Mr. Tucker, if you is talking about the 3-day pass, I likes it. But, if you is talking about the Army, I ain't saying a thing." George says he don't like anything where they tell him he has just got to do a thing, and then don't tell him but once.

Helen Cox is an established employee of the News now and a confirmed member of the "force." She has been here a month or more and we guess it is safe to announce and recognize her in the column. Heretofore every time we announce a new member of the force they quit the next week and go to a better job with more pay in some defense work. That is why we discontinued announcing anybody until we find out whether or no they are going to stick. Helen will look after, and be in charge of, subscriptions and the Soldiers mail and believe me it has got to be a one-man job—especially the soldiers mail. If you have a kick to make now, come right on in and kick, that's not in our department.

Cecil Ramsey has done a bit of moving around down at the A & P Grocery. He has moved the checking stand out of the middle of the floor and placed it over in the corner on the side next to the Peoples Savings Bank. Makes quite an improvement and gives you room to move around in.

How to get Better Servic

You can help us give you better cleaning service if you'll follow th 3 suggestions:

1. Schedule your clothes so that one dress or suit needs cleaning any one time. Send a hanger each garment.
2. Allow sufficient time for a good of drycleaning. It will make y clothes last longer.
3. Buy wisely. Take good care of y clothes. Hang them up after wearing.

This will relieve pressure on dry clean caused by increased demand and creased labor supply.

DON'T FORGET TO BRING YOUR COAT HAN ERS WITH YOUR CLEANING AND PRESSI IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO BUY THEM NOW. TH IS IMPORTANT! !

THE YOUNG PEOPLES RALLY

The Young Peoples Rally of the Chilton County Association will be held with Liberty Hill Church Sunday, October 17th, beginning at 2:30 o'clock—War Time. All churches in the Chilton Association are requested to send their young people to the meeting, especially the churches with young peoples organizations. See that your young people do come. We are expecting a good program, and one of our W.M.U. workers to be with us.

Our theme is: "Ambassadors For Christ." The Liberty Hill Sunbeams will have a part on the program, and our devotional will be given by Mrs. Gertie Mae Yeargan. Victory Bible verses will be given by Bethsalem G. A.

Come one and all and let's try to do something for our young people while they are with us.

Your friend,
ETHIE CHARLES WILKINS.

ANTIOCH

My last preaching service for the Conference year will be held Sunday at 9:30 a.m. Then at Concord at 10:45, and at Pleasant Hill at 12:00, and again Sunday night at 7:30 p.m. —Rev. Reese Farnell.

NEWS FROM FLOYD

We wish to say that our first Sunday meeting was splendid. Everyone seemed to rejoice in the Lord, especially Sunday night. Bro. R. E. Wilkins delivered a good message at each of the services, Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night.

We invite every one to come and be with us every Sunday at 10:00 a. m. for Sunday School and bring some one with you. We also invite every one to come and be with us every first Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night for preaching. We have preaching at 11:00 a.m. on Sunday; prayer service at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday nights, and preaching service at 8:00 p.m. both nights.

If there ever was a time we need to serve God it is now. That's why this world is in such a turmoil today, we have neglected our duty to our Lord and you may be assured that its going to be that way until we turn back to God; give Him our all. So be sure to go to church somewhere every Sunday.—Reporter.

MRS. MOLLIE CHANDLER

Mrs. Mollie Chandler, age 77, of Plantersville, Ala., Route 2, died at 7:30 a.m., October 8th. Funeral was held at 12 o'clock Thursday from Pilgrim Rest, conducted by the Rev. Ruben Bearden.

She is survived by five sons—G. W., D. S. and L. A. Chandler of Plantersville, Ala., M. V. Chandler of Ozark, Ala., B. F. Chandler of Bessemer, Ala.; two daughters, Mrs. W. R. Halmer of Irondale, Ala., Mrs. Emma Ganty of Maplesville, Ala.; one sister, Mrs. Callie Heath of Columbus, Ga.; one brother, R. O. Johnson of Verbena, Ala.

Pallbearers were: George Williams, Alf Traywick, Henry Abbott, Clyde Carter, Worth Chandler and J. M. Chandler.

Spigener Funeral Home was in charge.

MOUNT NEBO

The Mt. Nebo 4-H Club met for reorganization and election of officers at the church Wednesday night of last week. The program discussion was featured around a talk by Mr. Glasscock on judging dairy cattle.

Officers elected were: President, Pauline Williams; Vice-President, Lomer Williams; Secretary-Treasurer, Billie Ruth Williams; Reporter, Marvorene Henley; and Song Leader, Margaret Williams.

A group of relatives from Mt. Nebo Community visited Mr. and Mrs. Crawford Owens of Shiloh Community Sunday.

The following were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Williams, Jr., Mr and Mrs Raymond Kendrick and children, Mrs Earlo Short and children and Mrs. Dewey Deason.

Mr. and Mrs. Lomer Williams spent Saturday night with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Deason.

EASTVIEW

Rev. D. W. Shepherd, the new pastor at large, will preach at Eastview Sunday night at 7:30. Every one is urged to come.

The following services will be held this week end at Eastview Congregational Christian Church:

Saturday, 3:00—Women's Missionary Society meets at the home of Mrs. Clara Rushing.

7:30—Church service and discussion.

Sunday, 10:00—Sunday School. Superintendent, Mr. Tom Traywick.

11:00—Church service.

11:45—Annual business meeting and election of officers.

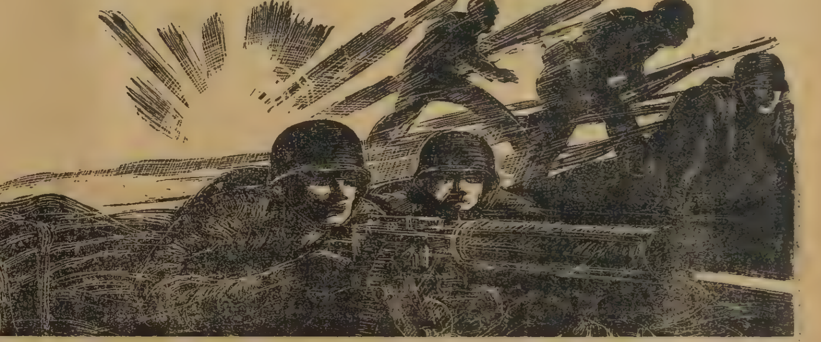
Everybody Welcome!



GIVE ONCE TO ALL WHO FIGHT FOR FREEDOM!

Next week the Alabama War Chest is seeking your donation for seventeen great war relief agencies.

These agencies, united through the National War Fund, are engaged in the vital task of bringing cheer and comfort to men in our fighting forces and furnishing food, clothing and medical supplies to stricken peoples of Allied nations.

Dollars that you give will fight on many fronts for you and yours.

A big part of your gift will go to U. S. O., which makes "a home away from home" for men in our armed services—among them your son or your neighbor's son. Some of it will be used to bring a bit of home to the "barbed wire legion"—war prisoners—including American boys. Some of your dollars will warm and feed torpedoed seamen of our Merchant Marine. Some will aid our Allies . . . British, Chinese, Dutch, Greeks, Poles, Russians, Norwegians, Czechs, Belgians, French and Yugoslavs who have suffered vastly more than we.

Through only one appeal—only once a year the Alabama War Chest raises Alabama's part to meet the urgent needs of those who fight for us and fight with us. This year our state's part is $1,176,315—less than 1% of a National War Fund of $125,000,000.

In this one united appeal, give at least as much to all the 17 agencies as you would give if each made its separate appeal to you. Give at least one day's pay to the War Chest if you work for wages. Give much more if you have more to spare. Let your heart decide how much your gift will be to all who fight today for freedom!

PYORRHOEA

A few years ago the reading public was told that inflammation of the gums (gingivitis) was a forerunner of pyorrhoea and that once pyorrhoea occurred, all the teeth should be removed.

Dr. Barton

Fortunately our dentists immediately warned their patients that gum inflammation was a sign of some disturbance of the body but it did not mean that pyorrhoea was bound to follow gingivitis. Also that both gingivitis and pyorrhoea could be cured or corrected by proper treatment. Gingivitis is an inflammation of the soft tissues around the teeth; it may be caused by some general disturbance in the body.

In the Journal of the American Dental Association, Dr. Willa Yeretsky, Grand Rapids, Mich., states that many teeth need never have been lost at all; they were sacrificed because it was thought that inflamed gums caused pyorrhoea—pus in the gums.

Dr. Yeretsky outlines the causes of gingivitis—poor-fitting plates, impaction of food at certain places because of faulty contact points between upper and lower teeth, formation of calculus which is deposited from the saliva, the digestive juice of the mouth. As calculus is the chief "local" cause of gingivitis and cannot be deposited on the teeth if the number of organisms in the mouth is kept low, it can be seen how necessary it is to keep the mouth as clean as possible.

Dr. Yeretsky points out that it is eating the wrong foods that causes the saliva to deposit calculus and set up inflammation of the gums. The gums themselves are not receiving the right kind of nourishment to prevent gingivitis.

The diet outlined to keep the gums in a healthy condition is: Daily, one-half pint of orange or tomato or grapefruit juice. Twice daily, protein in the form of meat, eggs, fish or cheese. Four or five eggs, at least, should be eaten every week. One portion of the following vegetables: lettuce, cabbage, watercress, swiss chard, brussels sprouts, turnip greens, cauliflower, kale, broccoli, beet greens.

Once daily, one or more of the following vegetables: carrots, beets, peas, corn, pumpkin, onions, cucumber, squash, turnips, artichokes, asparagus.

Carbohydrates, one at each meal to fill balance of diet: bread, potato, noodles, macaroni, cereals, with fortified bread, or whole grain cereal at two of the meals.

One pint of milk every day; may be in form of cottage cheese, cream soup, or custard.

Low Par Invites Vincent's Angina

When an organism is found in every case of a certain disease, it is reasonable to assume it to be the cause of the disease. Thus in Vincent's angina—ulceration of the throat and mouth with sometimes a light gray membrane present—two organisms are always found—fusiform bacillus and Vincent's spirillum. These organisms or their poisons cause Vincent's angina.

The causes are local or general. Local cause is lack of rinsing out the mouth and cleaning the teeth. Lime deposits occur under the margin of the gums between the teeth together with particles of soft food; the tartar and food particles rob the gums of the power to resist the organisms which multiply very rapidly. The gums swell and collect more poisons and also interfere with the proper circulation of the blood in the gums. If pure rich blood is prevented from nourishing the gums, the tissues lack sufficient power to fight the organisms.

Another local cause is faulty restoration of teeth by the dentist.

The systematic or general causes of Vincent's angina are (1) lack of vitamins B and C, and (2) lack of certain gland substances.

From the above information given us by Dr. Schluger, we learn that if we brush our teeth and gums regularly—keep the mouth clean—and yet we have attacks of Vincent's angina then we should look further for the cause.

"General physical disability, whether due to fatigue, lack of sunshine and exercise, following a surgical operation or long illness, can be the underlying cause."

FAIRY godmothers must have stood three deep around Florence Freeman's cradle when she was an infant; certainly she seems to have just about everything now. If you listen to "The Open Door" (it's on the air on NBC five mornings a week, and is considered one of the best of the radio serials) you know her as "Lisa Arnold." She's beautiful, an excellent actress, the wife of a minister and the mother of two children. She takes an active part in church activities. Watching a broadcast, it was fascinating to see how she and the other members of the company worked; gestures and facial expressions made me long for television!

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Success of the Dutch in transplanting the quinine tree from Peru to Java helped encourage interest in the development of rubber plantations in the Far East in the early 1870's.

With all the discouragements of rubber and gasoline restrictions, automobile registrations at the end of 1942 were only 5 per cent lower than in 1941, a record year. Commercial vehicle registrations were down 5.5 per cent.

It is estimated that at one time there were between 300 million and 500 million wild rubber trees in the Amazon Valley and that less than 10 per cent have been tapped to date.

ISABELLA F. F. A. TO BUY JEEP

As part of a state-wide F.F.A. contest to buy a Jeep in which each chapter in Alabama is asked to participate, the Isabella F.F.A. is going enthusiastically in its "Buy a Jeep Campaign." $1,165 is the goal of the chapter in this contest, which ends October 15. Thus far, over $1,000 has already been raised by the boys, according to advisor J. H. Camp.

Last week, President Earl Wright called a meeting of the chapter for the purpose of choosing sides and arousing some competition. The boys were divided into two sides, with the agreement that the side which sold the most bonds would be entertained by the losing side. Herschell Wright, choosing for one side, chose the following boys: Earl Wilkins, Norman Vinson, Jerome Conway, Marvin Scott, Delmer Williams, E. J. Klinner, Junior Deason, Allen Sewell, Thomas Deason, Judson Cummings, Billie Hayes, Joe Earl Bray, Barney Owens, Hansell Grooms, Walter Kendrick, Cecil Deason, Wren Smith, Coy Rasberry, Seth Gilliland and Ernest McCary.

Jesse Culp, choosing the competing side, chose the following: Herschell Patterson, Carlos Williams, Junior Sims, Earl Wright, Thomas Cox, Francis Bryant, James Owens, Charles Jones, Harold Scott, J. B. Sims, Raymond Leach, Cecil Cherry, A. J. Russell, Odis Ousley, Arthur Tucker, Jack Mizzell, S. P. Cleckler, Lomer Williams, J. E. Scott and C. F. Gandy.—Jesse A. Culp.

Chilton County Abstract Co.
M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furished. A few dollars spent for an Abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND

September 12th, 1943.

The Chilton County News,
Clanton, Alabama.

Dear Sir:

After several weeks of traveling I have at last settled at an air base somewhere in England. Our trip across the Atlantic was thrilling, in fact, so thrilling that I want just one more boat ride—home. The face of the Statue of Liberty would look mighty good, and hope to see Old Glory flying proudly in America, never to be lowered from her staff. The waves of the great Atlantic lapped at the huge vessel and then fell back, helplessly forming huge figures of foam. Each evening we would form an eager party on the deck, hoping to see land and then be greatly disappointed. Finally, one bright and early morning land was sighted and another convoy of Yanks had landed over there.

England is a beautiful country, with the countryside dotted with wheat, oats, sugar, beets and the finest purebred cattle ever seen. Wish the farmers of Chilton County could see the fine herds. The English people are very friendly and the boys in khaki are greeted wherever we go. Children worship the Yanks, and they think America is made of chewing gum and candy. Somehow after viewing the English children, fatherless and homeless, America means more than freedom and liberty, and the people should thank God that the evils of war have been kept from the shores of the greatest Country in the world.

In the ETO we receive one 24-hour pass a week and one 48-hour pass a month, so you see we have some way of forgetting for a while. We are very fortunate in having a movie twice a week, magazines and newspapers to read. Thanks to the Red Cross and USO Clubs and other organizations donating to the benefit of the American Soldier. We can purchase cigarettes at three pence a pack (5c), but ice cream, cake, coca-cola and steaks are out. The money system is very difficult to catch on (Shilling, Florin, Half Crown, Pound).

Give all my regards and best wishes and we Yanks will be back when it's over—Over There.

Sincerely,
PFC. JULIUS A. SAMPLE.

TROOP MOVEMENT JOB EQUALS 23 WORLD TRIPS FOR EVERY PERSON IN CHILTON COUNTY

Taking all of Chilton County's 27,900 people around the world in sleeping cars nearly 23 times would be a tremendous undertaking, yet that is actually about the size of the troop movement job reported today by the Pullman Company.

Since Pearl Harbor, Pullman has carried about 14,000,000 troops a distance of more than 15 billion passenger miles in its sleeping cars, the company reports. These figures are said to cover mass military movements alone, and do not include the heavy travel of furloughed men and others.

Many of the boys from Chilton County, like servicemen from all parts of the country, are getting their first Pullman rides, according to George A. Kelly, vice president of the company. Now most of them are making six or seven trips by Pullman, as the intense training program of the armed services necessitates that many moves or more prior to embarkation for points abroad, he said. In addition, the Army and Navy believe in all the comfort possible for the members of the armed forces, he declared, and about two thirds of all military movements by rail are by Pullman sleeper.

Pullman is now carrying more than 800,000 troops every month in mass movements, it is revealed by Mr. Kelly, who pointed out that in addition to this heavy an dsteadily increasing military passenger burden, civilian travel itself is also at a record-breaking level. He believes that Pullman's passenger-mile volume for 1943 may exceed the 1942 all-time high of 19 billion by 30 or more per cent.

"The military and civilian passenger burden of Pullman and the railroads today is so heavy," Kelly said, "that there is unfortunately little margin left for some of the conveniences travlers enjoyed in peacetime. Service today is wartime service, and by their understanding and tolerance of this fact, travelers can help us greatly in the performance of our vital job."

FARMERS WARNED OF FIRE HAZARDS

Chilton County farm families are doing everything possible to eliminate fire hazards and are making necessary repairs to improve fire protection in observance of National Fire Prevention Week, October 3 through 9.

P. H. Smith, County Agent, calls farmers' attention to Fire Prevention Week by pointing out that President Roosevelt has issued a proclamation requesting people to take active measures during this week and throughout the year to conserve human material and resources from destruction by fire.

Among common farm home fire hazards are several structural defects, the agent pointed out. A flammable wood shingle roof is one such hazard. Sparks from a faulty chimney falling on such a roof is one of the principal causes of farm fires. Such a roof can be ignited also by wind-blown sparks from bonfires, brush fires, or forest fires.

Mr. Smith warned that any chimney too warm to hold the hand against with comfort is a fire hazard. It should be constructed from the ground, and the foundation should be of concrete or solid masonry so that it can carry weight without settling or cracking. He urged that chimneys be cleaned at least once a year.

WEST END

Mr. and Mrs. Doss Lovelady had as their guests this week end Mr and Mrs Cecil McSheehan and daughters, Elizabeth and Carolyn; Mrs Odis Nobles and daughters, Mary D. and Patty, of Birmingham; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Easterling of Bessemer, all formerly of Clanton.

Martin Garner and Mr. Will Littlejohn were Sunday dinner guests to help celebrate the birthdays of Mrs Willie B. Easterling and Mr. Cecil McSheehan. Miss Mildred Lovelady expressed her thoughts very much in having her sisters and families home for the occasion. Wish they could come to Clanton more often.

HAYES FAMILY BIDS ADIEU TO TENANTRY

Join Ranks of Farm Owners After Three Years In FSA Program

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hayes and their two children are among the happiest families in Chilton County.

They have just paid for their farm in the Pleasant Grove Community and have said goodbye to tenantry, through the opportunities provided by the Farm Security Administration and the Bankhead-Jones Tenant Purchase, according to R M. Foshee, Chairman of the Chilton County Farm Security Administration Committee.

Prior to the purchase of his 55-acre farm in 1941, Mr. Hayes, for the greater part of his life had farmed on shares. There was one period from 1930 to 1935 that he was engaged in "public works" for the State Highway Department.

"All my life I wanted to own a farm," said Mr. Hayes. "But I never owned a farm and my folks never owned a farm. A man just can't get ahead share cropping. If he gets anything that he can call his own he wears it out moving. The Farm Security Administration offers a man a chance to get ahead and if a fellow will work at it and do his part he is obliged to make good."

Mr. Hayes said that when he filed his application for a loan to purchase the farm his net worth was about $300. This consisted of one cow, one hog and household goods. Today he values his holdings in excess of $5,000. Mr. Hayes expressed his appreciation for the help of Marvin Durbin, County FSA Supervisor and his assistants.

The farm was purchased for $1,959, including necessary repairs and improvements. There were 30 acres of the 55 in cultivation and there were 1,600 young peach trees on the place. During the first year Mr. Hayes barely made ends meet, but was able to make the required payment on the farm. In 1941, for instance, he sold only $114 worth of peaches, $109 worth of cotton, $41 worth of poultry and $42 worth of eggs.

In 1942, however, he went to town on his one horse farm. The peaches brought $1,400; strawberries, $187; cotton, $198; eggs, $394; poultry, $323; truck crops, $44; and livestock, $76. That year he made an advance payment on the farm, purchased a truck and a power sprayer for his peach orchard.

In 1943 the peaches brought in approximately $3,000. He received $700 from the sale of hatching eggs, and the strawberries from one acre brought $350. The family also had eight acres of corn, two acres of peanuts, two acres of peas, and one-half acre of potatoes. They canned 456 quarts of fruits, vegetables and meats. They also have a good mule, three milch cows, one heifer, one brood sow and three hogs, and 160 pullets.

And that's how Mr. and Mrs. Hayes paid for their farm in three years instead of the 40 years allowed under terms of the Bankhead-Jones Tenant Purchase Act.

SPORTSMEN WARNED ABOUT AMMUNITION

As the squirrel season in North Alabama and the rabbit, raccoon and o'possum seasons all over the State got under way this month, Conservation Director Ben C. Morgan has issued a warning, in the interest of safety, to the owners of Damascus and other twist steel shotgun barrels. Undre no condition should high-powered shotgun shells be shot in guns with these types of barrels. Being subjected to a load greater than that which they were made to withstand, these barrels may explode and cause death or injury to the hunter or his companions. While no accidents of this nature were reported last season, several Alabamians in recent years have been injured when their Damascus or twist steel barrels burst under the pressure of high-powered ammunition.

How Big Is Your Heart ?

There was the tall elm tree and the green lawn. There was the big kind house and her laughing mother. . .and candlelight for her supper of bread and milk and fruit. . .and the wonderful event of her father coming home each evening.

Then there came the black and terrible night when the Nazis swept in. Loud voices, trampling feet, rude jostling out into the street . . .sharp crack of rifles, and the great roar of flames burning down the house.

Now Signe is alone—and starving.

Her mother and father. . .because they would not compromise, cooperate, collaborate. . .because they would not come to terms with evil. . . were stood before their own graves and shot.

They died for the whole world of decent people, and Signe has become the ward of that world. We owe this child a debt. She must know the decency for which her parents died.

Moreover, because of their sacrifice, and thousands like it in Holland, China, Russia, Greece, Norway, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and France, enemy bayonets are duller, enemy bullets are fewer, enemy power is less to send against our fighting men.

Because of the resistance the people of these tortured countries are maintaining — and can continue to maintain with your help—invasion will be easier.

This month, we must finance three vital jobs —helping the people in unoccupied and, if possible, occupied countries—maintaining the morale of our armed forces wherever they may be —and relieving distress in our own community.

Much is needed for this mighty task, and the need will be met if your heart is big when you write your check. Remember, you make just one big contribution instead of many small ones. So add up everything you would be giving to all the separate agencies, and then double it!

The need is crucial—so give, and give all you possibly can!

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:8-11; Isaiah 58:13, 14; Mark 2:23-3:6.

GOLDEN TEXT—And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath.—Mark 2:27.

The sabbath was essentially a day of rest and worship; hence the principles which surrounded it and directed its life may be applied to our day of rest, which is the first day of the week—the Lord's day.

That word "rest" sounds a little strange in this busy world of ours, and yet it is an important one. It means quiet for the struggling one, calm for the troubled, repose for the weary, tranquility for the disturbed, cessation of labor for the worn-out one.

God in His infinite wisdom saw that without rest man would soon destroy himself, and He made provision for one day in seven when labor should cease and man should be free for that recreation of soul and body which should fit him for the labor of the week.

Our lesson answers two important questions about our rest day, namely, Why ? and How?

I. Why We Keep a Day of Rest (Exod. 20:8-11; Isa. 58:13, 14).

The chief reason is that God commands it. One day out of seven is for our re-creation by rest and worship. That should be sufficient to cause His people to "remember" the day "to keep it holy."

Doubtless it is true that essential war work and related activities must be carried on, even on Sunday. God did not forbid works of necessity. But even though there is this need, who will deny that many use Sunday for work that is not essential—and countless others devote it to godless pleasure.

Notice that the day of rest was to be not only for the family, but also for servants and for visitors. The employer who unnecessarily operates his factory or office on Sunday violates this commandment. Note also that the man who is to rest on the seventh day is supposed to work on the six days.

The precept of Exodus 20 is enforced by the promise of Isaiah 58. The man who delights in keeping God's commandment regarding the day of rest, will find that God delights in and honors him. Both men and nations have found this to be true.

II. How We Keep a Day of Rest (Mark 2:23-3:6).

The formalists of Christ's day, the Pharisees, had overlooked the heart of God's law and the holy living which it was intended to produce, and had bound up even the observance of the sabbath (which was intended to be a day of rest and gladness) in such a mass of technical "thou shalt nots" that it was a day of fear. They had a false outward profession of worship and had entirely missed the true spirituality of God's law, a fact which drew upon their heads the anger and rebuke of our Lord.

The two incidents in this portion of our lesson reveal that under the cloak of earnestly observing the law of the sabbath, the Pharisees were actually covering their own hypocrisy and their hatred for Christ.

The accusations against the disciples because they had taken and eaten grain was not on the ground that they had stolen, for the law (Deut. 23:25) guaranteed that right to the one who passed through his neighbor's field. The Pharisees contended, however, that the disciples had worked on the sabbath in picking and hulling the grain.

The healing of the man with the withered arm revealed that back of their professed concern for the sabbath was a real hatred for Christ. It is an appalling thing that in the house of worship on the very sabbath day, these men, outwardly so religious, were plotting against our Lord.

"They watched him," and even so the enemies of the Cross watch us who are His followers. They are not concerned that the man with the withered arm, or with the withered soul may be helped, but only that they may find something to condemn.

Jesus cuts across human hypocrisy and hatred to declare that the true keeping of the sabbath is to do the work of God. No work of necessity (like plucking the grain) or of mercy (like healing the withered arm) is ever out of place on the day of rest.

A word of caution is needed, for some have sought to interpret this Scripture as providing biblical ground for doing all sorts of things on their day of rest. That day is for man's good, not for his destruction. His greatest good is served by rest, worship, spiritual development, Christian fellowship, and the doing of deeds of necessity and mercy.

The desecration of the Lord's Day in our time is a serious matter. Let us not contribute to its deterioration. America needs Sunday as a day of rest and worship.

Breakfast Needs

How many notches are you pushing up the nutrition yardstick at breakfast time? There are three meals a day, and if your family is to receive the necessary amount of nutriment during that day you should take care of as many of these requirements at one meal as possible.

Another reason in favor of the nutritious breakfast is that it helps the family to be up and at the day's work with more zip and pep than if they just have the roll and coffee, bite-and-run excuse for breakfast.

Always have fruit or fruit juice to begin the day. Not only does it help to start the day off in good style, but it gives you some quota of your vitamins and minerals and calcium.

Eggs in one form or another have always been a breakfast favorite. Serving them during this morning meal is a splendid way of getting in at least the one egg a day or four or five a week requirement in hand. However, if you feel that eggs are too expensive to serve every day for breakfast, use fruits that contain iron, such as prunes and oatmeal and whole grain breads to make up on the vitamin B1 needs.

It's smart to introduce variety into the breakfast just as is done in the other meals. Vary breakfast breads as much as possible, the ways in which you fix eggs, the fruits served, and the cereals or other foods such as pancakes, waffles, french toast, etc.

Here's a waffle recipe guaranteed to please palates and ask for encores:

Walnut Waffles.
(Makes 4 to 6 large waffles)

- 2 well-beaten egg yolks
- 1½ cups milk
- 2 cups pastry flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- 6 tablespoons melted shortening or oil
- 2 stiffly beaten egg whites
- 1 cup broken walnut kernels

Combine beaten egg yolks and milk. Add flour sifted with salt and baking powder. Then add melted shortening or oil. Beat until smooth, then fold in egg whites and nuts. Bake in ungreased waffle iron.

Toast is an old standby and even more delightful if the bread used is varied occasionally. Here are two new favorites:

Raisin Nut Bread.
(Makes 1 1-pound loaf)

- 2 tablespoons shortening
- 4 tablespoons brown sugar
- 1 egg
- 2 cups sifted flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon allspice
- 1 cup milk
- ½ cup chopped raisins
- ½ cup chopped nuts

Cream together shortening and sugar. Beat egg and add to creamed mixture. Sift together flour, baking powder, salt, cinnamon and allspice. Add to creamed mixture alternately with milk. Fold in raisins and nuts. Pour into a greased loaf pan. Bake in a moderate (350 degrees) oven 1 hour.

Date Bread.
(Makes 1 1-pound loaf)

- 2½ cups sifted flour
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup sugar
- 1¼ cups chopped dates
- 2 eggs
- 1¼ cups milk
- 4 tablespoons melted shortening

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add dates. Beat eggs, milk and shortening and add to dry ingredients. Stir only until flour is well moistened. Pour into greased loaf pan. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 1 hour.

A delicate treat for breakfast is the lacy, golden morsel corn cake which originated down south. It should be served with butter or margarine and honey:

Lacy Corn Cakes.
(Serves 6 to 8)

- 1¼ cups white water ground cornmeal
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs, well beaten
- 2 cups milk
- ¼ cup shortening, melted

Add salt to cornmeal. Combine well beaten eggs, milk, melted shortening and pour into cornmeal, stirring until well combined. Pour batter, which should be very thin, into a pitcher and stir thoroughly before pouring each pancake into a well greased griddle or skillet. Turn the pancake as it begins to brown. They should be paper-thin and have a lacy effect.

No one could ask for a more satisfying breakfast than the luscious sweetness of maple syrup combined with light, fluffy tender buttermilk pancakes:

Buttermilk Pancakes.
(Serves 6 to 8)

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs, well beaten
- 2 cups (scant) buttermilk
- 2 tablespoons shortening, melted

Sift together flour, salt and soda. Mix beaten eggs, melted shortening and buttermilk. Add to flour mixture gradually, beating until smooth. Fry in hot, greased griddle. Serve with maple syrup.

Cereal Tricks

Keep your breakfasts interesting by using plenty of unrationed cereals in different, delicious ways. For example, you can add a little melted shortening to cereal flakes, form a nest in a muffin pan, drop an egg into it, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and bake in a slow (325° F.) oven until firm. If the family tires of one cereal, make a cereal medley of several different prepared, ready-to-eat cereals and serve with fruit or berries, sugar and cream.

Lynn Says:

Top of the Morning! A recent survey of students' breakfast habits revealed the following facts. About 50,000 students were contacted.

Most students do eat breakfast, but there are still some who go without it. Over half of them have rolls or bread of some kind, but more than half do not have breakfast food of any kind.

The larger percentage did not have fruit or milk—a must item for students' breakfasts.

About a fifth of the amount interviewed do not have meat or eggs for breakfast.

According to their own opinion, most of them feel they do not have an adequate breakfast.

Behind the Scenes in WAR BOND DRIVE...
Get bonds from vault
Sell bonds
Spend afternoon posting records
Take stubs to Federal Reserve Bank

THEY MAKE THE JOB EASIER—Standing steadfast behind every war bond drive are the banks of the nation and the men and women who work in them. Shown above is part of the story of what they do and how they handle the mechanics of getting your war bond to you and being sure that your money reaches the Treasury Department. There is much work to be done if the job of issuing the bonds is run smoothly.

Nation's Bank Employees Are Among Unsung Heroes

If Uncle Sam Had To Pay For Job It Would Have Cost You Millions

Among the many unsung heroes of the nation's war bond drives are the nation's banks and the men and women who work in them.

The banks, along with the many other issuing agencies, make the gigantic job of getting your bonds to you run easily and smoothly.

If Uncle Sam had to pay for the job they do, it would mean millions of dollars out of your pocket and it might mean that some of the money you invest for Victory would be lost along the way.

But the bankers, those in the big cities and those in the little towns, have poured their efforts into the war loan drives without compensation and with little recognition.

Their's is a behind the scenes job that the public knows little about.

Marc Ray Clement, executive manager of the Alabama War Finance Committee, is high in his praise of the banks and their patriotic personnel.

"We can read and see the hundreds of columns of space that our newspapers and their advertisers put behind our war loan efforts," he pointed out.

"The screens of our theaters carry the war bond message and billboards every where speak eloquently of the job we must do to 'Back the Attack.'

"As we walk along the streets store windows carry the message of all out effort.

"The press tells us what our volunteers in the field are doing and the radio speaks eloquently and well of what our duty is.

"But the men and women in the banks and other issuing agencies do a behind the scenes job that the public never knows about. Along with the many who have put their all behind the war bond drives we want these banks and their workers to have recognition.

"They have given unselfishly of their time and money to make all of our jobs easier.

"Our bankers are real unsung heroes of the home front.

"The attitude of all our banks is expressed by Wallace D. Malone of Dothan, president of the Alabama Bankers Association, when he says:

"'Alabama's banks ask for no applause. They are only glad to fight any way they can. Never were the vital services of our banks more needed than now. They recognize this service as a duty and a privilege.

"'The banks, both large and small, are naturally 100 per cent behind the war effort. From the small bank whose president and cashier personally take order for, write up and deliver war bonds, up to the larger institutions who donate the full time of several highly paid employes, the banks of Alabama are backing the attack with all they have.'"

There are two hundred and thirty-seven of these banks, Mr. Clement said, and they have the heartfelt praise of every county organization. "They are fighting the good fight. They are doing a fine job for their country."

Nell Rockett Wed To Robert Powers

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Nell Rockett and Mr Robert William Powers was solemnized in the late afternoon, Sunday, October third, at the Clanton Baptist Church, with the Rev. Roswell E. Owens officiating.

Banked ferns and southern smilax were the background for standards and floor baskets filled with white gladioli and lillies, grouped effectively with branched candelabra holding lighted white tapers. Two single candlesticks with large cathedral candles marked either side of the altar.

Mrs John B. Deramus, organist, gave a beautiful program of wedding music and played the processional and recessional wedding marches.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a wedding gown of whit duchess satin and chantilly lace, made with fitting bodice, V-nevk line and long pointed sleeves. The full skirt with insets of chantilly lace gracefully swept en train. The finger tip veil of illusion fell in circular tiers from a heart-shaped headdress of net, centered with orange blossoms. The brides bouquet was a shower of rose buds, purple throated orchids and stephanotis edged with wide lace.

Miss Lois Rockett attended her sister as maid of honor. Mrs Frank Colvard of Sylacauga was matron of honor and the bridesmaids included; Miss Suan Powers, sister of the groom Miss Peggy Page; Miss Billie Johnson; and Miss Olive Rainer Elmore of Birmingham. The attendants were all gowned alike, in frocks made with full net skirts and tight fitting bodices of lace. Sweetheart bow-knots trimmed the waists and short puffed sleeves. The maid of honor and matron in aqua marine and the bridesmaids in heather rose. They carried arm bouquets of pink Columbia roses, tied with wide satin ribbon, showered with orchid gladioli.

Mr Sam Powers, father of the groom served as best man, and the ushers were John B. Deramus, James Duke Heflin, J. W. Hayes and Dr. Lamar Calloway of Durham, N. C.

Mr and Mrs Dewey Rockett entertained with a reception at their hofe immediately following the ceremony. Mrs Rockett was lovely in a gown of powder blue crepe with eyelet embroidrey collar and cuffs. Her corsage was of orchids.

Mrs Powers, mother of the groom, was dressed in soldier blue crepe, with beaded desigf. Her corsage was a jurple orchid tied with deeper purple ribbon.

The Rockett home was attractively decorated with white flowers throughout. The bride's table was laid with a lace cloth, centered with a three tiered wedding cake, embossed with spun candy flowers. Low bowls of white roses and gardenia were arranged around the center piece.

Among those assisting at the reception were Mrs John D. Mullins, Mrs Julius Burnett, Miss Deanie Hollis and Mrs Grady Heflin. The bridesmaid served in the dining room.

The bride is the daughter of Mr and Mrs Dewey Rockett. After graduation from Chilton County High School she attended Ward Belmont Junior College in Nashville and was graduated the past spring at the University of Alabama where she was a member of the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority.

Mr Powers is a graduate of Alabama Polytechnic Institute where he was a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity. At present he is employed by Douglas Aircraft Corporation at Santa Monica, California, where the couple will make their home.

For traveling Mrs Powers wore a suit of flying blue wool with lace blouse to match. Her feather hat of ice blue gave added charm to the pretty ensemble. Her corsage was a speciman orchid.

Out of town guests were Mr and Mrs Charles M. Thomas and Miss Dorothy Whetstone of Sylacauga. Mrs V. J. Elmore and Jack Elmore of Birmingham. Misses Alice Johnston and Zafero Pappas, University. Mr and Mrs Herman Self. Mrs Geo. Curlee. Mrs James W. Brown. Mr and Mrs. J. C. Ware, of Birmingham, Alabama, Corporal W A C Evelyn Ware and Mrs Henry Carr all from Birmingham.. Dr and Mrs J. Lamar Calloway of Durham, N. C., Mrs George McCain, Mr and Mrs Jimmie Morgan of Montgomery, Alabama. Miss Sallie McCann. Rev. J. H. Thomas, Chattanooga, Tenn., Mr R. D. Woodson, Tallassee. Miss Florence Powers, Monroe La., Mrs Mary Evans, Memphis, Tenn., Mrs B. B.. Simpkins and Miss Mary Bailey Simpkins and Mr W. J. Powers, Nashville, Tenn. and Mrs Frank A. Colvard, Sylacauga.

The father of Alexander Bolton, of ison, comes in this week to let us w that h appreciates what the ws is doing for the soldiers in get- g several hundreds of copies to n each week. . . .a short letter u Louie Smith tells us how much appreciates the old Chilton Coun- News and how much it is helping each week. . . .a post card from k Lawrence at Miami, letting us w the same thing and a nice letter m Stewart Armstrong who is in shington State and remarks, "keep Chilton County News coming.". . hich of course, we will, just as long the trains run. . . .and a letter es from Major Samuel Upchurch Seaman Second Class Jack Bates Sgt. Oscar Bates, the latter three, will find published in this issue the News. Let us say here: We t answer all of the letters that we from the boys in the armed forces, we do appreciate them. When- r you can get the time, write us in

And too, the paragraph above re- nds us that we have just received andy 8x10 photograph of Major n D Eiland that we will be glad turn over to his family should they interested in calling for it. It is best likeness of the young hero t we have seen yet.

We're glad to welcome to Clanton week Mr and Mrs M. J. Star- k. Mr Starbuck is an ex-news- er man and has operated several kly newspapers during his long eer. This charming couple come n Columbus, Ohio and will make e home here for the present. They taken an apartment at the home Mrs. G. E. Evans.

Wonder if there is any truth in the y going the rounds that "Red" s, who is a Lieut., was sent on a sion and was to stop at one airport pick up a Captain and at another ort and pick up a private to com- e his crew for some specified job be done. When he got to where was to get the Captain it turned to be Capt. Nelson Parrish, son Mr. John M. Parrish and the late . Elsie Harris Parrish, and the vate turned out to be Pvt. These three cit- s are conscientious in the work t they are doing. and asked that remind our readers to watch the es advertised elsewhere in this is- of the Chilton County News and please cooperate with them in com- ing all registrations possible in the e permitted his or her district. explained in the advertisement the oline and rubber shortage is play- a major part in all that we do w-a-days.

Three soldiers are in an Army uck in front of the office at this ting that is down on account of tor trouble. To show the versitili- of the American Soldier the three s who comprise the "crew" are re- ting their own truck. Two or three rs ago these same three boys, we e say, should they have broken n in Clanton, would be out scour- the neighborhood for a mechanic would come and repair their car them— for then they would have n in a fine sedan, probably, in- ad of a truck—anyhow, the boys now pulling off and headed up highway, confident in their ability take care of themselves, whatever call may be. It just goes to show one of two things, that these boys the U. S. Army are learning to take care of themselves or that it takes us at least 30 minutes to write a simple little paragraph like this.

It's Mr. Evans again and not Cpl. Julian Evans any more. Julian, who for years managed the Southern Seed & Plant Company here and has in the past furnished many a paragraph for Folks & Things, is not in Uncle Sam's Army now. He has been discharged and placed in 4-F. He spent 18 months in the service and is now a skilled airplane mechanic. Mr. Evans also relates that he will set his clock each morning at the same time he has been answering reville for the past year and a half, and when it rings he is going to turn over and throw a shoe at it and go back to sleep.

Jesse Culp, our correspondent at Isabella High School, won "gold and fame" this week when the short Story Department of The Birmingham News published his short story, "Letter From Bill," in its Sunday Magazine Section. It was an interesting little yarn and Jesse is to be congratulated on the acceptance of his story by this popular department of the News.

Register For Ration Book 4 Next Week

Schools will be open for registration from one to five o'clock.

Every person in Chilton County will want to register for War Ration Book 4 next Wednesday, Thursday or Friday afternoon, October 27, 28 and 29. The registration is simple. The following rules will help you get your book quickly.

1. Get an application blank from the nearest school before time of registration. These blanks will be in all the county schools on and after Monday, October 25. If you have a child in school, one will be sent you by the teacher. Fill out the blank according to the simple directions.
2. If there are more than eight persons in your family, you will need two application blanks.
3. Be sure ages are stated correctly on your application. Count ages to the nearest birthday.
4. One person, who is 18 years old or older, can register for the entire family.
5. On one of the registration days, carry your application blank and each family member's Book 3 to one of the following schools between one and five o'clock: Alabama Mills, Baker, Chilton County High, Clanton Elementary, Collins Chapel, Concord, Cooper, Enterprise, Isabella, Jemison, Maplesville, Mt. Pleasant, Stanton, Thomas Jr., Thorsby, Union Grove, Verbena, Vermont, Chilton County Training, Clanton Colored.
6. If you cannot reach a school on one of the afternoons named above, an emergency registratin will be held at the Chilton County High School in Clanton on Saturday morning, October 30, from 8:00 o'clock to 12:00 o'clock. This registration is for those who cannot possibly register in the afternoon. DON'T DEPEND ON THIS REGISTRATION IF YOU CAN AVOID IT.
7. You may find in your new ration book a page of stamps marked "coffee." This does not mean that coffee is to be rationed again. The page is in some of the books because they w e tipnrr efcbd eoceeeorff were printed before coffee was removed from the list of rationed foods.

Committees Named For War Chest Drive In County

Every community in Chilton County is urged to get behind the Chairman and Committee members in placing our County at the head of the list in putting the 1943 War Chest Drive over the top.

This year's quota for this county is $7,057.89 and will need the help of every citizen to reach the goal set by the Committee. When you give you must think of 17 separate organizations that you are giving to the USO United Seamen's Service, our boys and our Allies's boys who are prisoners of war, and 13 Relief Organizations attending to the help of our Allies in war stricken areas. The local Committee urges you to give enough when approached for your donation. Or better still, look up the Chairman or a member of the Committee and give all that you can afford to give. As stated by Judge Victor Heard, Chairman, "After all, it is your job as well as my job and the job of members of the Committee. We are giving our time as well as our money, and the least that you can do is to help us by making it as easy as possible for us to contact you and get your donation."

"Let's be the first county in the state to go over the top. Give freely and give early. We must go over the top and we do not want to be the cow's tail." Mr. Heard stated.

Forty Million War Ravaged People Will Share Your War Chest Gift

More than half the funds subscribed in the appeal of Alabama's War Chest will be spent for services to men in our armed forces, prisoners of war, and members of our Merchant Marine. The rest will be distributed among war service agencies which send aid to more than 40,000,000 war sufferers in Allied nations. Typical of these are: (1) A band of footsore and weary Polish exiles from Russia resting on their way to Persia. Everything they own they carry in their hands or on their backs. (2) This little boy from a conquered country awaits a neutral ship on which he and other refugee children will sail for America. (3) Polish children on their arrival from Russia in Iran—living skeletons. (4) Chinese youngsters, orphaned and homeless, still can smile. United China Relief provides them with shelter, schooling and care. (5) This American canteen is on duty following a hit-and-run raid on a town "somewhere in England." (6) Mother and child sit beside all that was left of their home after raiders passed.

CLANTON VISITED BY THREE COMPANIES OF SOLDIERS

Sunday night at Gragg Field looked like our airport had been turned into an Army Camp when three companies of soldiers bivouaced there. It was an Ambulance Corps from Camp Rucker that were returning from maneuvers in Tennessee.

There were more than 130 vehicles in the crowd, 75 of which were ambulances, and according to reports from the airport it was a tough, well seasoned bunch of soldiers. Marvin Marcus, watchman at the Field, said that they were a mannerly, well-behaved lot, and when they left Monday morning the grounds were cleaner than when they arrived Sunday afternoon. The three Companies contained close to 1,000 men.

CLANTON TIGERS TO MEET SELMA HERE FRIDAY

James Foshee, Reporter

The Chilton County "Tigers" meet Albert G. Parrish High of Selma Friday night, October 22nd. The game will be played on the local field.....

The Tigers defeated a strong team from Bibb County High of Centerville 19 to 14, last Friday night. Albert G. Parrish High also was victorous over the mighty Lanier "Poets" 15 to 12. These scores indicate a close game when these teams clash on the gridiron.

The Clanton Team showed great strength in winning from Centerville. The Tigers scored in the first period with a pass from Seals to Popwell. The Centerville Choctaws chalked up 14 points in the second period. Clanton was on the short end of 14 to 7 at the end of the half.

The Tigers came back in the third period and drove 60 yards for another score. Howard Baker scored this one on a quarterback sneak. Clanton failed to make the extra point and the score was Centerville 14 and Clanton 13. The combination of Seals to Popwell accounted for the next score and Clanton was leading 19 to 14.

The Chilton team was led to victory by the brilliant running of backs, Smith, Kennedy and Seals. The Clanton line proved very strong both offensevely and defensively. Capt. Howard Baker, quarterback of Clanton, kept his team knocking at the Centerville Goal all thru the game. Griel Popwell, pass catching expert, kept the Centerville secondary on their toes the entire game. He accounted for two touchdowns in the Centerville game..

FOX HUNT AND BARBECUE WELL ATTENDED

The Fox Hunt and Barbecue held by the Chilton County Fox Hunters Association last week was a howling success. The howling was especially good according to reports and the barbecue was even better. The crowd was orderly and enjoyed a night of fine sport. This years hunt was held at Cleve Littlefield's pasture with a mighty good attendance, considering the weather. All had a most enjoyable time.

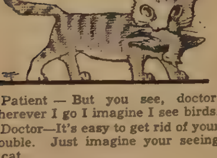
EASY CURE



Patient — But you see, doctor, wherever I go I imagine I see birds.

Doctor—It's easy to get rid of your trouble. Just imagine your seeing a cat.

By Any Other Name

Harry—Her father named her Coral.

Jerry—Was that because she was born on a South Sea island?

Harry—No. Because she was a chip off the old block!

Oh, Well

Bill—Why don't you answer the phone?

Will—It didn't ring.

Bill—Well, why wait till the last minute?

Old Yoke

Diner—Give me two eggs and a few kind words!

Waitress (returning with order)—Here are your two eggs.

Diner — What about the kind words?

Waitress—Don't eat the eggs!

Sure to Be Found

Bill—I wonder where Uncle Harry left his will?

Joe—When I get to heaven I'll ask him.

Bill—What if he isn't there?

Joe—Then you can ask him!

Wise Quack

Joe—What's the difference between a duck and a dumb pilot?

Jim—All right, what is the difference?

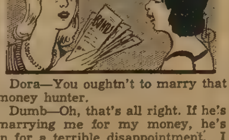
Joe—A duck quacks and a dumb pilot quacks up.

Skip This One!

Harry—When I drink coffee I can't sleep!

Jerry—That's funny, with me it's just the opposite. When I sleep I can't drink coffee.

GOOD PRECAUTION



Dora—You oughtn't to marry that money hunter.

Dumb—Oh, that's all right. If he's marrying me for my money, he's in for a terrible disappointment. I put all my money in war bonds!

Just a Coal Pun!

Bill—Did you hear about the fellow that fell five stories onto a coke truck?

Will—No, did he get hurt?

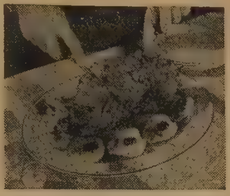
Bill—Of course not! Coke's a soft drink!

Um, Fried Chicken!

Brown—Rastus, can you tell me whether the man next door to you keeps chickens?

Rastus—Yassuh, he keeps some of 'em!

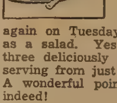
HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers



There's a right and a wrong way to carve a lamb roast! If you want to get the most out of your meat, place the shank bone to the right of the carver, the thick, meaty section to the right of the platter.

Plan Long Career, Much Variety for Leg o' Lamb Roast

If you plan a long and much-varied career for your roasts, you will not only have delicious meals from them but you will work a wonderful saving on points.



Take a roast leg of lamb, for instance. If you have it on Sunday baked in all its glory to a nice golden brown, you can still have meat on Monday by creaming the leftovers and serving in a noodle ring, and then again on Tuesday with vegetables as a salad. Yes, there you have three deliciously different ways of serving from just one cut of meat. A wonderful point-stretcher? Yes, indeed!

Don't be scared of the leftovers when you chart your course ahead. Giving the roast this three-way career makes it an economical purchase even for smaller families.

Proper cooking prevents excess shrinkage. Proper carving will avoid needless waste. A slow oven is best for roasting to prevent shrinkage.

Roast Leg of Lamb.

Do not remove fell. Put leg, skin side up on a rack in roasting pan. Season with salt and pepper. If using a meat thermometer, make an incision into the roast, and insert center of thermometer so bulb reaches center of roast and does not rest on either bone or fat. Place roast uncovered into a slow oven (300 degrees) until done. Three to 3½ hours is the time limit required. If a thermometer is used, the meat is done to medium when it registers 175 degrees F. or well done when the thermometer registers 180 degrees F. When serving, garnish pear halves, centers filled with mint jelly and leaf.

How to Carve Lamb.

The leg of lamb should be placed before the carver so that the shank bone is to his right, and the thick, meaty section to the right side of the platter. Different roasts will not always have the same surface uppermost because of the different right and left legs. This, however, does not affect the method of carving.

Insert the carving fork firmly in the large end of the leg and carve two or three lengthwise slices from the near thin side. Turn the roast so that it rests on the surface just cut. The shank bone now points up from the platter. Insert the fork in the left of the roast. Starting at the shank end, slice down to the leg bone. Parallel slices may be made until the stitch bone is reached. One-quarter to three-eighths of an inch is a desirable thickness. With the fork still in place, run the knife along the leg bone releasing all the slices.

Is there lamb leftover from Sunday? Cut up the remainder of the lamb in cubes and serve it thus:

Creamed Lamb and Peas in Noodle Ring.
(Serves 6)

Noodle Ring: Cook 8-ounce package of wide noodles as directed on package, drain and rinse. Combine with 4 tablespoons melted butter or substitute and put in greased 1-quart ring mold. Set mold in pan of hot water for 10 minutes.

Lynn Says:

Cabbage is King! Cabbage is an important source of vitamin C, and is best served raw to provide roughage in the diet. Serve it shredded with the following combinations:

Grated raw carrots, onion, minced, cooked dressing.

Chopped cucumber pickles, diced celery, dressing.

Diced apples, raisins, dressing.

Pineapple, dressing.

Grated raw beets, parsley, dressing.

Diced celery, apples, chopped nuts, whipped cream flavored with sugar and vanilla.

Chopped cabbage, tomatoes, onion.

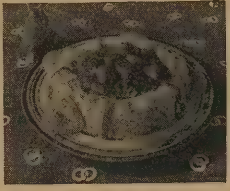
Creamed Lamb and Peas:

3 cups cooked, diced lamb
1 medium onion, sliced
3 tablespoons butter
2 cups leftover gravy
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Salt and pepper to taste
½ cup cooked peas
3 green pepper rings, cut in half
6 slices pineapple

Saute sliced onion in butter until tender, add gravy and season with Worcestershire sauce. Add meat and peas. Cook slowly until heated through, add salt and pepper. Unmold noodle ring and fill center with lamb. Garnish with green pepper rings and pineapple which has been slightly sauteed in fat.

If there is no gravy left from the meat, add 4 tablespoons flour to the butter or substitute in which the onion is cooked, stirring until lightly browned. Add 2 cups of water in which a bouillon cube has been dissolved. Cook, stirring constantly until thickened and smooth.

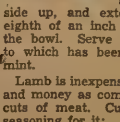


Leftover lamb can be appetizingly served in a noodle ring which does a splendid job of extending the meat. Peas and the remainder of the gravy can go into this ring along with the cubed pieces of lamb.

The last of the lamb can be used effectively in a salad bowl just in case there's still some of it left. Extend the meat smartly with fruits that are compatible:

Lamb Salad Bowl.
(Serves 6)

2½ cups diced, cold lamb
2 cups diced celery
½ cup chopped green pepper
6 slices red apple
1 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon chopped mint



Place diced lamb in center of bowl. Arrange diced celery in a circle around the lamb; repeat using chopped green pepper. Cut apple in half; core and slice crosswise. Place the slices around edge of salad bowl, peel side up, and extending about an eighth of an inch over the side of the bowl. Serve with mayonnaise to which has been added chopped mint.

Lamb is inexpensive in both points and money as compared with other cuts of meat. Curry is a natural seasoning for it:

Lamb Curry Pie.
(Serves 6)

2 pounds lamb, shoulder or breast
1 onion, diced
1 tablespoon fat
3 cups hot water
¼ teaspoon thyme
2¼ teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon curry powder
¼ cup water
3 cups cooked rice

Cut lamb into inch-length pieces. Brown lamb and onion in hot fat. Add water, thyme and salt. Simmer 1½ hours or until meat is tender. Combine flour and curry powder; add cold water and mix to a smooth paste; add to lamb. Line greased baking dish on sides and bottom with rice, pressing rice firmly into place. Fill center with lamb mixture and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 20 minutes.

Rice may be omitted, and the top covered with baking powder biscuit dough. This should be baked in a hot oven for 15 to 20 minutes.

Are you having a time stretching meats? Write to Miss Lynn Chambers for practical help, at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Don't forget to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

ON THE HOME FRONT with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THE war is bringing many changes in the things we use and the things we do. Women as well as men are learning to handle tools. If a chair is lacking we make one. If we cannot have springs we find a way to make it comfortable anyway. That is the spirit of the times.

Perhaps you have made lawn chairs all with straight cuts of the hand saw. Have you ever stopped to realize that it is almost as easy to cut curves with a compass saw? Curves add comfort as well as beauty and a tufted cushion distributes the weight so that springs are not missed so much. The curved pieces of the charming chair sketched here are shown at the left. You can see how easy they are to cut out of odds and ends of one-inch lumber that you may have on hand. The reinforcing pieces are all straight cuts.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared an actual-size pattern for all the curved sections of this chair. Complete dimensions and directions for the chair construction and for making the tufted cushion, with list of materials included. This is pattern 265 and costs 15 cents. Send your order to:

ED PAWLEY, one of Hollywood's better known bad men, will get a chance to reform now that "Big Town" is returning to the air. Pawley, who has appeared in "G Man," "Jesse James," and several hundred other pictures, will play the part of the crusading "Steve Wilson," Managing Editor of the Illustrated Press, in the new "Big Town" series, Tuesdays over CBS. This season the series will be concerned with the American press' unceasing battle against subversive influences and fifth column activities.

Nancy Kelly sang and danced as a child performer in vaudeville, but only in her latest picture does she get a chance to do it for the cameras. She's the feminine charmer of "Tarzan's Desert Mystery"—plays a chorus girl stranded in the Sahara. Looks as if there'd been some drastic changes made in the Tarzan background, but Johnny Weismuller still has the leading role.

There's a lot of sentiment attached to the fact that Amos 'n Andy are again appearing on the National Broadcasting company after a two-year absence from its air waves. It was on NBC that they first appeared, and rose to radio fame.

James Jordan, 19-year-old son of Fibber McGee and Molly, makes his screen debut as one of the sons of Maj. Frank Cavanaugh in RKO's "The Iron Major," which stars Pat O'Brien. The fact that young Jordan was honorably discharged from the Air Force, in which he had enlisted, gave him the chance to play Phil Cavanaugh—who in real life is a lieutenant in the United States army.

United Artists, topping the bids of two other major studios, acquired distribution rights to "Voice in the Wind," which U. It was made on rented stages by Arthur Ripley and Rudolph Monter—with no guarantee of a release, they gambled on their ability to turn out a box office attraction. It's "the story of two gentle people, a man and a woman, whose love beats against the grim events of a world at war."

Gloria Holden says a compliment Spencer Tracy paid her has influenced her acting career more than any other one thing. Appearing in "Test Pilot," with Tracy and Clark Gable, she played the widow of a pilot killed on the eve of their honeymoon. She finished the scene in which Gable gave her the prize money that was to have paid for the honeymoon; Victor Fleming, the director, had made her cry steadily for 15 minutes before she went into it. "Honey," said Tracy, "You don't have to ask anybody for anything when you can act like that!"

One sure-fire way to make an Australian mad is to let him hear an American actor use a cockney accent when playing an Australian. Alan Carney, one of the best dialect actors in radio, perfected his "Aussie" accent by talking to Australian newsmen at their News Service headquarters in New York. After the broadcast they phoned him their congratulations.

"For many long years, my mother-in-law had suffered from common constipation. She used to take all kinds of pills and medicines, but got no lasting relief. Upon starting to use KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, her trouble cleared up. She feels like a new person, she says. She wanted me to tell the world how your product helped her." Mrs. Poline Balis, 734 East 160th Street, Bronx, N. Y.

How do scientists explain the apparent "magic" of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN's relief? Simply thus: ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's most effective sources of "cellulosic" elements — lack of which in sufficient amounts in the diet is a common cause of constipation! These elements help the friendly colonic flora fluff up and lighten the colonic wastes for easy, natural elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN doesn't work by "purging"—or by "sweeping you out." It is a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If this is your trouble eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water! See if you don't find the welcome relief you've hoped for! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

South America supplied 65 per cent of the world's rubber needs in 1890, while in 1922 only about 6 per cent came from that section. Far East plantation development accounts for the drop in the demand for Amazon Valley rubber.

Synthetic rubber is defined as a man-made combination of molecules that form a substance having the chief characteristics of crude rubber.

In 1938 the total of American-controlled rubber plantations was about 260,000 acres, mostly in the Far East. These plantations produced 40,000 tons annually, or about 8 per cent of U. S. imports.

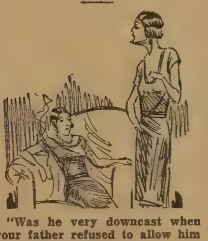
Followed Instructions

Rapping his baton sharply on his music-stand, the conductor of the very amateur orchestra glared round. Then he fixed his eye on the cornet-player.

"Here, you! Why on earth did you leave off playing just as we came to the chorus?"

"Well," was the retort, "on my music it says 'Refrain'; so I did."

GOAL KICK



"Was he very downcast when your father refused to allow him to see you?"

"About five flights."

No Real Hurry

The local strong man met a fellow villager. During their conversation the big man called the other, a small man, a liar. The little chap naturally resented this remark.

"Now look here," he said, "I'll give you just five minutes to take that back."

The big man smiled.

"Is that so?" he said. "And suppose I don't take it back in five minutes?"

"Then," said the other, after a slight pause, "I'll give you ten minutes."

'Twas Insight

"Was it a case of love at first sight?"

"No; second sight. The first time he saw her he didn't know she had money."

Last Time

"How's this?" asked the lawyer. "You've named six bankers in your will to be pallbearers. Of course, it's all right, but wouldn't you rather choose some friends with whom you are on better terms?"

"No. Those fellows have carried me so long that they might as well finish the job."

Two 'Ifs'

Hubby—Darling do you realize that if you knew how to cook we'd save money?

Wifie—Yes, dear; and if you knew how to save money we would keep a cook.

Put Her at Ease

A snob wrote saying that she hoped the schoolmaster was very particular about the class of boys allowed into the school.

He replied: "Dear Madam, so long as your son's fees are paid promptly, there will be no question as to his antecedents."

If you know a Navy man, don't ever call him a "gob"—sailors consider the name an insult. You can get on the right side of him though if you offer him a Camel—or better yet, send him a carton. Camels are the favorite cigarette with men in the Navy (Army, Marines, Coast Guard, too, for that matter) based on actual sales records from the service men's stores. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

Chilton and Perrv Counties Selected For Labor Survev

Chilton and Perry Counties have been selected as a unit of a monthly Nation-wide survey of the labor force conducted by the Bureau of the Census, it was announced today by Mrs. Ruth O. Jones, who will be in charge of the survey activities here. A local office has been established at Clanton, and part-time enumerators have been selected from among local residents.

Through the Monthly report on the Labor Force, which was established early in 1940, the Bureau of the Census collects facts about the jobs people are doing, the number of hours they work, and the employment changes which take place from month to month. Such up-to-date information on the manpower of the Nation is of great value in planning war production in our factories and on our farms.

Mrs Jones explained that each month a selected group of household would be interviewed by trained enumerators to provide the information needed. Not every house is visited, because of the time and expense involved. Instead, a number of homes are chosen in this and many other communities in such a way that employment and labor supply for the entire Nation can be estimated with great precision. During the next several months, authorized representatives of the Census Bureau, carrying proper identification, will call at the homes selected for interview at intervals of about four weeks. Mrs. Jones asks for the cooperation of local residents in carrying on this important work.

The Baptist W. M. S. Mission program meeting was called to order Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, by Mrs Houston Nivens, chairman of Circle Four, who brought the devotional message and opening prayer. She also began the program on "Witnessess of the Word," and was assisted by Mrs Red Wagner, Mrs. R. M. Tucker and Mrs J. P. Hayes. Mrs. Nivens concluded the program by reading a very inspiring article and prayer while Mrs Owens played very softly on the piano, "Tell Me the Old, Old Story."

Following the program, Mrs. Owens introduced an unexpected but very welcome guest, Mrs. David, Missionary from Argentina, who was the guest speaker of the afternoon. She brought to the Society, some very important facts concerning this "Christian America," reminding them that there is Missionary work to be done right here.

The Circles will meet in the following homes next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Circle One — Mrs Chas. Cox.
Circle Two — Mrs Renfro Mullins.
Circle Three — ______ ______.
Circle Four — Mrs Houston Nivens.
Circle Five — Mrs W. D. Hocutt.
Circle Six — ______ ______

The meeting was dismissed with prayer by Mrs J. P. Hayes.

Mrs Mamie C. Smith attended the Pilot's Convention in Birmingham last week and spent part of this week in Birmingham with her son.

We are very happy to report this week that little Peggy Murrah, who has been confined to a rolling chair for quite a while as a result of an accident, is improving rapidly and is now able to walk across the room. Little Peggy hasn't been able to use her arms and legs since the accident until now. We are sincerely happy to make this report.

Sally Gowan is in the Central Alabama Hospital where she had an operation for appendicitis last week. She is doing nicely and will soon be back in her place at school.

Miss Helen Cox is recuperating from an appendix operation in Central Alabama Hospital. Her friends wish for her a speedy recovery.

We are also happy to report that Miss Ada Bennett is at home again and looking fine, though just a bit weak from her seige of illness. We miss her and hope she will soon be out again.

Mrs John T. Ellis is improving but is still confined to her bed most of the time.

Mrs S. L. Williams of Montgomery, is here with her sister, Helen Cox, who is ill. Mr. Williams was here also this week but has gone to Fort CcClellan to be inducted into the Army.

Lt. Col. A. F. Herzberg, wife and daughter, Ann, were guests of Mr and Mrs Norman L. "Buck" Roberts last week-end. Lt. Col. Herzberg was enroute to a new station..

Mr and Mrs Jim Roberts and children, of Linden, were week end guests in Clanton.

What's Doing At Isabella High

The bond and stamp contest in which one bomber and three fighter planes will be named by Chilton County schools has been inagurated at Isabella. Students have been selected to lead the drive in every class or home room group. Although no report can be made on the accomplishments and progress of the contest here, it appears that the majority of the student body is interested and is trying to make a good report. We hope to be in the winners when the contest closes one week from this Friday.

We are happy to announce that the Isabella F.F.A. went over the top in its "Buy A Jeep" campaign, exceeding its quota by $53.75. The total amount raised was $1,218.75, while the cost of a Jeep is only $1,165.

Of the two groups which were competing, Hershell Wright's group won by a decided majority over Jesse Culp's group. Consequently, the latter group entertained the winners as had been decided. The entertainment held Monday night consisted of a get-together for games and refreshments in the gym.

Among visitors to school last week was Sgt. Frank Arthur Martin, a former student and member of the present Senior class. Frank, (we call him "Pete"), says he is a gunner on a B-17, and wouldn't trade his job for anything else he knows of. He seems to be making good in the Army, which is nothing unusual for those offsprings from I.H.S.

POPLAR SPRINGS

We had a nice crowd out Sunday according to the weather. We have our stove up now, so come on to church, cold or not. We had a good Sunday School, discussing about, "Remember the Sabbath Day and Keep It Holy." One way we can keep it holy is by going to church instead of some worldly place. Next Sunday everyone is invited to come to preaching. Bro Gilland will deliver the message. Our B.Y.P.U. is still going nicely. All come who can.

There will be some Missi speak at Poplar Springs night. Be sure and come They can tell us some thi going on in China, and al they have been.

Post War Planning Must Start Now

WHEN once again the whistles and the bells of this great land of ours proclaim the peace . . . and the streets of every village and town are thronged with cheering thousands . . . there should be no dark doubts of jobless breadlines and economic suffering to mar the joy of that day.

Only by producing in peace as in war can our country hope to assure jobs for returning veterans and others who are presently engaged in war time industrial activities. Tomorrow will be too late for peace time planning.

The Gulf, Mobile and Ohio Railroad is interested in any business enterprise—be it large or small—if it will create employment for those who live in its territory.

We are surveying, planning, contacting . . . endeavoring to determine what this railroad can do to help guarantee peace time stability for the people of the communities which it serves.

Our Industrial Department will welcome the opportunity to work with any civic group or individual along these lines.

Lazy Fellow Wouldn't Pass Up Such a Chance

On a certain plantation a workman loved ease and fishing. When he wasn't fishing he was loafing.

One night there was heavy rain, and the next morning all the low places on the plantation were flooded two feet deep. Passing the workman's cabin, the owner found his man seated in an easychair fishing in a puddle of water.

"Here, Henry, you old fool," said the owner, "what are you doing?"

"Boss," said Henry, "I'm fishin'."

"Well, don't you know there are no fish there?"

"Yes, I knows that. But this 'ere place is so handy!"

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

Lesson for October 24

HONORING OUR PARENTS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:12; Luke 2:48-51; Mark 7:6-13; John 19:25-27.
GOLDEN TEXT—Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right.—Ephesians 6:1.

Right relations between children and parents have much to do with the peace and prosperity of a community and a nation. Experience has demonstrated that to be true, but even more basic is the fact that it is in accord with the promise of God.

One of the bad breakdowns in modern life is that of proper honor and obedience to parents by children. In all too many homes God's order has been reversed and instead of honoring and obeying their parents, children (both young and old) have taken the place of "boss," and mother and father must obey if they want peace and rest.

The need for our lesson of today is both great and acute. The future happiness of hundreds of thousands of children and the present welfare of thousands of neglected and boss-ridden parents will depend on the intelligence and faithfulness with which this lesson is taught in our churches, and the honesty of heart with which we all receive its truth.

I. The Command and Promise (Exod. 20:12).

We are told by Paul that this is the "first commandment with promise" (Eph. 6:1-3). The Lord was not making a bargain with man, or seeking to draw out obedience by a prize, but there is obviously a great reward in the observing of this commandment.

Then, too, as the children of God (if we are such) through Jesus Christ, the first and most important consideration to come before us is, What is the mind and will of the Maker of us all regarding this matter of the relation between parents and children? His words are plain—we are to "honor" our fathers and our mothers.

The word "honor" carries with it a great many things, but perhaps the three outstanding elements are respect, obedience, and affection.

Our Lord Jesus Christ, who is the Saviour and then the Example of believers, presents a beautiful pattern of true obedience to this commandment.

II. Willing Obedience (Luke 2:48-51; John 19:25-27).

The fact that Jesus was God manifest in the flesh only enhanced His conduct. He who is divine presents an example of obedience and consideration both as boy and man which we do well to emulate.

1. As a Boy (Luke 2:48-51). The boy Jesus, increasing "in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man" (v. 52), had come to His twelfth year and with His parents had gone up to Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover.

There moved in His heart the conviction that He must now be about His Father's business—an altogether proper and commendable purpose, but one which resulted for the moment in separation from His parents. This was far more serious than a physical separation, for we read that they did not understand Him (v. 50).

Tragic indeed are the consequences of our failure to understand our children. Notice, however, that Jesus did not withdraw Himself from their watchful care, nor refuse to obey them even though they failed to understand Him. Equally tragic are the results of hasty and bitter separations brought about by the disobedience of children.

2. As a Man (John 19:25-27). The value of our lesson will be greatly reduced if we see only the responsibility of children while they are young. We are the children of our parents as long as we and they live.

One marvels at the carelessness and hardness of heart that will permit men and women who have time and money for everything else, to neglect their aged parents and even shunt them off into a public institution for care.

III. Hypocritical Disobedience (Mark 7:6-13).

Such an important commandment naturally held a high place in the thinking of the community. To violate it involved a measure of shame which men sought to avoid. So the Jews of Christ's day devised a scheme which made it possible for a man to appear to be very religious even as he deprived his parents of the honor and help to which they were entitled by the law of God.

The man who was so avaricious that he did not wish to support his aged and needy parents could entirely evade that God-given responsibility by declaring that his property was "Corban," that is, dedicated by a vow to God. Thereafter no matter how great was the need of his parents they could receive nothing.

Thus do men make "the word of God of none effect" (v. 13) through their traditions. The method differs but the spirit persists even in our day.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Rains Slow Allied Advance in Italy; Strategic Use of Aircraft Paves Way To Successes in Southwest Pacific; U. S. Food Output Drops 7 Per Cent

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

These Japanese-Americans are shown moving to fighting front in Italy. Recruited in Hawaii, they are loyal to the flag of their adopted country.

ITALY:
Slowed by Rains

With rain swelling the normally shallow and narrow Volturno river into a raging torrent, and the downpours bogging down movement of heavy equipment, fighting in Italy was slowed.

Gen. Bernard Montgomery

As the first rays of sunshine began to peep through, however, Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth army was organized for assault of German positions across the Volturno as artillery fire laid down a cover of shells.

To the east, Gen. Bernard Montgomery's Eighth army faced difficult going. Besides clinging stubbornly to mountain positions, the Germans rushed an armored division to this sector to help delay the British by fighting in the open plains, which lie between the rugged heights.

In declaring war on Germany, the government of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy was given status as co-belligerent by the Allies, that is, partnership in the actual fighting, but not in political councils. To assist the Italians in the fight, the Allies were reported ready to supply materials and extend lend-lease aid.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:
Make Use of Air

The part aircraft is playing in the jungle and mountain warfare in the Southwest Pacific has been brought to light with accounts of the Allies' steady march northward in New Guinea.

With the thick growth and rocky terrain making overland travel slow and difficult, air transports have been flying over these obstacles to land troops close to Jap bases. After disembarking the troops, the transports then take off to return again with supplies with which to carry on the battle.

Because of this strategic use of the air, the Allies have cleared better than half of the eastern coast of New Guinea, and now are slowly driving further northward toward the important Jap airplane base of Wewak, from which the enemy have been sending fighters and bombers against Allied positions.

RUSSIA:
Cross Dnieper

Germany's whole Dnieper river line was threatened with Russian troops fighting in force on two sectors of the western bank of the broad waterway.

It was this line that Hitler ordered held at all costs, and German generals counter-attacked the Russians in force, with the intention of smashing the Reds before they could develop their drives and leave them too weak to carry on a major offensive.

In the north, the Reds pressed against the German fortress of Vitebsk, key to the Nazis' defensive system in the Baltic states. The Reds reportedly massed great strength in the region, since a big break-through would not only open the gates to the Baltic states, but also cut off Nazi land communication with Leningrad, and put the Russians at the German rear.

MISCELLANY:

IMPLEMENTS: Output of farm machinery will be doubled in 1944 under government permission, according to Lee Marshall, director of materials in the War Foods administration. Rationing will be abolished on two-thirds of the 91 farm machinery items now on the list, and distribution controls on the entire list will be "cut in half." Tractors will continue to be rationed.

CROPS:
7% Under '42

Despite a 12 per cent rise in the volume of livestock, poultry and eggs, U. S. food production in 1943 is expected to drop 7 per cent below last year. Because of a scarcity of feed grains, however, animals will not be finished off as customarily.

Corn production is estimated at 3,055,605,000 bushels against 3,175,154,000 last year; wheat 835,816,000 bushels against 981,327,000; oats 1,148,692,000 bushels against 1,358,730,000, and barley 336,212,000 bushels against 426,150,000. At 115,000,000 tons, feed grain output would be about 9,000,000 tons below 1942.

Although soybean production, at 206,000,000 bushels, is expected to drop slightly below last year, the department of agriculture is looking forward to bumper crops of potatoes, rice, beans, peas and peanuts. Oilseeds should equal last year's yields.

Good weather in September enabled farmers to speed harvesting of late crops. Outside of the corn belt, many beans intended for harvest were cut for hay, partly because of drouth damage and partly to increase ordinary fodder.

Food to Allies

During the first eight months of 1943, the U. S. has shipped more than seven billion pounds of food to its Allies under lend-lease, of which the British empire received 69 per cent and Russia 23 per cent.

Of the total amount of food sent abroad, shipments of pork represented 15 per cent of our total supply; lamb and mutton 12 per cent of supply, and beef and veal, 1 per cent.

Shipments of cheese totaled 11 per cent of supply; milk products 3 per cent; butter, 1 per cent; dried beans and peas 11 per cent; dried fruits 21 per cent, and canned fruits and vegetables, 1 per cent.

In all, 9 per cent of our total food supply was shipped during the first eight months, compared with 6 per cent last year.

LABOR:
Back to Fold

Six hundred forty-five thousand miners were ready to return to the ranks of the American Federation of Labor upon the AFL's acceptance of John L. Lewis' application for re-entrance.

John L. Lewis

The United Mine Workers' return to the AFL, however, rested upon final settlement of the AFL's demand that the UMW's District 50 withdraw from organizing workers in other fields in which the AFL already has unions.

In leading his 645,000 miners back into the AFL fold, Lewis completed a historic chapter in U. S. labor history, which first saw him leave the AFL to organize the CIO on the principle of unionizing all workers within an industry, and then quit it because of political differences.

Although Lewis' plea for readmittance highlighted the AFL convention in Boston, the Negroes' demand for full membership in AFL unions threw the meeting into a turmoil. No action was taken, however.

CIVILIAN GOODS:
May Make More

Because production schedules for some types of military and naval equipment can be reduced and the favorable turn in Allied fortunes in Europe will allow army and navy officials to plan their needs more accurately, an appreciable percentage of American industry may be reconverted to the manufacture of civilian goods. The announcement followed reports of overproduction of some material.

CHINESE:
Could Come to U. S.

Repeal of the exclusion laws forbidding immigration of Chinese into this country, and the granting of citizenship to Chinese who might immigrate or who already reside in the U. S., was advocated by President Roosevelt as the house prepared to act on a measure providing the Chinese with these privileges.

The President said that quotas would allow 105 Chinese to immigrate to the U. S. annually, and, he added, "there can be no reasonable apprehension that any such number of immigrants will cause unemployment or . . . competition in the search for jobs." At the present, foreign born Chinese cannot obtain citizenship in the U. S., and there are 37,242 of them here.

Congress should repeal the exclusion laws, President Roosevelt said, " . . . as another meaningful display of friendship for a gallant ally."

GAS:
Western Rations Cut

Because military requirements total 43 per cent of their gasoline consumption, the value of A, B and C gas ration coupons in ten far western states were cut from four to three gallons.

This compares with two gallons for B and C coupons in other areas. Hint of further cut in the far western ration was dropped with the prediction that military requirements would approximate 52 per cent of the section's consumption in 1944.

Pipes Move Oil

Over 9,277 miles of pipe lines are now moving crude oil to refineries, with over 360,000 barrels being delivered daily to the Atlantic seaboard.

Made necessary by military use of the tankers which once supplied the East with most of its oil, total mileage of pipe lines will reach 10,888 when the 256 million dollar construction program is completed.

Besides laying of new pipe, the direction of oil flow over 3,000 miles of pipe line was reversed, and more than 2,700 miles of old pipe was dug up and moved to new locations.

By the summer of 1944, it is expected that over 700,000 barrels of oil will move daily through the lines to the East. In the celebrated "big inch" pipe line, the oil flows at a speed of 4½ miles per hour.

Pays Off With Pork

When the recent bond drive got under way, Governor Dwight Griswold of Nebraska (with hand upraised in picture) bet other governors that his state would beat theirs in exceeding its quota.

Griswold lost his bets, however, and here is shown attending a 4-H auction in Omaha, bidding for hogs with which to pay off his wagers.

In payment of one bet, Griswold sent a fancy porker to Governor John C. Vivian of Colorado. But much to Governor Vivian's dismay, he discovered that he would have to surrender 700 ration points, equal to 20 weeks' supply, to have the hog butchered.

HOGS:
Hit Ceiling

Even though the government estimated 1943 spring pig production at 74,050,000, marketings at 27 federally inspected packing plants during the first week of price ceilings totaled 578,057, or only 0.78 per cent of the number of hogs on farms.

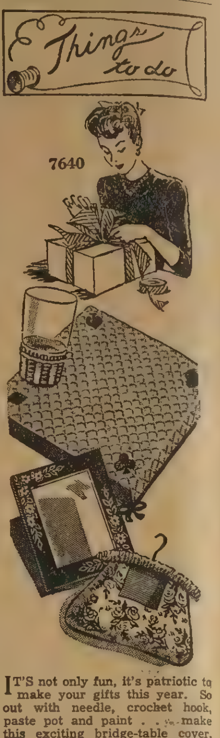
During the same period, practically all types of hogs brought the $14.75 top. The same condition prevailed as the second week of marketing under the ceiling began, with only younger pigs, some thin sows and some heavy stags and boars dropping below the $14.75 mark.

The 1943 spring pig production compared with 61,013,000 in 1942 and 49,234,000 in 1941.

PAPER:
Future Cuts Possible

Newspapers and other users of wood pulp paper will be reduced to 48 per cent of their present supplies next year unless the pulpwood industry can obtain additional labor, a group of American, Canadian and British paper leaders declared.

The committee advanced two proposals, the first restricting printing and wrapping papers to 52 per cent of their 1943 quotas, and the other trimming all paper usage.



IT'S not only fun, it's patriotic to make your gifts this year. So out with needle, crochet hook, paste pot and paint . . . make this exciting bridge-table cover, mirror frame, or ingenious hanger with pocket for belts and gadgets.

ar Chest Offers Practical Way to Help Men in Service

re Than Half of National War Fund Goes to Agencies Serving Our Armed Forces

If your boy is serving in the d forces, is a prisoner of war is in the Merchant Marine, the practical way in which you can d him some of the comforts of ne is through contributions to the bama War Chest," A. Key Fos- chairman, and J. Frank Rushton, co-chairman of the appeal, said ay.

hree of the major agencies to e in the appeal which opens 19, are the United Service Or- [illegible] and the United Seaman's Service. Through these three channels, men receive a share of homelike comforts which they otherwise could not find, while they are far from home.

Of the total War Chest quota of $1,176,315.79 to be raised in Alabama, more than half will go to these three agencies which are ministering to the needs of so many Alabama boys.

Throughout the Western Hemisphere, from Alaska to Hawaii, the USO serves men at camps and naval stations. At clubs and centers, they can relax and rest, attend shows, see movies, write letters, hear music, be with their friends—and have a taste [illegible], wherever they are.

USO lounges in bus and railroad stations look after the comfort of service men on their travels.

Mobile units which are called "USO clubs on wheels" travel to distant outposts to carry mail, movies, games, books and other entertainment to men stationed there. On maneuvers, too, these mobile units follow the troops with entertainment and comfort.

Through arrangements made by the USO, a great entertainment circuit of stage and movie stars, concert artists and bands are on the road, going to hundreds of camps and naval stations, to lighten the men's leisure time.

In all these ways, the USO is making life brighter for the men of the armed forces.

The War Prisoners Aid reaches through the barbed wire fences to the men imprisoned in camps. The prospect of months and even years in prison would sap their courage and hope, if it were not for the constructive activities which the War Prisoners Aid is able to bring to them.

Books for entertainment and for serious study, athletic equipment, musical instruments and handcraft materials are sent to the prison camps, in line with the requests of [illegible]

Through regular classes, men are acquiring the education they missed in their younger days, or preparing themselves for a new occupation after the war. Men who have been incapacitated by war injuries are not spending days of gloomy idleness in the prison camps. They are learning new trades, so they can be self-supporting again after the war.

Neutral officials of the War Prisoners Aid Committee make regular visits to the prison camps to learn the men's needs, (and then send to the camps the materials for constructive activity.

Thousands of men are thus being saved from the blight of idleness and aimless worry, and are being given an opportunity actually to

Men of the Merchant Marine are braving submarine-infested seas to get supplies through to the nation's fighting men. After their dangerous and gruelling voyages, the men are in need of rest, recreation and, sometimes, medical attention. This the United Seamen's Service provides for them — through 28 clubs and centers at principal ports in the United States and abroad.

When men of the Merchant Marine, who have survived bombing by the enemy return to American ports, they are met by representatives of the United Seamen's Service, who assist in providing clothing, replacement of lost passports and papers, communication with families and friends, and other services needed by a man rescued from the sea.

These three agencies—USO, War Prisoners Aid and the United Seamen's Service — are directly concerned with the welfare of many Alabama boys. A gift to the Alabama War Chest is a gift to these boys, War Chest officials point out.

The Alabama War Chest will aid a total of 17 agencies including, in addition to the three already named, Russian War Relief, United China Relief, British War Relief Society, Greek War Relief Association, Polish War Relief, United Yugoslav Relief Fund, French Relief Fund Belgian War Relief Society, United Czechoslovak Relief, Queen Wilhelmina fund, Norwegian Relief, Friends of Luxembourg, Refugee Relief Trustees, U. S Committee for the Care of European Children.

In those communities which have Community Chests the War Chest appeal will be combined with that for local welfare agencies, whose services are so much more vital in wartime than ever before.

With the appeal, "Give once to all who fight for freedom," Chest officials urge Alabamians who work for wages to give at least one day's pay, and those, who have more to spare, to give [illegible] more.

Can You Picture ALABAMA without Highways?

strange place it would be—this State ours—if our splendid 6,600 mile net- ork of improved highways suddenly ased to exist.

great many communities would be lated. Others would find it infinite- more difficult to carry on even the st ordinary daily activities—with no ucks on the move, no cars or buses king workers to war plants and farms, ldiers to camp and home on furlough, siness travelers to nearby communi- s, children to school.

e Alabamians are apt to take for nted the convenience of our excel- t roads—but these highways didn't st grow. Building and maintaining em is a tremendous job and for achiev- this successfully we can thank past d present administrations and partic- rly the State of Alabama Highway partment.

That isn't the whole story, however. Transforming these lifeless ribbons of concrete and macadam into live, active arteries of public transportation has been the accomplishment of the Alabama Public Service Commission. They've labored hard and long to give our State a transportation system that compares favorably with any other in the country.

All of us who live and work and pay taxes in Alabama can take pride in our share in this highway system.

As fellow citizens, the Greyhound Lines have made a very large contribution in the form of license, fuel and operating taxes—but we feel that our greatest service is in putting the highways to work for the benefit of all who must travel, making near neighbors and good neighbors of all the communities we serve throughout the State.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin can ride any horse on his family's Wyoming ranch, but he wants a colt of his own. His father, a retired army officer, refuses to give him one until his school grades improve and he learns to take responsibility. Ken's mother tries to protect him from the stern discipline of his father and the youthful bullying of his older brother, Howard, who always manages to do things right. Captain McLaughlin has received a letter from Ken's school advising him that Ken has not been promoted. So, while the others prepare to round up the mares and colts, Ken has to stay in the house and study.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER II

When Ken left the kitchen the alarm clock on the wall shelf beside the spice closet pointed to twenty minutes to nine. He wondered if he should time himself right from then or from the moment he went into his room, or from when he set his books on the table. This was a very important point, but as he could not decide, he went upstairs as slowly as he could, just in case it was all part of the hour.

He paused on the landing in front of the picture of the duck. If he stood there looking at the duck picture he could get into another world. He knew how to do it. To get into another world you had to make yourself the same size, in your mind.

But he felt misgivings, standing there. His mother would hear, from the kitchen, that he hadn't gone all the way upstairs. He went on up, down the hall, into his room, and noisily closed the door. Possibly she would time him too.

He stood a few moments looking around. He and Howard each had a small room to himself.

Ken loved his room. The walls were white-washed, and there was a big window opening out front over the terrace and the Green. He could see everything from it. Sunshine poured in.

Best of all, Ken loved his little walnut bed, because that was really home.

It wasn't very tidy. He and Howard had to make their own beds, and he had made his in a hurry, before he went out riding. Now would be a good time to straighten it up. That was a good dutiful deed—about as good as studying—it probably could be counted in the hour. The quilt, which was light green with sprigs of pink and blue flowers on it, was crooked and humped over the bedclothes underneath. He threw it back, then paused, his eyes on the wall at the head of the bed.

There were these pictures—one on each side — about eight inches square, with a flat wooden frame an inch wide.

And inside the frame—

He dropped the quilt, moved up to one picture and stood minutely examining it. What people! Peasant people, his mother had told him, probably Swiss.

Down at the end of his room was the strangest picture of all.

Ken went to look at it. There was a verse written in the corner which he knew by heart.

"Intreat me not to leave thee,
Nor to return from following after thee.
For whither thou goest I will go,
And where thou lodgest I will lodge."

It was a picture of a desert land. And a man stood as if waiting to go, looking at the maiden for whom he was waiting. But she had run back to throw her arms around a woman, and there they stood, arms about each other. And the verse in the corner was what she was saying. They were dressed in long, draped, brightly colored shawls.

"Intreat me—" He jumped and ran back to the bed when he heard quick steps across the kitchen floor below. Outside the kitchen door his mother's voice called, "Here, Kim —Here, Chaps—"

This time he really finished the bed and smoothed the quilt. It looked very nice. He stood regarding it, thinking that now he must take down his books.

Resolutely he picked out his arithmetic book, sat down, opened it and began to think.

Suddenly Ken heard the sound of horses coming near the house and started up so quickly that the leg of his chair tangled with the leg of the table and he went sprawling on the floor, then scrambled up and over to the window.

Ken leaned out the window as far as he could to see the last of them as they went down the Green, just jog-trotting, and disappeared around the end of the house—

"Ken!" Nell's voice came floating up from the open window below. "What are you doing?"

He scurried back to the table and made it true before he answered, "I'm doing my arithmetic."

"What was that crash?"

"My chair fell over."

"What made it fall over?"

"It just fell over—"

Nothing more from Nell, and Ken summoned all his energy and frowned at his open book. He must make a plan. He would do cancellation over. He liked cancellation. It was fun crossing out the figures above and below the line and turning everything into nothing.

He hunted for his pad, opened all the drawers, and found it.

Then he heard Nell coming up the stairs, and she opened his door.

She had some fresh bureau scarves over her arm, and came in briskly and went to his chiffonier to change the scarf.

"I was thinking, Ken, it would be a good idea if you spent your study hour on that composition."

"The composition?"

"Yes, the one you didn't write. If you write it nicely we could send it to Mr. Gibson and tell him how it was you came not to write anything—that you were thinking about it—and he might let you have some credit for it."

"The one about the Albino," said Ken, and his eyes went thoughtfully to the window. "How would I begin it?"

"Have you got paper there?"

"Yes."

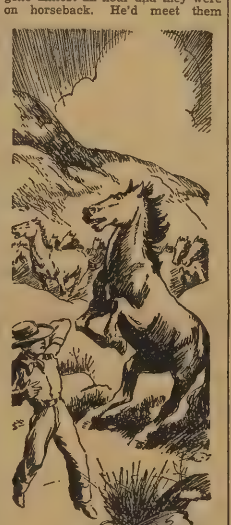
"Well, just pretend you're telling someone about it—someone who doesn't know. Me, for instance. Perhaps I've forgotten. Who was the Albino, anyway?"

Ken grinned, and said, "A big white stallion—just a bronc—who came over the border from Montana when they had a drouth there. Dad called him a big ugly devil but a lotta horse—"

"That's fine," encouraged Nell. "And what did he do?"

Ken sighed deeply, and wrote, "The Story of Gypsy," carefully at the top of the paper.

Ken tore down the road. He'd take the short cut. They'd been gone almost an hour and they were on horseback. He'd meet them about halfway coming back maybe, and see the whole bunch moving. He'd find a good place and hide so his father wouldn't see him.



She snorted in terror and went straight up on her hind legs.

He trotted along in the irrigation ditch. It was dry because the water hadn't been turned in yet. This way he would avoid the road and the gates. Howard might be stationed at any one of the gates.

He left the ditch and climbed up a hill. From here he could see Gus and Tim working in the ditch in the Crooked Meadow and could hear their voices. Tim was swinging a pick; the sound of the blow reached him after he saw the pick land.

And a mile or more away he could see Castle Rock, the great beetling rock, jutting up seventy feet high, with peaks and parapets and turrets shaped like a castle. It overhung the aspen grove at the far end of the meadow.

That was where they were, down there near the rock. His father was rounding up the mares with their foals, getting them out of the woods, bringing them back through the meadow slowly. He never ran them.

Ken ran down the hill and headed for the big rock. He ran as far as he could and then stopped to get his wind again and make a calculation.

From where he was now, on the grazing land which sloped down to the barbed wire fence around the meadow, he could see the wide gate open and fastened back. That was so the mares could come through up to where he was. There was a sort of road here, and the mares would follow it naturally and stay right on it.

If he could hide somewhere near here, where he could keep his eye on the gate, he'd see them pass quite close.

He looked about for shelter. Here and there was a jagged outcropping of the pink granite which underlay the soil, here and there a small clump of wild currant bushes.

He drew back behind the bush and lay down and suddenly felt very tired and very happy. The report card and the saddle blanket and the study—all the unpleasant things—were behind him.

He woke with a jerk, coming up from such a deep place that it seemed he must have slept for hours.

He was bewildered and sat up, trying to gather his wits. Then he remembered and scrambled to his feet—would he be too late?—they might have passed while he was asleep—he ran out from behind the bush—head on into the bunch.

The mares were coming up from the meadow, almost noiselessly on the grass, McLaughlin in the rear, and Banner offside in the middle. They were walking as quietly as the cows coming in for milking.

In the lead was a powerful, long-legged mare with a shiny black coat. She carried her nose in the air, her wild, staring eyes ringed with white. Rocket, the loco mare, daughter of the Albino.

As Ken shot out from behind the bush, almost colliding with her, she snorted in terror and went straight up on her hind legs.

For a moment Ken was under the dangling black hoofs of her forelegs and smelled the heat of her body, then she twisted to one side, made a great leap and shot away, and it seemed to Ken that it was a hundred horses that leaped and scattered after her, instead of just twenty.

Ken ran to a pile of rocks and scrambled to the top so he could see all that happened.

Rocket had gone off at an angle to the line of march and was on a dead run, stretched out like a race horse, with the whole bunch after her. She was heading for the Rock Slide, a place where the grazing land broke down to the lower levels of the next pasture over a long curving hill of sheer rock. To go down it on foot, he and Howard had to sit and slide. No horse, not even the most sure-footed, could negotiate that drop. If she went over she'd go head over heels, she'd roll and bounce to the bottom, and all the others too, if they followed her, the whole band of mares and colts pitching down, somersaulting, rolling crashing—

"Whoa — there — whoa — whoa—" McLaughlin's voice rang out on a note of desperation. He was galloping as fast as he could to head off Rocket, but she had a long lead and Shorty was slow.

Then Ken saw the big stallion, Banner, shoot out of the crush. His bright chestnut coat was like flame in the sunlight. His feet thundered.

"Oh, go it, Banner—go it!" shouted Ken in an agony, dancing up and down on his rock.

The two horses were running at an angle to each other, Banner gaining. They converged near the Rock Slide. Banner's head was suddenly right over Rocket's, his golden mane mingled with her black mane, his mouth open and his big teeth bared.

Suddenly his jaws snapped and Rocket gave a furious squeal and stopped with a jar. Banner whirled and lashed and his heels struck her side with a ringing smack. The other mares telescoped up against them.

Then Banner was everywhere at once, biting, driving, wheeling and kicking the mares back.

Not one single mare lost—not a colt hurt or crushed—Rocket herself, panting and foam flecked, walking meekly back towards the road—

Ken's terror was now for himself. If his father should see him! He might not have. Might have thought it was something else that scared them, a coyote, or perhaps just Rocket's craziness.

He slid down the rock and sat hunched up at the base of it. He was fairly well hidden there, rocks and currant bushes all around him.

He could hear the pounding of the horses' hoofs going farther away and he began to breathe more easily. Then a shadow fell on him and he looked up and saw his father sitting there on Shorty.

After one look into the blazing eyes under the down-drawn brim of the Stetson hat, Ken dropped his head and sat silent.

"I—I just came to see the horses," he muttered at last.

McLaughlin said nothing.

Ken looked up again and the look on his father's face made him burn all over.

He cried out sharply, "I didn't mean to do it, Dad—I didn't mean to scare them—"

He wanted to go on and explain that he had fallen asleep and then run out to see if they had gone—and Rocket was right there. But there wasn't time. Without a word of answer or blame, McLaughlin wheeled Shorty and went cantering away after the mares.

Ken felt as if he had been put out of the ranch, out of all the concerns that Howard was in on. And out of his father's heart—that was the worst. What he was always hoping for was to be friends with his father, and now this, so soon after getting home— His despair made him feel weak. He put his head down on his drawn-up knees and his hands were clenched tight.

After a while he slid down flat and slept again; a deep exhausted sleep this time that made up the hours he had lost riding so early that morning.

Senators See Nazi Collapse 'Any Time'; War's End in '45

Cumulative Effect of Defeats on All Fronts, Plus Bombing of Cities, Expected to Hasten German Defeat.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

"It is my guess that the war will end by 1945," the senator said. "The collapse of Germany may come any time."

Pencils slid over copy paper. Mine, too. We sat around the long, green, committee-room table in the Senate Office building. Other press and radio men (and women) and a few visitors listened to the three senators who had made a 40,000-mile trip beginning in Maine, up through Nova Scotia, through Greenland, Iceland, Great Britain, Africa, the Near East, India, China, Australia, the Pacific islands, and back home.

I thought as I took down the notes for my broadcast that I wished many of the people who write to me, calling congress dumb, were there to listen to these men regaling us with first-hand information, facts, figures, impressions, which later they were to pass on to their colleagues in the form of long and detailed reports. Much of the material will never be printed.

The trip was spoofed by the papers, when it was proposed, as "another junket." But sitting there, listening to these men, there was no doubt in my mind that they had done a real job. They had slept in gaudy villas in Africa, they had camped in the fields with the troops, lain under thatched roofs, in bamboo shelters, taken their chances across wide sweeps of water in planes unaccompanied by any fighter protection. They had tried to find out the things you and I want to know—how the war is being fought.

Reasons Why

You have already read the gist of what those senators—and Senator Lodge, who made the journey, plus a side trip—said. The information will come out in reports and speeches before the senate and the house.

It was a long session but the thing that struck me was the second sentence which I quoted at the beginning of this article.

"The collapse of Germany may come at any time."

These men didn't pretend to be military experts or prophets. That statement of one of them—Senator Russell of Georgia—to which the others, Senators Mead of New York and Brewster of Maine, agreed, was based on what they had heard and seen including photographs of what Russell called "leveled Hamburg" . . . by the time this is in print there may be other German cities leveled as flat.

Another thing was the testimony of a French official who believed Germany would crumble soon. He was anxious that America be prepared to step in and take control. Unless we did, he insisted, chaos would spread, perhaps anarchy.

I have heard that fear expressed by other Europeans.

Basis of Belief

What is the basis of the belief that Germany will collapse suddenly and perhaps soon? On the belief that history will, in some measure, repeat itself as it always does. That the civilian morale will crumble in Germany, that the spirit of hopelessness will spread to the army as it did in 1918.

Already we know that submarine crews no longer volunteer. They have to be drafted. This is where the rift began in Germany's morale in the last war.

And what will contribute most to Germany's collapse?

Not the Russian victories alone; not the drive that will come when, as many believe, the British-American operations are intensified. These will turn the scale. But the cumulative effect of defeats on all fronts plus the bombing of her cities already at work will bring "victory through air power."

The Germans, a very high British official said to us not long ago, are a logical people. When the realization of the hopelessness of further fighting is established, they will begin the logical process of surrender.

And if you read the report of Chief of Staff General Marshall, you will see how the realization of the growth of Allied air power spreads slowly over the whole battle scene.

"The army air forces," says the general, "are now attacking the enemy on ten different fronts throughout the world. Their victories, wherever they come in contact with the enemy, testify to the gallantry and skill of American pilots and crews, to the mechanical efficiency of the planes and to the leadership of General Arnold and . . . (the other commanders)."

History of the War

Go through General Marshall's dramatic history of the war to date and you will see again and again how the Allied air might has gradually risen from the days in the "first phase" when, as the general says, "on all fighting fronts we were in a desperate situation due to lack of material," into the "later phase" when in the southwest Pacific, "air superiority was demonstrated by a loss ratio of four to one in our favor," until today when "the combined American - British bomber offensive against the continent of Europe gives promise of being a decisive factor in the ultimate destruction of the German citadel."

Now that the Allies are in possession of the Foggia air bases in Italy, we can reach what the President described as the area of Germany hitherto "invulnerable." We are nearer the southern German cities now than the air force in the British Isles is to many of the cities against which it has hurled its most devastating blows, and those cities of southern Germany and Austria, hitherto "safe" are now as "vulnerable" as the cities of the Rhine and Ruhr, as Hamburg and Cologne.

The war is not over. The fighting potential of the German army, in number of men, equipment, generalship, supplies, and morale is as high as ever. But as I sat in the Senate Office building and heard the prediction, "the collapse of Germany may come at any time," my mind went back to the anxious faces, the nervous inquiries, that came to me the day that Britain and France declared war and I waited to leave Berlin where I had been broadcasting to America.

The greatest fear of the average German then was the fear of American participation in the war. We couldn't, the stupid leaders believed, "get there in time if we wanted to." They didn't guess we would come via the skyways. Now they know.

(Note: To anyone wishing a complete copy of the "record which Americans will never forget," which is what the President called "General Marshall's fine, soldierly record of achievements of our army throughout two of the most tremendous years of our history," I shall be glad to send a copy. Simply send me your name and address. No charge. See address at head of column.)

We Need Scrap

The words "all out" and "drive" have just about lost their meaning.

And yet, somehow, somewhere, iron and steel scrap has to be collected. There is plenty of it in the country. For the government to collect it, it would take an army. There is only one way it can be gotten. That is through individual effort. It involves no cost. It simply requires a little effort and some time.

The mills now have only enough scrap to last two and a half months. The shooting has just started, uncountable tons of metal are going to be dropped on the enemy in the months ahead. If you wait for someone else in your community to come and get your scrap, the army and the navy won't get the steel they need. Your initiative is essential.

We had a nice crowd out for Sunday school Sunday and B.T.U. Sunday night. The latter has planned to have their Quarterly Social with Mr. and Mrs. Vester Bice Saturday night, October 23rd. Let's all attend the social and have a real good time.

Mr. Harvey Dobbs was carried to the Jefferson Hospital last week for an operation.

Miss Zelma Wilkins visited Louise Keen during the week end.

EASTVIEW

The following services will be held at Eastview this week end:

Saturday, 2:30—Women's Missionary Society meets at the home of Mrs. Perry Smith.

7:30—Service at the church.

Sunday, 10:00—Sunday School, Superintendent, Mr. Tom Traywick.

11:00—Church service.

WFA Announces Dairy Payment Program

The War Food Administration announced, effective for the period October 1, 1943, through December 31, 1943, the general provisions of a program to protect dairymen against increases above the September, 1942, level in the prices of dairy feed, including hay.

A payment based primarily on the increased cost of feed since September, 1942, will be made to dairy producers. Consideration will also be given to the difference between prices now being received for milk and those received during the immediate prewar years. The payment will be higher in areas where the quantity of purchased feed is larger and feed cost have advanced the most, and where the advances in price received for milk since the period immediately preceding our entry into the war have been the least. In any event, the payment will not be less than the equivalent of 25 cents per hundredweight of milk delivered, except in areas where other programs for dairy products are now in effect, and not in excess of 50 cents per hundredweight. When butterfat rather than whole milk is delivered, the minimum and maximum rates will be three cents and six cents per pound of butterfat respectively.

In some cases, it may be desirable to make the payments to the producers through cooperative marketing associations or other marketing agencies. In all other cases, the payment will be made direct to the producer. All farmers in an area will receive payments at the same rate even though there may be some variation among individual farmers in the area in the proportions of purchased feeds fed dairy herds.

War Food Administration officials advise dairymen to keep accurate records of their sales of milk and butterfat and their purchases of dairy feeds, including hay, beginning October 1, 1943. Where payments are made directly to the producer, the record of sales and purchases and the supporting evidence will be filed with the County AAA Office.

The W.F.A. points out that the feed payment program is for a 3-months period. It is expected further consideration will be given to the milk production program by Congress and appropriate administrative agencies before the expiration of this period.

IN MEMORY

On Thursday, October 14, 1943, the death angel visited the home of Mr. Tyree Landers of Selma, Ala., Route 2, and wafted away the soul of his beloved wife, Mrs. Berdie Landers, age 46.

She died from cancer, but was so long suffering, patient and kind, praying with many tears, for God's will to be wrought out.

The funeral service was held at Sardis, Maplesville Route 2, on October 15 at 3 o'clock, with Rev. Hyman Atchison officiating.

She is survived by her husband, Mr. Tyree Landers; five daughters—Mrs. Ernest Turner of Birmingham, Mrs. Charlie Bell Irvin, Misses Bonnie Lee, Carolyn and Tyree Nell Landers of Selma Route 2; three sons—Cpl. Edmond Landers of Tallahassee, Fla., Billy of Selma Route 2, and T. J. Landers, who is now in England serving in the U. S. Army; also one sister, Mrs. Mamie Tucker of Selma.

Pallbearers were: Charlie Sansom, Grady Davis, Arthur Roseberry, Elsie Davis, Elbert Short and Leonard Hayes.

Beloved, prepare to meet thy God, Death will some day cool your brow.

The remains were placed in the adjoining cemetery. Brislin Bros. of Selma in charge.

CEDAR GROVE AND MT. PISGAH

Mt. Pisgah at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. It is our last preaching Sunday before Conference.

At Cedar Grove at the 9:30 hour is the real treat of the year. The folks of that Church have the opportunity of a lifetime. I am writing members as to who will be there so that too many of the folks from other churches won't be coming and filling the house. We did not want to have to admit by ticket. I trust Cedar Grove members will come—Rev. Reese Farnell.

Good news for this church! Just received a letter from Dr. Donald MacGuire of the First Church of Montgomery that he will come to us on the evening of the fourteenth of November to hold services for us each evening at the regular hour of service and remain with us through Friday evening. We are expecting a feast of good things from this gifted man of God We hope that the members of our sister churches will come with us during these evenings; you will find a hearty welcome.

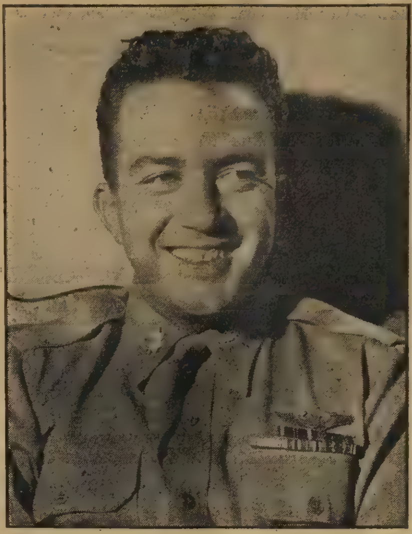
ORPHANAGE PRODUCE

Those who wish to anticipate in giving produce for our children's home at Troy, will please bring same to the nearest point. It will be loaded at Clanton, Thorsby and Verbena as usual.

The produce will be carried on trucks instead of by railway. Therefore you are asked to bring what you have on Wednesday, November 17th. It will all be collected on the same day, and not three days in succession as heretofore.

Rev. Daily will look after the produce at Thorsby, and Mr. Q. C. Meroney will be at Verbena. If you bring your produce to Clanton, bring same to Mullins & Scott Warehouse near the depot.

Wears Distinguished Flying Cross



MAJ. JOHN D. EILAND

Major John D. Eiland of Clanton, Ala., wears the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with seven Oak Leaf Clusters, won for his combat valor in 50 missions against the enemy.

He has three Messerschmitt fighter planes to his credit as a result of his 200 combat flying hours in the Mediterranean area.

Yet his greatest war thrill came to him on a day he didn't leave the ground!

For Major Eiland, in his closing few months overseas, was a squadron commander, whose job was to send his P-38 fighter planes and their eager young pilots into battle—then anxiously "sweat out" their return.

"On one assignment, a fighter sweep over the straits between Africa and Sardinia, the boys really hit the jackpot," he recalled during a visit to AAF Western Flying Training Command Headquarters here. "They shot down a total of 25 confirmed and 11 probables."

Five of the planes were Messerschmitt 109G's, he said, and the rest were armed transports.

"The boys, 12 in all, got those 25 planes within five minutes after opening fire," he said. "I had spent a few darned anxious hours, just waiting and wondering. And when all 12 men finally returned, it was the greatest feeling I've ever had."

Major Eiland's squadron flew 2,314 combat hours in four months without losing a man.

The 25-year-old former University of Alabama student now is stationed in the AAF Western Flying Training Command at Williams Field, Ariz., advanced pilot school, as an instructor. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. John D. Eiland of Clanton.

$5,552.09 NEEDED TO FLL QUOTA IN WAR FUND DRIVE

Are you concerned Have you given the matter any thought; or the proper thought?

When your boy, or any Chilton County boy steps into a U S O, and he knows that you, and his, and our county did not give its share, for the U S O's support; How will he feel? When they see the awful distress, the hunger and suffering of our allies, in far away, war torn lands, for "lack" of food, medical supplies, etc.,—Can they feel that, their parents, their kinsmen, their families, their friends, their community, and their county "dug down deep" and produced their quota, to help relieve such suffering?

Your county's quota is $7,057.89. At this writing, Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, October 27th., there has been turned in, $1,505.80. You see what has to be done. We are $5,552.09 short of our quota.

Maybe no one has called upon you; it is impossible to see everyone, but you can send your contribution to your chairman, or direct to the treasurer of this fund, Mr Frank J. Callen, Clanton, Alabama.

No one else knows your part of Chilton County's $7,057.89, as well as you do. Send your part in, NOW. It will certainly make you feel better.—Victor J. Heard, Chairman, Chilton County, Alabama War Chest, Inc..

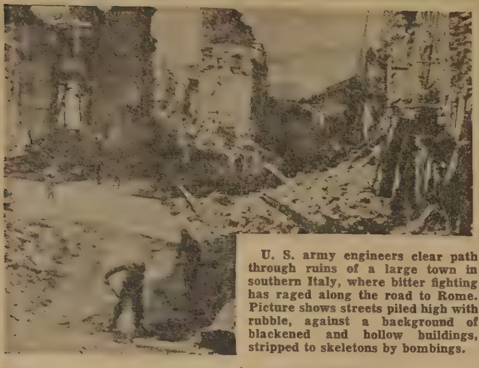
Jap Forces Smashed in Sea and Air As Allies Pound Main Supply Bases; Germans Fall Back to Massico Ridge; Higher Dependency Allotments Fixed

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



U. S. army engineers clear path through ruins of a large town in southern Italy, where bitter fighting has raged along the road to Rome. Picture shows streets piled high with rubble, against a background of blackened and hollow buildings, stripped to skeletons by bombings.

ITALY:
Tough Going

Rooted from their Volturno river line, the Nazis fell back on prepared positions along the Massico ridge, 2,500 feet high.

Following their usual tactics, the Germans were expected to hold out until the Allies take the time to concentrate superior numbers along the different points in the mountains to overpower the rugged outposts.

When driven from Massico ridge, the Nazis were expected to retire to the Garigliano river, some eight miles distant. Behind the Garigliano river, it was thought they might make a stand in the mountains, which dip almost into the sea in this sector.

Although the Nazis' action is of a delaying nature, it involves bitter fighting, since German artillery planted on the mountain sides can fire down on Allied forces fighting their way up, and Nazi machine gunners and mortar batteries can hide in the rugged country and spray U. S. and British soldiers crawling forward in the open.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:
New Fight

Following Gen. Douglas MacArthur's grand strategy of crippling the position of the enemy in a certain area by knocking out the main base from which it operates, Allied aircraft pounded the big Jap supply center of Rabaul on New Britain island.

Once the feeder point for Jap troops in the central areas of the Solomons and New Guinea, Rabaul has lost much of its strategic importance with the enemy's surrender of these territories. But it still is being used to supply the Japs in the northern areas of the Solomons and New Guinea, and as a base for enemy shipping and aircraft, can endanger any Allied move northward.

Concentrating on Rabaul, Allied bombers sank more than 100 vessels lying in the harbor, and destroyed more than 200 aircraft.

Striking close to Japan's home waters, U. S. U-boats have sunk 98 more enemy merchant ships, to bring to 460 the total bagged.

DRAFT:
Propose New Allotments

Wives of American servicemen would continue to receive $50 monthly from the government, but payments for support of children would be raised to $30 for the first child and $20 for all others, according to new dependency allotments established in congressional bills.

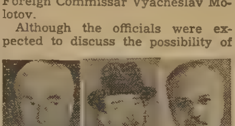
Under the present system, wives receive $50 monthly, but only $12 is paid for the first child and $10 for every other one. The new allotments also would boost payments in most cases to collateral dependents, such as parents, grandchildren, brothers or sisters. Payment to one parent for chief support, for instance, would be $50 monthly instead of the current rate of $37.

Under the new bills, regular dependency allowances would be paid to the husbands and children of the WACs or WAVES, if they relied on them for chief support. The government would make the whole of the first monthly payment, instead of waiting for the soldier's contribution of $22, and payments would be expanded to include the top three enlisted grades in addition to the present four lowest.

ALLIES MEET:
Talk in Moscow

Swooping down over Moscow, two brown Liberator bombers finally came to rest on the Russian capital's chief airdrome. From the planes stepped American Secretary of State Cordell Hull and British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden. Waiting to greet them was Russian Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov.

Although the officials were expected to discuss the possibility of the U. S. and Britain opening a second front in France, it was anticipated that the chief consideration would revolve around re-establishment of European boundaries after the war, with emphasis on Russia's claim to the Baltic states and parts of Finland, Poland and Rumania.



Hull, Eden and Molotov.

Meanwhile a new lend-lease agreement signed in London, pledges the U. S., Britain and Canada to increase supplies to Russia this winter to help her avert famine and carry on the war against Germany.

Dnieper Battle Rages

The titanic struggle on the Dnieper river increased in violence as the Russians poured more troops across the broad waterway and the Nazis rushed reinforcements to bolster their sagging lines.

Although apparently successful in stabilizing their lines in the north, the Germans found the going rough in the central and southern sectors. The Russians were successful in shifting their attacks from one point to another and keeping the Nazis off balance.

These tactics were evident in the Kiev, Melitopol and Kremenchug regions. After being held near Kiev, the Reds switched their attack to Melitopol to the south. When the Germans rushed reinforcements to the area, the Russians then shifted to heavy attacks on Kremenchug to the north.

OL' MAN RIVER:
Back in Business

America's inland waterway system—once a principal artery for transportation and freight—has come back into its own in World War II.

Addressing the 25th annual Mississippi Valley association convention in St. Louis, Mo., Defense Transportation Director Joseph Eastman declared America's inland waterways will carry 157 billion ton-miles of freight in 1943, a ton-mile being the movement of a ton one mile.

With 95 per cent of the freight on the Mississippi consisting of essential material, Eastman said the river's system embraces 5,000 barges from 100 to 3,000 tons in capacity, and 1,000 towboats from 200 to 2,500 horsepower. Last year, Eastman revealed, 16½ billion ton-miles of freight were carried over the system.

The waterway system has been moving record loads despite a decrease in facilities because of the transfer of many Great Lakes and inland carriers to ocean service.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

ARMS: The United States is supplying arms, equipment and food to 32 fronts, the senate naval committee reveals. Some, it was said, are as much as "17,000 miles from the point of origin."

SPAIN: Exiled Spanish Loyalists will form a "government in exile" possibly in Mexico, according to a statement by Diego Barrio, ex-president of the republic.

FIRE: Losses resulting from fires during September were the largest for any September since 1932, and 29 per cent higher than the same month last year, the National Board of Fire Underwriters announce. Losses amounted to $26,488,000.

WRITER: Paris newspapers report the death of Romain Rolland, 75, a French writer and winner of the Nobel peace award.

U. S. PLANES:
Production Lags

Because of changes in models, engine shortages, labor needs, faulty distribution of raw materials and plant reorganizations, American aircraft production for 1943 will fall below President Roosevelt's announced goal of 125,000 planes, the Office of War Information said. War Production board officials have cut estimates of output to 90,000.

In reviewing the aircraft program, OWI noted that the period of experimentation has passed, with the result that production is now being concentrated on proven models. Engine improvements have given American fighter planes increased speed and climb, while developments in armor and gunnery have added to the strength of heavy bombers. Dwarfing even the famed flying Fortress, a new long-range bomber capable of carrying heavier loads will soon make its appearance.

JAPAN:
Expand Industry

Japan has moved for maximum industrialization of East Asia as part of her program to meet the Allies' impending onslaught on her rambling empire.

By recent order, the famous business house of Mitsibushi was directed to double the capital of its subsidiaries, with the Japanese government itself putting in 50 per cent of the new money.

Further, Mitsibushi's shipbuilding, steel and aircraft industries are to be reorganized, with vital plants moved to China and Manchuria to escape Allied bombing. The other 10 financial houses which share their rule over Japanese business with Mitsibushi are also expected to come under close government control.

FOOD:
1944 Outlook

Although food production in 1944 will probably equal or even exceed this year's, civilian supplies may be smaller, the bureau of agricultural economics reported. Military, lend-lease and other government requirements will more than offset any increase, it was said.

Supplies of cereals, chickens, eggs, fresh fruits and vegetables, potatoes, dried beans and peas should be as plentiful as this year, the bureau declared, with greater enrichment of bread and flour promising more iron and B vitamins.

However, shorter supplies of meats and dairy products are in prospect, the bureau reported, with a resultant decrease in calories, protein and calcium. Stocks of fats and oils should equal this year's production, it was said.

Happy Meeting

Reunited, the couple decided to serve Uncle Sam as husband and wife, and they climaxed their romance by marriage, which made Pvt. Elliot the first WAC to be wedded in the European theater of war.

CATTLE:
Less Slaughter

Because cattle slaughter for the first nine months of 1943 dropped to 7,962,000 head from the 9,067,005 killed during the same period last year, 700 million pounds less beef have been produced.

During the first few weeks of October, however, cattle slaughter showed an increase over preceding months, with 406,961 head killed. On October 19, 20 major markets received 200,000 cattle for a record run, with Kansas City receipts of 57,000 setting an all-time mark.

According to reports, many thin, grass-fed cattle were finding their way to the stockyards instead of to the feed lots of the Midwest's corn belt. Prime fed cattle were selling only slightly below the July peak.

WAR BONDS

Final tabulations reveal that the 15-billion-dollar Third War Loan was over-subscribed by nearly four billions. Of the $18,943,000,000 worth of bonds sold, $5,377,000,000 was taken by individuals. The popular "Series E" bonds account for $2,472,000,000 of this great sum.

Treasury officials are gratified at the response, because it was the intention to market this issue among individuals, estates and business corporations to as large an extent as possible.

Nazi Treatment of War Prisoners Is Murder, He Says

NEW YORK.—New word that the Germans are systematically exterminating war prisoners either by outright murder or by inhuman forced labor, comes from Nikolai Burdenko, chief surgeon of the Red army who has been loaded with honors for his services to science. He is a Hero of Socialist Labor (recipients of this title receive simultaneously the Order of Lenin and the Hammer and Sickle); member of the Academy of Sciences of the USSR; and winner of the Stalin prize.

When the later honor was conferred Burdenko said that it was a tribute to the whole of Russian science. He boasted then that 70 per cent of all wounded Red army men had been returned to front line action during the early phase of the war. Now-a-days this figure is surpassed.

Grandson of a serf, son of a clerk, Burdenko worked at various jobs to educate himself. During the Russo-Japanese war he volunteered in a medical unit. Afterwards he completed his studies at Yuriev Derpt university, and during World War I served as a surgeon in front line hospitals. In 1938 he organized the famous hospital for treatment of neuro-pathological cases.

Sixty-five years old now, Academician Burdenko is still indefatigable. He says that mortality in German prison camps is 20 to 30 per cent, and believes that German treatment of their prisoners should be adjudged ordinary murder.

Comp.-Gen. Warren Popular in Capital Despite Pie Deal

WHEN peace comes, the watch dog of the national purse, the comptroller general, looks for claims galore growing out of cancelled war contracts that may total as much as 50 billion dollars. He looks also for leaks, startling even in these days of astronomical costs, and is asking congress for the final say on all such items.

Claimants, however, hardly need worry, for Lindsay Carter Warren was once called "the fairest minded man in the house of representatives." The speaker was a Republican, and Warren is a Democrat, which makes it all the better.

He resigned from the house in '41 to become comptroller after serving from 1925. Solidly built, easy speaking, he is popular on Capitol Hill. At one time he ran the house restaurant and brought it triumphantly out of the red by charging 15 cents for pie.

Between Washington, D. C., and Washington, N. C., where he was born in 1889, lie years of steady climbing. Graduating in law from the University of North Carolina, he practiced for a time; became county attorney of Beaufort county, went on to the state senate and thence to the country's capital.

Married since 1916, with three children, he is a great family man. Nevertheless, there are rumors of at least one poker game. He is said in one week-end session to have trimmed FDR himself.

Frank M. Swacker Came to Bar by Roundabout Road

FRANK M. SWACKER is probably the only lawyer between Maine and Miami who can talk deep-sea diving with the lead-shod professionals. He once worked on the Spanish fleet that Sampson sunk. That was after a bout with yellow fever in New Orleans had made him eligible for the Second U. S. Volunteer Infantry, Hood's Immunes, in the Spanish-American war. But it was before he swung a sledge on sprouting railroads in South and Central America.

Mr. Swacker wasn't admitted to practice until he was 35. But he was no sooner in than he was a special assistant to the U. S. attorney general and up to his waist in the New Haven anti-trust proceeding of 1914-17. The railroads, employers and hands recently received the Swacker dissenting report on the claims of some 600,000 operating employees for a wage boost. The majority of the emergency board of three recommended a 4 per cent rise. The Swacker recommendation advocated 7½ per cent.

The law problems of railroads have kept Lawyer Swacker pretty busy throughout the years, and railroad labor problems have been his avocation—the word is his own—the nearest thing to a hobby that he will admit indulging in. He attends to them, and his law practice, at a not too tidy desk in a Manhattan office, double walled with his law library. He is not so attentive that he misses vagrant amusing items, a quirky "e" in a typewritten letter, maybe. He first saw the light of day in St. Louis, Mo., 64 years ago.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

BIBLE TEACHINGS ON ABSTINENCE
(International Temperance Sunday)

LESSON TEXT—Leviticus 10:1, 2, 8-11; Proverbs 31:4, 5; Luke 1:13-16.

GOLDEN TEXT—Beware, I pray thee, and drink no wine nor strong drink.—Judges 13:4.

Total abstinence from all alcoholic liquors is the only sensible and effective policy for Christian people. Some, who want to use alcohol themselves, like to stress the Bible's teaching of temperance. They point to the use of wine on the part of people in biblical times, although they fail to note that more often than not it was non-alcoholic. (See "The Bible and Wine," published by Loizeaux Brothers.)

Another thing they ignore is that we live in a different day with a mechanized society, when alcoholic beverages are offered through high pressure advertising and in highly distilled and potent form.

What we are most interested in is what the Bible teaches about the matter. We note that—

Abstinence is Necessary

I. For Spiritual Obedience (Lev. 10:1-2, 8-11).

In the religious life of a nation one expects the leaders to set the example for the people to follow. Two things we may rightly demand of those who serve the nation in its religious life: (1) a vision of God and obedience to that vision in life and service, and (2) the exercise of sound, God-guided judgment in the affairs of the people.

But note what happens when the prophet and the priest turn to wine and strong drink. They err in vision (Isa. 28:7). That is, they have no clear concepts of divine truth, and lead the people into error. Further, we see that "they stumble in judgment."

To every true servant of God comes repeatedly the opportunity and the need of rendering judgment, that is, of advising and counseling those to whom he ministers. If his mind is befuddled by the use of alcohol (or, for that matter, by any other kind of worldly indulgence) he will "stumble," and cause his people to stumble.

A sad incident is related in Leviticus 10:1, 2, of the sons of Aaron.

We are not told directly that they were intoxicated, but it is implied in the fact that there is an immediate injunction against the use of wine by the priests (Lev. 10:8-11).

II. For National Order (Prov. 31: 4, 5).

It is a notorious fact that the liquor interests strongly influence the political life of a nation. (See "The Wrecking of the 18th Amendment," by Ernest Gordon.)

While political leaders may make sanctimonious protestation that government agencies are not influenced by the liquor interests, it is common knowledge even to those who are slightly informed that the two are closely associated.

The result of that unholy alliance is rightly described in Proverbs 31:5—"They . . . forget the law, and pervert the judgment of any of the afflicted." Much of the sad disorder in the body politic is traceable directly to the door of the makers and sellers of alcoholic beverages.

It is a depressing and disturbing thing when the leaders of a nation are known to lean on alcoholic stimulants—the broken reed on which man can only be pierced. The destructive influence of their example can be imagined.

III. For Personal Usefulness (Luke 11:13-16).

John was to be born into a life of such blessed usefulness to God and man that he was to be a "joy and gladness" to his parents, "great in the sight of the Lord," and instrumental in turning "many of the children of Israel . . . to the Lord."

Such a life is worthy of emulation on the part of every young man and woman. What is the secret of it? Undoubtedly, fine Christian parentage had much to do with it.

Other elements also entered in, such as rearing and training, but of great importance was the fact (v. 15) that he was not to be driven by the false stimulants of this world, but by the infilling of the Holy Spirit of God. No "wine nor strong drink," but being "filled with the Holy Ghost"—there, young people, is the secret of a happy and useful life.

Note that John was to be "great in the sight of the Lord" (v. 15)—nothing finer or more distinctive could be said about a man. That greatness simply could not exist along with indulgence in "wine nor strong drink." Being filled with the Spirit precludes the use of intoxicants.

Let us bear that in mind when we are tempted to be led astray by the smooth arguments of those who talk "temperance" as a ground for indulgence. Our boys and girls—yes, our men and women—need a constant warning against the evils of alcoholic liquor. (See Alcohol, a Deceiver, Depraver and Destroyer, published by Moody Press, Chicago.)

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

IT ALL started with a bright idea for making a painted coffee table out of odds and ends of lumber. The sketch gives dimensions and shows the simple construction used to make the frame reinforced by useful shelves at the ends. So far the table was substantial but crude and that is where the lady with the needle came in.

The table was to be painted cream color and then waxed. She bought a yard of slightly darker tan sateen and appliqued a design of blue and red morning glories with green leaves on it. This was placed over the top of the table and tacked around the edge. A piece of glass was cut to fit and the finishing boards were then screwed around the sides. Any interesting fabric could be used under the glass of the table top, or bright flower prints or a map would give a good effect.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin can ride any horse on his family's Wyoming ranch, but he wants a colt of his own. His father, a retired army officer, refuses to give him one until his school grades improve and he learns to take responsibility. Ken's mother tries to protect him from the stern discipline of his father and the youthful bullying of his older brother, Howard, who always manages to do things right. When Captain McLaughlin learns that Ken has not been promoted he orders him to study instead of joining the roundup. But when Ken is through he dashes out to watch the horses come in and accidentally stampedes them.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER III

Even before he opened his eyes next morning Ken knew that something was wrong, and he pushed away the moment of complete awakening. He lay facing the window and saw that the pines on the hill were quiet. No wind today.

Then he remembered. He had stampeded the mares.

He had a feeling that it was late. For some time he had been half hearing all the early morning noises.

He slipped out of bed and went to the window, hitching up his pajamas. Howard was on the terrace right underneath, and Ken could see the top of his head, black and smooth, with the part exactly in the center. He had on blue jeans, and a clean chambray shirt and a red bandana.

Howard looked up. "Hi."

Ken faded back into the room and hastily began to dress.

The smell of coffee filled the house.

Howard watched his sprinkler, moving it, little by little, down the terrace, and planned his day. Ken would be all right now, he thought, he was never hard to manage—they might have fun in the swimming pool—or go shooting—

"Breakfast!" sang out Nell's voice. She ran out onto the terrace. She had on a green dress with a zipper all the way down the front and a sash across the back. She clapped her hands and yelled for them to come, and Rob dropped his shovel and ran at her, and Ken stopped tying his necktie to watch.

They'd gone in. Ken hurried to finish but he hated to go down, he felt so out of things. On the way downstairs he stopped before the picture of the duck. It was a big black duck with white breast and legs and white bars on his wings. He was fierce and handsome standing on his rock.

At the breakfast table his father was waiting to hear Ken clatter the rest of the way downstairs.

"I bet he's looking at the duck," said Howard.

"What duck?"

"On the landing. He looks at it for an hour sometimes."

"Howard," reproved Nell, "he never looks at it for an hour."

"Well, a long time—seems like an hour."

McLaughlin's voice was rising. "What duck on the landing?"

"My Audubon print," explained Nell quickly. "The one that hangs under the clock. Ken likes to look at it."

"Ken!" roared his father; and hastily Ken's sturdy shoes clattered the rest of the way down the stairs, and he came into the kitchen, his hair meticulously parted and slicked down, and his face sullen.

"What did you stop on the landing for?"

Ken opened his napkin and looked down, embarrassed. "I was looking at the duck."

"The duck! Out the window?"

"The duck in the picture there."

There was a little amused glint in Nell's eyes as she helped Ken to oatmeal.

"Didn't you know we were at breakfast?"

"I—I—"

"Didn't think," finished his father for him.

Ken didn't look up or make any reply. He had known it would be like this. He poured cream on his oatmeal and reached for the brown sugar.

"Ken," said his father, "I'm going to take back an order I gave you yesterday. I'm going to remit your hour of study."

Ken looked at his father in astonishment—his mouth opening in relief and pleasure.

"I've got other plans for you this summer," McLaughlin continued pompously, and Nell tucked her face down to hide her smile.

"And," continued Rob blandly, "I'm going to give you a colt."

Ken shot out of his chair. Spoon and dishes went clattering.

"A—a—spring colt, Dad? Or a yearling?"

McLaughlin was taken aback, but Nell dropped her eyes again. If Ken got a yearling colt, he'd be even up with Howard.

"A yearling colt, your father means, Kennie," she said smoothly.

Ken gathered up the china and silver he had scattered, replaced them and sat down again. Color had rushed to his face.

"I'll give it to you a week from today," said his father. "Between now and then you can look them over and make your choice."

"I can have any yearling colt on the ranch that I want?" asked Ken.

His father nodded calmly, pushed his chair back and took out his pipe.

Speechless, Ken turned to look at Howard and the two boys eyed each other.

Even up, at last.

"Does it have to be a yearling colt, Dad?" asked Howard. "Could it be a spring colt if he'd rather have a spring colt?"

"It could be anything foaled on the ranch since a year ago," said McLaughlin. "There are eighteen yearlings. So far, thirteen or fourteen new colts; a few to come yet."

"Will you take a yearling or a spring colt, Ken?" asked Howard.

In answer, Ken turned upon Howard an exaggerated pitying sneer, copied from the movies, and mastered only after much practice.

But his father asked the same thing. "Yearling or spring colt, Ken?"

Ken answered, "A yearling."

"Horse or filly?"

This stopped him. His eyes lost focus as mental images crowded. Rocket was a mare. But there was Banner. And the Albino, mustang hero. There emerged from the confusion a definite sense of the superiority of the male.

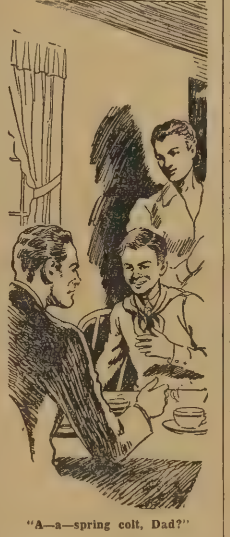
"I'll take a horse colt." His voice was final and authoritative. An imperceptible glance passed between Nell and her husband.

McLaughlin said, "That narrows it down. Let's see—how many horse colts were foaled last year?"

"Ten fillies and eight horse colts," said Howard. "You've got eight horse colts to choose from, Ken."

Things were moving very fast for Ken, horses crowding him—

"Which were they?" said Nell. "I've got them all down in the Stud Book. I left it up at the stables the other day, in the tack room. Ken, run up and get it, and we'll look over the list."



"A—a—spring colt, Dad?"

"I'll go too," said Howard, sliding out of his chair; and both boys rushed out the door.

Ken tore ahead. A colt—a colt! His own!

His mind was full of images. A little foal just born, almost knocked down by its mother's tongue licking it . . . Banner rearing, his great forefeet beating the air, his big light belly, his fierce face and arching neck—a little yearling running . . a black . . . a chestnut . . . his colt was all of them . . .

He dropped his head back and yelled; he pranced and galloped.

Howard caught up with him and said, "You crazy!"

"My colt, my colt," sang Ken. He ran in a circle, pacing, racking. He stuck his elbows out, said, "Whoa, there! Hi!" He tossed his head and shook his mane.

"You goofy!" exclaimed Howard, watching him.

Ken rushed at him with fists up. Howard fell into position and they sparred. Ken didn't care what happened to him. His arms went like flails. Howard blocked his blows easily.

Ken broke out of it and went flying up to the stable. He had a sharp consciousness of change and new importance. Things had begun at last. Things could be real now.

They found the Stud Book and ran back with it.

As Nell read out the list of yearlings and the names of their dams Ken began to feel queer. These were definite flesh and blood animals; named, described, tagged, in a book; not the colts that had kicked their heels and played and tossed their manes in his dreams. He felt the sense of loss which every dreamer feels when the dream moves up, comes close, and at last is concrete.

"I haven't named them all," Nell was saying. "There were some I never saw. They had run off somewhere when I went up on Twenty to look them over and put them in the book.

"The bronc bunch," grunted McLaughlin, referring to the progeny of the Albino. "They're always missing when they're wanted."

"Ken and I trained four of these yearlings ourselves," said Howard.

Every summer the two boys had the job of handling and halter-breaking four of the spring colts.

"The colts the boys trained last summer were Doughboy and College Boy and Lassie and Firefly," said Nell, studying the book. "Two horse colts and two fillies."

"Say, Ken," said Howard eagerly, "why don't you take Doughboy? He was one of yours. And when he grows up he'll be sort of twins with mine, in his name anyway. Doughboy, Highboy, see?"

But Ken looked scornful. Doughboy would never have half Highboy's speed. Last summer McLaughlin, looking over the colts, had said, "He's a chunk. We'll name him Doughboy. He might turn out a heavy hunter. Look at the big legs on him!"

"Lassie then," suggested Howard again. "If you want speed. She's fast as anything, and she's black as ink. Like Highboy."

"I said I was going to take a horse," said Ken. "Besides, Dad said Lassie'll never go over fifteen hands."

"Remember one thing, Ken," said McLaughlin. "You can't tell much about a colt when it's new-born, and not always much more when it's a yearling. Blood's the thing. The prepotency of blood—"

They had heard this term often, for whenever McLaughlin got talking about horses he used it.

"That's the trouble with this stuff I've got from the Albino. He had prepotency. That devil passed on his traits. They don't wear out. Must have had some magnificent blood strains somewhere in his ancestry. Arab probably. Put enough Arab blood into a line and it gives prepotency—to the traits you don't want as well as to those you do. Lots of Arab blood in these western mustangs. Comes from the Arab and Barb horses the Spaniards brought over—" McLaughlin got up, went to the shelf beside the spice closet, and took down one of his favorite books on the genealogy of the American horse. He turned the pages, looking for a passage.

Howard suddenly jerked his head back, listening. "Car coming." They all became motionless and heard the car rattle over the cattle guard at the Home Pasture Fence, come up the low hill behind the house in second gear, then whizz past. The boys darted to the window at the back of the house and saw the rear of the car as it vanished over the crest of the hill on its way to the stables.

"A dusty black car," announced Howard, returning.

McLaughlin closed his book. "Might be Doc," he said.

"To geld the two-year-olds?" asked Nell.

"Yes. Howard, run up to the stables and see if that was Dr. Hicks."

As Howard left the room, Ken asked, "Can I watch, Dad?"

Nell caught her husband's eye and he did not answer.

"Run up to my room and get me a handkerchief, will you Ken?" she said. "Right hand corner, top bureau drawer—"

When Ken had gone she said, "Rob, don't let them see the gelding."

"They might as well," said Rob. "They have to know, sooner or later."

"They know already. But, so far, they've never actually seen it. You've always had it done before they got home from school."

"Won't hurt 'em."

Ken returned and handed his mother the handkerchief. Howard arrived almost at the same moment at the back door.

"It's Doc Hicks, Dad, and his assistant."

"I thought so. Run and tell Gus to light a fire up there, and get some water boiling."

"He's already up there. He's got the fire lit."

He was about to dash away again, but Nell called him back.

"Sit down and finish your breakfast," said she. "You too, Ken. You've hardly eaten a thing."

The boys finished hastily.

Gus appeared at the door. "If we cude have an old sheet for clean rags, Missus."

Nell brought an old sheet, clean and folded, from the linen closet.

Ken finished eating, wiped his mouth, said "Excuse me, please," and darted after Gus as he left the room.

"Dad's given me a colt, Gus—any colt on the ranch up to a year old—"

Howard finished and ran after them.

Nell sighed as she rose to clear the table. "A bloody day. I hope they get through all right."

Rob did not answer. He wasn't looking at her. Suddenly he laughed. "I'll take a horse colt. Did you hear the voice on him when he said that? He's never talked or looked like that in his life before." He pushed his chair back and got up. "Now, if he just picks a good one—" He went to the door and hurried out.

Allies Ponder Possibilities Of Russ-Nazi Peace Treaty

Soviet Offensive May Mean Sudden End of War With Germany; Stalin Holds High Cards In Diplomatic Game.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Washington watches the swift march of events across the Russian plains. The renewed offensive, more than half a month before even the Russian people dreamed it was possible, has quickened all nerves. For the Russians, it means the possibility of a sudden peace.

And while Moscow dreams of the end of the war just around the first snow-covered mound on the battlefield, the Allies are considering the possibility of what it means to them. For there is always that haunting memory of a remark of Stalin's in the back of their minds—the remark that the destruction of the Reichswehr was not a condition of German surrender as far as the Kremlin is concerned. In addition there is the realization of the presence of those German divisions still intact beyond the Alps, not to mention the others still nearer.

Not (we are assured) that Stalin will make a separate peace with Germany but if a peace treaty is written on the stalwart backs of a victorious Russian army, what terms can the Allies insist upon that Stalin need feel called upon to approve unless his own many possible desiderata are agreed to by Britain and the United States?

It does not make the task any easier for the gentlemen in London and Washington now carefully selecting what the well-dressed diplomat should wear in Moscow. One thing is very certain, no old fashioned regalia will be in style. There will be no opportunity for the polite game where one can risk a little bluff with fair assurance of drawing a wild joker to four of a kind or color if Russia holds all the cards.

What Russia Wants

The optimists say that Russia wants nothing that an honest world cannot afford to offer, and is willing to give in return all that an honest world need ask for. The pessimists say that even if Britain and America can be converted to full faith in such an attitude and intent on Russia's part, how are you going to convert communist Russia to an equal faith in the attitude and intentions of the capitalistic nations?

Unfortunately, Britain and the United States have a somewhat painful diplomatic record in dealing with Germany when Adolf Hitler held his aces—the strongest air force in the world and a sizable army. We all bowed down at Munich and, indeed, (though it has been forgotten) there was some rivalry for the credit in achieving a peace in our time that was no peace. However, with the help of Russia, the Allies were able to take Hitler's aces in the end.

And so in certain discreet circles it has been suggested that the Allied weakness in the diplomatic field as far as things to trade with Russia are concerned, might become a strength if the Allied joint general staff became the negotiators. These gentlemen might be able to offer what Russia wants most (which is what we all want)—security. And these gentlemen might likewise make demands which Russia would desire to consider, namely, co-operation with compromise, refusal of which could lead to nothing better than what Hitler got in the end.

And Hitler's own words, spoken when he addressed a meeting of his party chiefs and generals recently, are worthy of note. The fuehrer suggested for Germany what Britain and the United States might well contribute to negotiations with Russia in addition to their diplomats and their armies and navies.

The Fuehrer Says

"The (Nazi) party's struggle for power," said Hitler, "set an example for today's struggle of destiny of the German people . . . arms alone mean nothing if not backed by the will of men."

The Germans made a fatal mistake twice in one generation. They failed to count on the will of the American people. If that will is made clear today, if America's intention is written clearly that all may see, the intention which we profess—a decent peace, justice and security for all—and if that will and intent is backed by the force we have, nothing can resist it. That is really the thing which can win the peace, as it has made the winning of the war possible, whatever credit may justly go to others who have battled our common enemy.

Visitors to U. S.

The war has brought a great many Englishmen to the United States who otherwise might never have known any more of America than they learned from the movies. Many are highly trained specialists, others are broadly educated, like those in newspaper and radio work. I have met a number, especially of the latter group. And I am struck by one thing which they comment upon—the widespread education in America.

That is one thing which will make up one of England's No. 1 postwar reforms—a real public school system. We, in America, underestimate our own schools on the one hand and overestimate our literacy on the other.

At first, the army demanded that a man be able to read and write or he was deferred. This lost nearly a million men to the armed forces—four states have 36 per cent or more adult illiteracy.

According to latest information, 85,000 illiterates have already been reclaimed for army service which means that they have been taught to read and write and do simple arithmetic. It is said that there are facilities for giving the same basic instruction to 750,000 more.

But that is by no means the extent of army education. A statement from the Office of War Information the other day said, speaking of the serviceman: "Unless he comes from a well-to-do family, his educational opportunities are in fact rather better in than out of the services."

That is probably something that few parents thought of when they waved good-by at the station. They did not realize that the army and navy are operating the largest adult school in the world. One out of every ten adults in the country, 11 out of every 14 able-bodied men between 18 and 38 will probably be students in that school system by the end of this year. A million boys will be in the preinduction courses, the system's prep schools. Nine out of ten of these men will receive advanced training as specialists.

The Future

Much of the education received will be carried over as useful in civilian life, for one out of three of every army and navy job is identical with a civilian job and over two-thirds of the men in the service develop skills that can be used in civilian jobs.

These figures alone, I believe, show that when "D Day" comes, the millions discharged will not be a careless, riotous lot, good for nothing but to fight. As a matter of fact, the vast majority will have, if they have anything like the feeling I and most of my comrades in the last war had, an overweening desire to settle down to a job and the building of a home, "no more to roam." Some, of course, who had the itching foot will have developed chronic cases, but it is doubtful if those rolling stones would have gathered much moss anyhow.

For the majority of the men who make up our armed forces who want and expect to fill civilian jobs, the careful classification of skills which is a vital part of the army and navy system is going to work in reverse in getting them jobs afterward. In preparation for this, experts are already assembling accurate descriptions of jobs which men learn to do in the service, keeping a cumulative record of the work they do, preparing additional tests which will give a clear picture of their achievements and talents to the prospective employer. They are also preparing to tell the serviceman what job he is best fitted for and offering help which will better prepare him for it.

I doubt if ever before in history the military has taken on such a responsibility for fitting the boy back into his natural groove when the fighting is over. This is a total war, everybody is in it, and those who have been forced to take over the abnormal duties of fighting are not going to be set adrift.

In a recent broadcast, Tokyo radio announced that "the military administration over the Philippines has been terminated." The broadcast quoted an announcement from Lt. Gen. Shigenori Kuroda, Japanese army commander of the islands.

Certificates will be awarded to all soldiers who successfully complete prescribed work in the Army Specialized Training program at colleges and universities, according to the war department. It is anticipated that college credits will be granted if the trainee returns to college after termination of the military service

R. L. (Bob) WHITE, Manager

As human as home

WE want you to think of the L & N Railroad as a personal, friendly institution—not just steel rails, monster bridges, huge shops, big buildings, long trains and fast, powerful locomotives. That is but the physical picture. The "Old Reliable" is far more than that.

It is private and free enterprise, performing an essential public service. It is a half billion dollar investment of about 8,000 stockholders . . . now distributing about $66,000,000 in good wages to 31,000 employees and purchasing about $40,000,000 of equipment and supplies per year. Thus it quickens the commercial life of every community it serves by aiding alike the farmer, merchant, businessman and laborer.

During peacetime, the L & N performs a necessary public transportation service. In the present war, still under private ownership, it has proven even more important, capable and dependable. As compared with World War I, it is performing a phenomenal and much greater service. At no time has any other agency done so much to develop its territory. It is the largest taxpayer in many counties and hence is a major support of schools and functions of government. Its management and extensive organization are sons of the South, who are intensely serious in aiding Southern development.

The L & N is as personal and human as its local agent, its trainmen, its officers . . . as their children who play in your streets and who go to your churches and schools . . . as all its employees who strive to be good citizens and neighbors, who serve tirelessly to meet the war's transportation job and whose 3,000 sons are at the fighting front.

When the war is won, the "Old Reliable" and its employees will work to make a better railroad, to serve you modernly and to aid in the South's inevitable growth. Its purpose and achievement point high. It is both your capable servant and friendly neighbor.

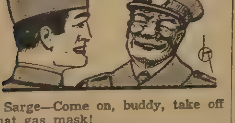
IN THE ARMY



Sarge—Come on, buddy, take off that gas mask!

General (indignantly)—I'll have you know that's my face!

We've All Got It

Daughter—But, Dad, I really need a new riding habit.

Father—We can't afford it.

Daughter—But what am I to do without a riding habit?

Father—Get the walking habit!

Z-Z-Z-Z-Zoup!!!

Waiter—Can I help you with your soup, sir?

Customer—I don't need any help!

Waiter—From the sound I thought you might like to be pulled ashore!

Same Difference

Mrs. Smith—Now that my mother has had her hair cut short, she doesn't look the least like an old lady.

Mrs. Jones—No. Now she looks like an old man!

Did You Bite?

Harry—Why does a woman knock the ash off her cigarette with her index finger and a man with his forefinger?

Jerry—I don't know. Why?

Harry—To get the ashes off!

Dust to Dust

Betty—Those ashes on the mantel are my brother's.

Friend—Oh, I didn't know that your brother was dead.

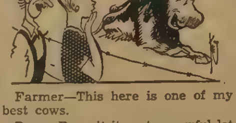
Betty—He isn't. He just doesn't know where the ash tray is.

Try Roasting

Housewife — Hilda, aren't those eggs done yet?

Hilda—No, ma'am, I've boiled them for an hour but they aren't soft yet.

NO CUDDING!



Farmer—This here is one of my best cows.

Dora—Doesn't it cost an awful lot to keep her in chewing gum?

He—And you'd think it, even if I didn't say so!

No Doubt

Jones—The Browns always brag about their ancestors as if they invented them.

Smith—I wouldn't be surprised if they had!

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS

Salads Belong in Autumn Menus
(See Recipes Below.)

Salads for Fall

Is a salad an integral part of your diet or do you set it aside just for summer months when vegetables are easy to obtain and serve in salad form?

Food authorities and doctors have long recommended the use of raw fruits and vegetables in the diet not only to guarantee more vitamins and minerals to the dietary, but to give the necessary roughage to the system. Vegetables contain a great deal of cellulose and are not as easily digested as the softer foods. This means they aid in proper function and elimination and belong daily in every diet.

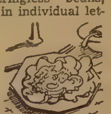
Although we are limited in the amount of fresh vegetables obtainable in the fall and winter months, there are some available which offer many possibilities for salads. Cabbage, carrots, citrus fruits and apples are the most common. For a more substantial salad item, use cottage cheese. It will also give you a goodly amount of calcium, needed for proper bone and tooth development.

If your family has been shrunk by the fall here are two recipes especially designed for smaller families:

Tomatoes Stuffed With Green Pepper Slaw.
(Serves 2)

Cut a thin slice from the stem end of each tomato. Remove seeds and part of the pulp. Sprinkle inside with salt. Invert and chill. Fill with finely shredded cabbage combined with green pepper, moistened with a dressing made of 4 tablespoons sweet cream, 2 teaspoons sugar, ½ teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons vinegar.

Green Bean Salad.
(Serves 2)



Place green stringless beans, cooked and chilled in individual lettuce cups. Combine 1 tablespoon vinegar, ¼ teaspoon salt and pepper to taste. Beat with egg beater or shake in a jar until well blended. Mash 3 tablespoons Roquefort cheese and then add oil and vinegar mixture slowly, stirring until very smooth. Pour over beans and serve at once.

Surprise Vegetable Salad.

Sliced boiled beets
Sliced boiled string beans
Sliced boiled carrots
Boiled green peas
Boiled lima beans
French dressing
Chopped chives
Boiled potatoes

Prepare and cook separately, in the usual manner, an equal quantity of all the vegetables mentioned in recipe. Boil potatoes with their jackets, peel while still warm and marinate in french dressing while still warm. When ready to serve vegetables, have them well chilled and arrange in layers in a large salad bowl, starting with beets at the bottom, followed by lima beans, then string beans, next with carrots, followed by peas. When all vegetables are used, pour over them a tart, well-seasoned french dressing. Cover the whole with a layer of potatoes, being sure that all the peas are covered. Sprinkle top with fresh, chopped chives and serve.

Lynn Says:

Salad Notes: Ingredients for a salad should be large enough to retain their identity. It's not a good idea to hide a vegetable the family does not like by chopping it very fine. Shred, but do not chop vegetables.

Simplest salads are the most attractive. A salad should taste as good as it looks.

Toss ingredients lightly, never stir ambitiously. Dressing need not cover every piece. Salad greens should always be clean, crisp, fresh.

Drain all vegetables thoroughly, before using. Serve them on clean, well-chilled plates, as cold as possible.

Vary salads from day to day. Try new combinations of color, vegetables and fruit.

Lynn Chambers' Point-Saving Menu

Pan-Fried Liver and Onions
Creamed Potatoes
Parsleyed Carrots
Apple, Carrot Salad
Whole Wheat Bread
Lemon Chiffon Pie Beverage

Greens, be they lettuce, romaine, chicory or escarole, need little else but a dressing for they are perfectly delicious just so and a splendid course for a heavy type of dinner:

Salad With Egg Dressing.
(Serves 6)

2 heads of lettuce
4 hard-boiled eggs
⅔ cup cream
¼ cup lemon juice or cider vinegar
Salt and pepper
Prepared mustard

Wash lettuce carefully and dry thoroughly. Put the yolks of the eggs through a ricer and let them drop to the bottom of a well-chilled salad bowl. Add a little prepared mustard and stir with a wooden spoon, adding the cream gradually. Season to taste with the salt and pepper, then add lemon juice and vinegar. Add the lettuce, toss lightly and sprinkle the chopped whites of egg over all. Serve on cold plates.

The use of cottage cheese with salads gives them a heartiness which is particularly necessary in the cooler weather. Here is a well-seasoned salad, pretty and colorful:

Apple, Carrot, Cottage Cheese Salad
(Serves 6)

3 apples, coarsely diced
2 cups shredded raw carrot
1 tablespoon onion, finely minced
1 cup cottage cheese
¼ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Dice unpeeled apples and combine with grated carrot and onion. Add the cottage cheese blended with mayonnaise, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Mix well. Serve on lettuce.

Molded Cranberry Salad.
(Serves 8 to 10)

½ pound cranberries
1 medium-sized apple, unpeeled
1 orange and rind
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 package orange-flavored gelatin
1 cup hot water
½ cup cold water
½ cup chopped celery

Pick over cranberries, wash and drain well. Grind cranberries, apple and orange (including rind), saving any liquid which remains. Stir in sugar. Cover and set aside while gelatin is dissolved in hot water. Add cold water and allow to become partly jellied, then add cranberry mixture and jelly. This may be poured either into a loaf pan or individual molds rinsed with cold water. Allow to jell, then unmold on lettuce.

Sandwich Fillings

Don't forget that raw vegetables with all their good vitamins and minerals are wonderful as sandwich fillings. Grind raw spinach leaves with crisp bacon, hard-cooked egg, onion, moistened with mayonnaise. Or, combine equal parts of raw carrot and turnip and mix with chopped chives, peanuts and mayonnaise. This is good on French bread.

Sunflower Quilt Is Fascinating to Make

THE "Sunflower" is one of the easiest of the quilt designs to make—the diamond-shaped pieces are easy to cut and a block works up quickly. Use brown-flecked percales, tiny patterned cream and yellow calicoes, grass-green and leaf-green cottons. Do the center in vivid yellow. Quilt has 12 pieced blocks, each 14 inches square—12 plain blocks.

RUB ON MUSTEROLE

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

In the 45 years between 1889 and 1934, the output of rubber produced by the Far East plantations jumped from half a ton to 98 per cent of the world's supply — 1934 shipments were 1,000,000 tons. The first official record, that for 1899, shows that four tons of rubber were produced from 4000 acres under cultivation.

The greatest enemies to the long life of natural rubber are sunlight, heat, oils, greases and solvents. The ultra-violet rays of the sun penetrate the surface of rubber, causing it to oxidize; heat causes deterioration, and oils develop swelling and softening, making the rubber more susceptible to damage.

In addition to providing a descending medium for men and equipment, parachutes also carry bombs. They were used against the Japs in the South Pacific with deadly success. Four Ways to Cross a Jungle Stream

United States troops in Australia learn to cross jungle streams in more ways than one. Four methods are demonstrated in this picture: 1. Via a raft made of timber found on the spot; 2. Via amphibious jeep; 3. Via a rope ladder suspended across the water; 4. Via a "flying fox," a form of breeches buoy.

GLEANED from Metro's publicity files of a few years ago: Clark Gable would be one of the country's crack skeet shots if he had time for tournament competition. James Stewart took Katharine Hepburn up in his putt-putt plane and nearly ground looped his ship in a two-point landing. Robert Taylor set his plane down in a watermelon patch. Today: Gable's heard from England over BBC, telling how skeet shooting is invaluable training for gunners. Stewart's piloting a Flying Fortress. Taylor will soon be eligible for the Transport Command, Ferry Command or as an instructor, after completing his training for the navy air force.

Virtually every nationality in the world is represented in RKO's "Gangway for Tomorrow"; it has 136 speaking parts. But none of the cast portray their native countrymen. A Russian is played by a Pole, a Czech by an Austrian, a Pole by a German, a Frenchman by a Russian. Richard Ryan, an Irishman, plays a German officer. Margo, born in Mexico, plays a French girl. Just Hollywood!

IF YOUR DEALER IS OCCASIONALLY OUT OF CAMELS

—it's because hundreds of millions of Camel cigarettes are now being sent to men in the service. In addition to the government's own purchases for our fighting men, veterans' organizations, fraternal orders, clubs, friends and relatives everywhere are sending them Camels. Yes, Camels! After all, Camels are the favorite cigarette with men in all the services—Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard.*

First in the Service
—AND THE SERVICE COMES FIRST!

WHILE we have pushed Camel's production to new peaks to meet this overwhelming demand from Uncle Sam's fighting men and from the folks at home, yet if your dealer does not always have Camels for you, he asks you to be patient while he is temporarily out of them, believing you will agree that the men in the service should come first.

 Based on actual sales records, the favorite cigarette with men in the Army, the Navy, the Coast Guard, and the Marines is Camel.

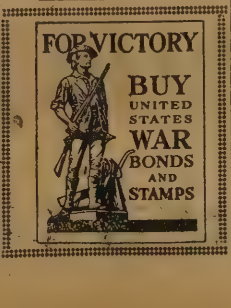
FREE JACKETS FOR GASOLINE COUPONS

Now Being Distributed By Standard Oil Dealers

If you would like a wallet, or "jacket" in which to keep your gasoline ration coupons, you can secure one free from your nearest Standard Oil dealer.

These jackets have proved so popular among moorists, in preserving their valuable but flimsy gas coupon sheets, that the first run of a million jackets was soon exhausted, and a new supply is now ready for distribution.

The new jacket provides two pockets instead of one. It will accommodate conveniently not only Basic and Supplementary Ration coupons, but also Tire Inspection Record and other incidental papers. There is also a space for a record of gasoline purchases—date, quantity and speedometer reading.



Help Wanted! You Will Qualify

The Red Cross Room that is located next door to Broadhead's Market, in case you don't know where the Red Cross Room is, will be open on Monday nights from 7 to 9 p. m. and on Wednesday night from 8 to 10. so that those who have small children and cannot come in the daytime, will have an opportunity to come and help for a few hours at night, and also to give the girls who are working a chance to serve their country in such a needed way.

This is a chance and privilege, and such a wonderful privilege it is to serve in this so urgent and important job. Everybody is being kept mighty busy now, but so are our boys "over there", what could be more important than the job of seeing that these sanitary, sterilized materials be shipped to them so that they may have them when they need them..

A member of the Armed Forces who was here the past week, told some of the workers at the Red Cross Room, that he sincerely hoped they got the help they needed to make and send these dressings, because he and those in his Company had been ordered to wash bandages, that had already been used, so that they could be used again.

Now that Hospital Base had that shortage because someone back home failed to do their part. Are we going to let it be said that we were responsible for these wounded boys having to use "second hand" First Aid material, when they are "over there" fighting for us and our Freedom? Come to the Red Cross Room any day and Monday and Wednesday night and spend a few hours folding bandages and help this county meet its quota. That will be giving your Stewardship of time. The call is urgent.

POPLAR SPRINGS

We had a nice crowd out Sunday and had a very good discussion on our lesson. "Why Total Abstinence?" We hope every one took the lesson to heart and lets do all we can to destroy liquors and help everyone who partakes of it to leave it off.

We had a large crowd out for B Y P U, and had a good lesson. We want all to come every time they can. We should not let any service for our Lord die. So everyone come on out and lets carry on the good work for our Master after all he did more than that for us. Why can't we do more for Him?

The health around the community is very good now and we hope it will continue to be so. We were sorry to hear of Bro. Lewis' death, but we all have that debt to pay sooner or later all we can do is just be prepared.

Everyone is invited back to church next Sunday. Visitors are welcome at Poplar Springs.

The Lord was good to us again Sunday, and we had a nice crowd out to hear Bro. Gilland. He delivered us a wonderful sermon.

We did not have enough present to have B.Y.P.U., but lots of the people went to see Mr. Henry Lewis, who is very sick. We all wish him a quick recovery if its the Lord's Will.

We have changed our time of meeting to 7:00 o'clock, instead of 7:30, so someone may have not known that, but we hope to meet next Sunday night and have our same program. So all who were on program just renew up on the same part and come on.

We are sorry to hear our pastor, Bro. Hughes, is sick and we also wish him a speedy recovery.

We had a small crowd, but a very attentive and interesting one out last Thursday night to hear our Missionary, Mrs. Davis, speak. We enjoyed her talk very much and wish her God's speed in the work she is carrying on. Bro. Carroll and his wife were there, and we all enjoyed his talk very much, and invite them back any time they can come. I urge every one to go to church some place and let's carry out our Lord's wish. Everyone is invited to Poplar Springs. We always invite and enjoy having visitors too.

Let's all pray for our soldiers here in camps and overseas. They are expecting that of us back home.

Every one go to church somewhere. —Reporter.

At the Evening Service, which will begin at 6:30 p. m., the Lord's Supper will be observed. The Epworth League will meet at 6 o'clock instead of 6:45 p. m.

Circus Coming To Jemison Friday Night

The "Big Ring" Circus will begin promptly at 7:30 o'clock in the Jemison High School Auditorium, Friday Night, November 5, 1943.

Highlights that the Ringmaster will present are: The Cowboys, The Butterflies, Two Dancing Dogs, Twelve Clowns, Four Minature Doll Helpers, The Old Gray Mare, A Paper Doll Song and several stunts presented by talented girls. "The Squabble Squad" and an automobile stunt as well as music furnished by the Jemison High School Band, will add much to the Circus.

Several sidesshows will be open after the Circus is over..

Admission to the Circus will be fifteen cents for children and twenty-five cents for adults.

CHECK TO BE MADE ON CLASS 2-C AND 3-C

State Selective Service headquarters has sent to all local boards forms and instructions to be used in a thorough check on all Alabama registrants who have been granted agricultural deferment, to determine whether they are producing sufficient essential farm products to justify continuation of deferment.

At an early date, every registrant in the State in Class 2-C and 3-C will receive from his local board a letter, with a form to be filled out showing his production in detail. He will also be required to produce signed statements from persons handling his products, such as ginners, livestock commission firms, or anyone who processes, handles or purchases his products.

A letter from Selective Service headquarters to local boards, to be transmitted by them to each Class 2-C and 3-C registrants, sets forth that this check is being made "to remove justified criticism from agricultural deferments" and adds: "The first duty of a farm family is to feed itself as nearly as possible from the farm. But that will not win the war and will not justify deferment. The only way a farm worker can justify deferment from military service is by producing for the market substantial quantities of vital farm products. "The letter sets out details of procedure to be followed in filing reports, which may be made by the registrant himself, or by his landlord or employer acting for him. Registrants are warned that "A reasonable time will be allowed for you to file these records, but it should be done as soon as practical. Failure of registrant or operator to file a report will be adjudged by the local board as confession of failure to produce, and will subject all deferred labor on such operation to consideration for relocation or reclassification." Local boards, it was stated "will apply the rule of common sense and give due consideration to climatic conditions and sickness or other misfortune in the family."

In announcing plans for the check, Lt. Col. James T. Johnson, Jr., State Selective Service Director, pointed out that the purpose of agricultural deferment is not to enable anyone to stay out of the armed forces, but that it is granted where it is deemed that the individual can best support the war effort and the national welfare by producing essential farm products. The plan announced was worked out in cooperation with, and has full approval of, responsible agricultural agencies, including county and State war boards, and the Extension Service, Col. Johnson said.

Clanton Meets Holtville Here Friday Nite

The Chilton County High School football team will have as its oponent Friday night November 5th, the team from Holtville High School. These two teams are old rivals and a tough game is the result every time they meet.

There will be only two more games at home, this one which begins at 8 o'clock and the one with Marion Institute November 12th.

The local boys met a team that was primed to the top notch in Centerville last Friday night. Centerville out played our boys and was entitled o the victory.

This Friday night the Clanton Tigers will be out to redeem themselves with a victory over Holtville.

MR. GRANVILLE BROWN NOW WITH PEOPLES SAVINGS BANK

Clanton welcomes this week Mr. Granville Brown of Arab, Alabama, who has accepted a position with the Peoples Savings Bank. Mr Brown has already arrived here and is boarding at the home of Mr and Mrs Oscar Jones. He will move his family to Clanton later.

DRAFT DELINQUENTS LISTED

Selective Service Board Number 1 and 2 reported the following names as draft delinquents and request that they report at once: Willie Brown and Clarence James Blankenship, of Board Number 1, and Willie Gee, col. Board Number 2.

These are the only names listed from this county. To be a draft delinquent is a Federal offense, punishable by fine and imprisonment.

MARS HILL

Our Sunday School crowd was small Sunday. Brother Cleo Cofer, delivered two good sermons for us. We are glad to have him any time.

Ladies remember our club meeting next Monday afternoon. The meeting will be held at the home of Mrs Dovie Leach.

Miss Arliss Hodgins spent last Thursday night with Miss Hazel Leach.

Miss China Robinson spent last week-end with Miss Lorene Robinson.

Mrs Mollie Holdsombeck is spending this week in Birmingham with relatives.

Mrs Alma Lucas is on the sick list We wish for her a speedy recovery.

Pfc Woodrow Cofer who is stationed in New Mexico has returned to Camp after spending a few days with home folks.

Several from our community attended the all day services at Enon last Sunday.

Mr and Mrs Chester Cofer and son Curtis of Calera, spent Sunday with Mr and Mrs C. W. Scott.

Miss Vera Ray, who is working at Childersburg spent the week-end at home.

JUNIOR RED CROSS

The Junior Red Cross of the county have been preparing Christmas boxes for children of war-torn countries. Last Thursday 33 boxes were shipped from the county to the National Junior Red Cross Headquarters where they will be sent to children of our allies. The children of the county could have filled many more boxes but due to lack of shipping space abroad the number was limited.

The boxes contained small toys—Marbles, soap, wash clothes, tooth brushes, tooth paste, pencils, crayons, small note books and numerous other articles. All articles were new. Each box cost from two to three dollars to fill.

The National Junior Red Cross roll call begins November 1 through the 15th. Schools are being sent materials with which to carry on this drive. The schools have enjoyed the magazines which have come into the schools each month.

At the end of the first month of school this year the total enrollment for the white schools was 4,662 and for the negro schools 1,045, making a total for the entire county of 5,707 The enrollment is not quite as much as it was the first month last year due to a decrease in the five senior high schools. There were 2,292 white children and 406 negro children who were perfect in attendance for the first month.

The major cause for absence for the month was work. It is interesting to note that at the close of the first month last year 2,079 children had missed 7,629 days giving work as the reason. At the close of the first month this year 1,704 children were absent 6,115 days working.

Parents have done a splendid job planning the farm work so that children could stay in school most of the time. Parents are urged to send their children every possible day during the winter months when there is very little work to be done on the farms.

Pilot Club Holds Interesting Meeting On Founder's Day

A very interesting meeting of the Pilot Club was held on last Tuesday night at the home of Escharles Johnson with Clara B. Allison as co-hostess.

President Bo Searcy presided, opening the meeting with the Club members singing "America." Invocation by Ruth Waters. Some business was discussed. The Club contributed to the War Chest fund, also milk for lunches at the Crippled Children's Clinic, held here last Friday.

Mamie C. Smith gave a report on the meeting of District Two, Pilot Club International taking place recently at the Tutwiler Hotel in Birmingham.

Ruth Waters and Olive Fiquette presented a splendid program on Founder's Day in such style that all members present could take part.

Next meeting will be held with Martha Culp and Lillian Simpson.

The Seniors Speak!

We agree that there is a problem of juvenile delinquency. Why? Is it our fault, or yours? It is to prevent this problem that we have our High School dances. If we don't have these dances the students will seek the amusement of road houses or other places.

The people of Clanton should see to it that their young people have a chance to enjoy themselves in the right way. If the people of Chilton County were very interested, they would sponsor a place for students to entertain themselves and their friends. For the past 17 years most of the High School Seniors have not had this privilege.

We hope the children entering school now will not have to take the false accusiations that we have. We invite any of the mothers and fathers to help chaperon these dances. Nothing happens at the dances that does not happen in our homes. Vacations are out for the duration and that makes it more necessary to have a place for recreation.

We challenge the town people to provide a place for recreation if they do not approve of High School dances. —Student Council. C. C. High School

CARD OF THANKS

We want to thank our many friends neighbors and relatives for their great kindness, sympathy and consideration during the long illness and recent death of our husband and father. We are especially grateful to the people of Pinedale Church, our home Church, and all the other churches of this section for their untiring efforts to comfort and aid in so many ways. We assure you that every word, act, and deed is deeply appreciated and may each of you be richly rewarded.—Mrs James J. DuBose and family.

SUSPENSE

Harry—Did you hear about the man who fell out of an airplane?

Jerry—How unfortunate!

Harry—Yes, but there was a haystack directly beneath him.

Jerry—How fortunate!

Harry—But there was a pitchfork in the top of the haystack.

Jerry—How unfortunate!

Harry—But he didn't hit the pitchfork.

Jerry—How fortunate!

Harry—But he didn't hit the haystack, either!

Pardon Me!!

Joe—You're not still engaged to that Jones girl, are you?

Bill—No, I'm not.

Joe—That's lucky! How did you ever get out of it?

Bill—I married her!

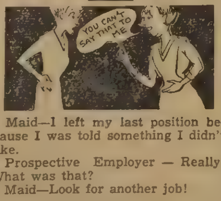
Or, Crab?

A lady and gentleman were ordering their dinner at a restaurant:

Waiter—And how about the lobster, ma'am?

Lady—Oh, he can order whatever he likes!

TOO MUCH



YOU CAN'T SAY THAT TO ME

Maid—I left my last position because I was told something I didn't like.

Prospective Employer — Really. What was that?

Maid—Look for another job!

Up-to-Date

Gramp—When I was young, it was my ambition to have a gig and a gal.

Pop—When I was a lad, I wanted a flivver and a flapper.

Son—So you can't blame me if I want a plane and a jane?!

Give Her a Ring

Will—I told her that each hour I spent with her was like a pearl to me.

Bill—And did that impress her?

Will—No. She told me to quit stringing her.

GOOD ENOUGH FOR HIM

His clothes might be full of holes, but the tramp's heart was full of hope as he started off to try his luck in a new district.

"Oh, don't apologize, madam!" replied the knight of the road politely. "It's not much—but I've seen worse!"

Hard Worker!

Sambo—What's dat yo' say 'bout yo' husband workin' so hard he's workin' in shifts?

Jemima—Dat's right. He's a night watchman. He done sleep on one side till he gets tired an' den he shifts over to de othah side!

Just What's Needed

Hubby—Look, dear, I bought you a useful present—a parrot.

Wifey—Will it talk?

Hubby—No, but it's a darn good listener!

Battle Tides to Influence 1944 Political Campaign

Close Observers Change Minds, Express Belief President Will Not Be Candidate if War Ends by Spring.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

As the political campaign, which will be over in a short year, begins to increase in tempo, it is interesting to note that noticeable shock recorded by the reporters at a recent White House press and radio conference when the President tossed off that phrase "when I am out of the White House."

Taken in the context, it was immediately clear that the President did not delimit the time element in this statement and there was no real justification for the startled pause when pencils stopped scribbling and heads and eyebrows went up at the presidential remark. Mr. Roosevelt was merely pointing out, in connection with the postwar rubber situation, that he believed that any proposed tariff to protect the synthetic rubber plants after the war should be vetoed, and he implied that any President who vetoed such a measure might stir up a lot of opposition from the synthetic rubber manufacturers.

But we have become so accustomed to the idea that Mr. Roosevelt himself thinks only in terms of his own regime without time or other limitations, that an expression which seemed to indicate the opposite naturally caused a stir.

However, it is entirely possible that Mr. Roosevelt will not be a candidate in 1944. There are even those who enjoy making rash prophecies who are already saying he has made up his mind not to run at all under any circumstances. This type of prediction is accepted in Washington as being in that class of guesses which have about a 40-60 chance of being right.

But closer observers who do not choose to guess the President's inner thoughts but are thoroughly familiar with his manner of thinking, deduce, from what they believe is past experience, that he will not be a candidate if the war is over by next spring. This is contrary to earlier prognostications that his desire to be President when the blue-prints for the postwar world are being drawn would incline him toward running for a fourth term. The explanation is that he will not run unless he has more than an even chance of winning.

End of Conflict

Although none of the army or navy officers of the top command will allow themselves to be quoted as saying the war will end early in 1944, a number of bolder and less constrained military folk are willing to say this is possible.

It is interesting to consider that a year ago this summer, when many believed that invasion of northern Europe by the Allies would be undertaken by the spring of 1943, few people were predicting, even under such circumstances, an end of the war early in 1944. Take for instance a typical comment in a leading periodical (Harper's) written very little over a year ago in which it was said that Germany must complete the conquest of key positions in Russia, must halt or control the Anglo-American onslaught from the air, and must hold northern Africa for a sortie in the Middle East. When we consider what has happened since, we can see the progress which has been made. Far from any action in which the word "conquest" could be used, the Wehrmacht in Russia has been driven beyond its last Russian defense lines in many places. The dream of an African empire has become the reality of bitter defeat and despite desperate defense measures, the most powerful air blows are being struck against the Reich.

Japanese Situation

Within the year, Japan's power has begun to crumble at a rate and in a manner which makes it plain that she will not have to be beaten back island by island and every Jap on foreign soil killed. The Mikado's "unconquerables" have become exceedingly adept at getting away from points once expected to be last stands, with remarkable alacrity and apparent satisfaction in their own retreatability.

Therefore, it is not at all impossible that the President, if he intends voluntarily to retire with the end of the fighting, means that he will be "out of the White House" at his own behest, before the ides of November, '44.

This situation, if it does arise, imposes an interesting problem for the Democrats. It is pretty generally agreed that the conservative element in the Democratic party has been gaining in power in the last months when the President bestowed positions of key importance on the right wing of the party while many New Dealers faded into the background.

When Vice President Wallace, whom it was taken for granted would be the President's choice as a successor, was dropped and his activities placed in the more conservative hands of Messrs. Hull, Crowley, et al., it was plain that the original New Dealers were being relegated to the rear of the hall.

GOP Attitude

And while the burning highlights of the administration portrait are being toned down to more sober hues, the Republicans seem to be outdoing themselves in an effort to show that they can make use of the bright lexicon of youth as a reference work and select from it promising shibboleths who speak of action rather than reaction.

Of course, Mr. Willkie does not speak for the Republican party but he has a following which his supporters hope will be reinforced by disgruntled former New Dealers as well as others whose leanings, although they have never been such that they could wholeheartedly support a Democratic régime, are still far enough left to demand the most progressive candidate offered under any other respectable banner.

Meanwhile, of course, the President must, according to the inviolable principles of politics, show no signs of intending to withdraw, since it is written that you can't control your party unless there is a fair chance that you are going to continue to be its active head.

Our political campaign of 1944 is bound to be affected by the tide of battle abroad.

General Arnold Explains

On a mild day, with the Virginia countryside warm in the glow of autumn, and the Potomac sparkling in the sunlight, some 50 newsmen—correspondents, columnists, radio commentators—climbed up the wide stone steps of the river entrance to the famous Pentagon building.

General Arnold, chief of America's army air forces, took his seat and began to talk. The gist of his words you have read. What he felt can only be guessed but he was faced with the proposition of "explaining the obvious" and he seemed just a little weary at the prospect. Arnold is a pleasant but blunt-spoken fighting man with wings and service ribbons won in service.

A few days before, he happened to listen to a commentator who was computing in dollars and lives and material the cost of the bombing raid of the great ball-bearing factory in Schweinfurt, Germany.

The general was exceedingly irked. What the commentator did not perhaps realize was the number of endless explanations of "the obvious" which General Arnold has had to make since we entered the war. And if Germany does crumble because her war effort is smashed, it will be Arnold's explanations as well as the bombs themselves that ought to get the credit.

If he had not been able to "explain" that American bombers could fly in sufficient numbers into the heart of Germany in the light of day and hit a target with the precision to destroy it, we would never have a chance to prove it could be done. There were few in high places either here or in Britain who believed such an absurd, untried thing was practical. But he had his chance and proved his thesis. Then, when the experts were convinced, when he was beginning to swing into action, the public began to exclaim at the cost of his raids. That must have been hard to take.

And so he sat for an hour reeling off figures, recounting details which will never be printed until peace comes and, most effective of all for the layman, showing the greatly enlarged photographs of the destruction these great daylight precision raids accomplished.
